IS THE TIME TO SELL

Robinson's Patent Barley!

It is an equally efficient food for infants and invalids, and you can recommend it without hesitation. Stock "Patent Barley"—it's right in your line, and there's no reason the drug-store man should have the monopoly of this quick-moving product. Remember the name—Robinson's.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

THE OLD WAY OR THE NEW WHICH ?

In the old days your fathers and grandfathers had their merchandise hauled with ox carts. They weighed their goods with the old steelyards. They kept their accounts on a slate.

Later the horse was substituted for the ox, the spring balanced scale for the steelyards, the day book and ledger for a slate.

To-day many merchants are using the automobile.

The automatic computing scale has displaced the spring balance.

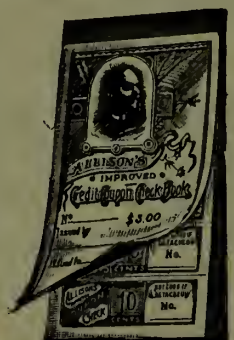
Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK



A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

W. P. DOWNEY

MAKER - - MONTREAL

IF ANYTHING HAS MERIT—

IT SURELY GAINS. Since 1892, one hundred and forty different firms have been in the tea business. Every few months one of them would decide to put a package tea on the market that would be "as good as 'SALADA' and sell for less." They would order a couple of hundred thousand labels, a packing machine, some boxes and—the tea. Their travellers called on you and every other grocer in town. They told you of the wonderful quality of their tea—how it was going to be advertised—the demand that was sure to come. You got a "confidental" price. You bought a case. What happened?

Somehow, the tea didn't sell. The advertising stopped—if it ever began. The tea lost what flavor it had and deteriorated in quality. The wrappers faded and got dirty. Every time you looked at it you got mad. And the curious thing about it all was this: While the "just as good" kind remained on your shelves, you sold pound after pound of "SALADA" without trouble of any kind.

For eighteen years "SALADA" has been unequalled for goodness, freshness and fine flavor.

For eighteen years "SALADA" has been Canada's premier package tea—the only tea that can be absolutely relied upon year in and year out.

It is tea at its best.

The New Era in the Grocery Trade

The Vending of Foods will soon be recognized as a Profession, with no room for the Slovenly or the Unskilled.

THE grocery trade is overcrowded with men with a grouch—and why? Fierce competition, small profits, long hours, department stores, bad debts, and — well, that is enough. And yet in no business on earth are there greater opportunities for success, in no calling is there more room at the top, boundless, limitless room on top. You at the bottom are incredulous, pessimistic, and withal, you have a grouch.

Let me tell you this, the day of the doctor is passing. Medicines, drugs and nostrums are fast being discarded for pure foods. The cut-rate drug store, trying to force the sale of "dope" at bargain prices, is evidence of a revolution, slow and subtle, but sure. Now has dawned the day of scientific diet, of health-giving foods, and, above all, of cleanliness.

With the shifting of scenery, exit the doctor, enter the food expert. Health will be sought at the store where clean, wholesome foods are sold, not at the drug store. Some day in the future—the near future—the vending of foods will be recognized as a profession. In the profession there will be no room for the slovenly, the unskilled, the charlatan. Keenness of palate and eye, backed up by the knowledge and practice of a thousand, or more, technical details, will be indispensable qualifications to the man who is to replace the grocer of old. He will be an expert in the art of ventilation, and the natural preservation of perishable food stuffs. As in the other professions, much will depend upon his personality—the foods which we eat must be above any suspicion of contamination from personal uncleanliness of those who sell and handle them. The shop, the counter, the scales, will all be kept as clean as the operating room and the instruments in an hospital. Even a pound of lard is a thing of beauty when it is fresh, and sweet, and clean. The day is already past when fish and tea, coal oil and butter, are delivered to the consumer in the same old soap box.

A generation back, all this scrupulous care, this skilled cleanliness, this niceness, would have been regarded as insane fastidiousness. To-day the majority of people demand it, and demanding it, or not, it is a very exceptional person that does not appreciate it, consciously or otherwise. And the reason for it all is that we are getting to realise that the deadly germs of disease lurk in foods which are not fresh, and handled and kept under conditions of absolute cleanliness. We are learning, too, that the chemical preservative is only the choice of two evils, its entry into the human system, working harm second only to the germs of disease themselves.

Room on top? The room is all on top—the bottom is crowded to overflowing. If not ten per cent. of retail grocers succeed there is a reason for it, and the reason is that the profits are at the top, the losses at the bottom.

Yes, Sanitation, Cleanliness, Purity, and Freedom from Contamination will uplift the business to the level of the professions, will defy competition, enhance profits, raise the grocer from an ill-paid life of drudgery to one of congenialty and affluence.

Careful Attention Paid to Interior Arrangement

Crow's Nest Trading Co., of Fernie, B. C., Consider Cleanliness and Attractiveness—Have Modern Fixtures in Quarter-Cut Oak—A Neat Fruit Display—Sell Strictly for Cash.

Fernie, B.C., January 3.—That especial care should be exercised in the arrangement of the store interior is the contention of the Crow's Nest Trading Co., of Fernie. This may be observed from the cut shown herewith. It illustrates the value placed upon neatness and attractiveness and on the comfort of the customers.

The Crow's Nest Trading Co.'s store is made up of many departments including groceries, crockery and chinaware, dry goods, men's furnishings, boots and shoes, and furniture.

The cut shows an attractive fruit layout built on a slant so that every box can be easily seen. The bin and shelf fixtures are of the modern variety displaying the goods to the best advantage. Showcases are used for confectionery and, as well as the counters are kept scrupulously clean. Chairs are provided for customers and this consideration is much appreciated by them.

The company does a large business. It has a staff of 24 salesmen, and has seven horses for delivery purposes. The present building is the outcome of a fire in August, 1908 when the store, warehouse and stables were completely destroyed.

The construction was begun on October 1st, 1908, and the store was opened for business December 4th of the same year. It cost $25,000 and the rapid erection is considered a building record in the west.

The fixtures are all quarter-cut oak. The store is 60x114 feet in dimensions and is built of stone and brick. The ground floor is utilized by the grocery, dry-goods, men's furnishings, and boot and shoe departments, and the second storey by the furniture, millinery, and dressmaking parlors. The basement, which is the size of the whole building in length and breadth, is used for storage purposes.

The business which was established four and a half years ago is conducted on a strictly cash basis.

MAIL-ORDER PRICE HIGHER.

A rather amusing story is told on a man who went into a hardware store and wished to purchase an axe. Being shown the article and informed that the price was $1.15, he said: "Why, I can get that same kind of an axe from a mail-order house for 90 cents." "Very well," said the hardware man, "I will give it to you for the same price provided that you will do the same with me as you would with them." "All right," said the customer, as he handed over a dollar bill, the merchant giving him back ten cents in change. "Now," said the hardware man, "I want 25 cents more to pay express charges," which the purchaser gave him. "How much did your axe cost you?" "One dollar and fifteen cents," the man answered. "Very good; now give me the five cents more for money-order fees and postage," which the purchaser had to hand over. "Now, how much did your axe cost you?" One dollar and twenty cents," said the customer. "Not so cheap after all," said the merchant, whereupon he picked up the axe, tossed it back on the shelf and told the customer to call for it in ten days, as that would be as soon as he could get it if he had ordered it from the mail-order house.

The Planning of a Modern Retail Grocery Store

Winnipeg Grocer Has His Architect Prepare Plans Before He Begins to Build—All Dimensions and Nature of Fixtures Worked Out Beforehand—Has Plenty of Floor Space, Shelf Room and Light.

Winnipeg, Jan. 4. — The store plan shown herewith is that of a new store in Winnipeg opened on December 1st by H. E. Weldon.

At first sight it would seem that the store is too long and narrow and that there would be a decided deficiency of light. This, however, is not the case. The manner in which the proprietor has overcome the possibilities of cramped floor space and darkness is deserving of credit. In the first place the store is not as narrow as it may seem. It is twenty feet wide despite the fact that it is ninety feet long. It is the great length that gives it the appearance of narrowness. However in designing the interior every inch of space was utilized to the best advantage.

On each side of the store spacious shelves reach from the floor to the ceiling upon which packages and cases of considerable size can be stored. On the counter side convenient bin fixtures are installed which open from the top. They are large enough to contain the major part of the goods in stock which can be put into the bins. These sensible shelves and bins make it unnecessary to store goods on the floor, which would seriously obstruct the passage. What goods are unavoidably piled on the floor, are arranged systematically which serves a double purpose of leaving space and inviting the attention of the customer.

This feature has been made a dominant one from the moment the store first opened for business. Attractiveness was one of the first requisites in the mind of the man who contemplated opening the store more than a year ago. The interior is all trimmed in white. This is always clean looking and is a bright idea for a grocery store. On the street the whole store shows up well through the window. The white shelves, the white ceiling and walls and the white coats of the salesmen certainly invite the customer.

The windows are wide enough to permit displays and the whole front, corner and ten feet of the side is of glass from window rest to ceiling. The entrance is convenient and just about six inches above the pavement.

The store is built on the corner of a block, 100x90 feet, so that the length could not be changed; and it was not necessary to change it as is proven by the interior plan designed by Mr. Weldon.

It will be noticed that the rear of the store is spacious and that the delivery yard is large and convenient. The basement is exactly the same size as the store and it has a high ceiling which is almost perfect in cleanliness. Stocks are run into the basement from an opening in the Edmonton Street sidewalk. Mr. Weldon was for some time a bookkeeper for his brother, F. E. Weldon, who for seventeen years conducted a grocery business on Portage Avenue, a few blocks from the new store. Formerly the brothers were partners in a grocery store in St. John, N.B.

Herbert B. Rugh, architect, Union Bank Building, Winnipeg, drew up the plans of the Weldon store.

THE FIXED PRICE QUESTION.

New York Journal of Commerce.

Every time limited prices, free deals and the quantity price have come up before meetings of the Retail Grocers' Association, which, by the way, are the only grocery associations which have wrested with the questions as organizations, it has called for the most spirited discussion, bordering very close to the acrimonious at times.

Only a few days ago at a meeting of the Brooklyn association the matter was brought up in the shape of communications from a manufacturing concern. There the old accusation of the retail grocer having been used to introduce a line of goods at a quantity price and later being told that in the future he would be compelled to pay the full wholesale price and buy only through the jobber was made. As the result of the discussion the matter was tabled.

Summing up the whole situation, so far as the retailer is concerned, it looks as though the problem is one largely of local and individual conditions. One may argue from early dawn to long after dusk to a big consumer that the quantity price is pernicious, in that it tends to give the big fellow an advantage, but all the talk will not convince the large buyer that he is not entitled to better figures than the smaller one. Take it in New York for instance, where the only salvation of the small grocer to meet the competition of the chain and department stores is through buying exchanges. It is impossible to convince these merchants that they are not entitled to compete through the medium of large purchases, jointly made through their exchanges.

"The best way to settle all these differences is to leave it to each individual be he manufacturer, jobber or retailer," is how one well posted on conditions put it to the writer. "No one man can tell the other fellow how he should conduct his business, for each knows his own affairs to the inner workings of the business of every merchant, jobber or manufacturer.

"There is no philanthropy in business and it will be hard to convince me that every man with either a buying or a selling policy is not working for his own interests.

"Take the manufacturer who is marketing his product with a free deal attached; he is not giving away his product just to show his friendship to the purchaser, but because he figures it out that this is the profitable way, according to his notion, to make the most money in the long run. It is about the same with the 'quantity price' man; he gets around the 'free deal' scheme, of which he is often the most decided opponent, by selling much of his goods at a lower figure than he will a small lot. His argument is that his fixed charges on handling a large sale are no greater than on a small one—and outside of being able to collect his bill and making his profit he is not particularly interested in the troubles of the purchaser. The one who favors the limited price plan figures that the greatest distribution is through the small handlers."

Wholesale Grocer Blamed for the Huckster Trade

"Equity" Claims that the Retailer is not Getting Proper Consideration and Suggests Remedy — Thinks Other Wholesalers are Not so Bad as the Wholesale Grocers — The Latter, He Says, Sell Indiscriminately.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Ages ago an observant man declared that there was "no evil under the sun." It may be that, had we been his contemporaries, the keenness of sight of the man would have constrained us to admiration, as it had been that of a discoverer; but the number of the evil's progeny has become so prodigious, their choice of an abiding-place has been so persistent, that to-day it is the man able to ward off a few of them to whom admiration is due. Of course, many of these are optional—not all are legitimate possessions. "A choice of evi's" is an expression that jumps to the tongue like a proverb.

Exterior View of the New Grocery Sto re of H. E. Weldon, Winnipeg, Man.

Among the possessions of this sort that appertain to the business man is one that has been granted especially to the retail grocer. But he finds no joy in its possession, for it is destructive to his business. This is the evil of the peddling huxter.

The plain, unadorned huckster is not altogether a boon to the retail grocer, but the huckster that peddles accumulations is an enemy. Occasionally, in the capacity of plain huckster he is found in the city marketplace, but his especial delectation is the peddling of his wares from house to house, for in this there is profit. If he is protected by the peddler's license he fights in the open, but in default of this protection he fights secretly in the shadow of his ability to evade the law in regard to the license. His plan of campaign is as thorough as it is ubiquitous. He supplies the merchant's town customers with butter, eggs, poultry, and what garden produce the grocer may sell; the country customers he supplies with anything to be found in the stock of the wholesale grocer, for the wholesale grocer sells to the huxter.

While he is collecting produce from the farmer to peddle amongst the townspeople, this "huckster" solicits orders, supplies the goods at wholesale prices, and charges usually 10c per parcel for delivery—more whenever possible. To the wholesale price of a bag of sugar he adds 10c, to a pail of lard 10c, to a box of prunes 10c, and so on. On several such articles he may decrease or increase his commission as circumstances warrant, always taking thought, however, to undersell the retail grocer.

Not Much Profit on Sugar.

A few weeks ago a farmer came into the store and inquired the price at which we could sell him a bag of Imperial granulated sugar. At the time this sugar was quoted at $4.55 wholesale. We asked him $4.80, deluded into the fancy that our generosity would break up the springs of his heart. It did, but generosity was drowned in the flood.

"I can do fifteen cents better than that," said the farmer, "Mr. ——, the huckster will fetch it to me from Toronto for $4.65—four dollars and sixty-five cents at my own door!"

The wholesalers asked us $4.55 per bag; freight and cartage cost, per bag, 18c; total cost, $4.73. At the price we asked there would actually accrue to us a profit of seven cents. Were we handling sugar in trainloads this would pay—certainly. But retailing an occasional bag, the deal would not pay for a plug of tobacco at the opposition store.

It makes the long-suffering merchant muse upon the possibility of finding an article in the trade that he can sell; it seems to him as if his existing stock were a permanent institution—come to stay, in fact—while the pasersby idly wonder if the proprietor has arrogated the office of the tobacco dummy; for many have wedged in this stock also in a wild attempt to stave the inevitable hour.

It is this trucking between the wholesale house and the farmer (or another) that crowns the peddling huckster past-master of offence! and the fault, the injustice of the retail merchant, lies with the wholesale grocer. Moreover, the wholesaler sells not only to peddling hucksters, but to hotels, restaurants, and private individuals. It is a fact that some have sent travelers amongst the farmers.

We have had a long experience in another line of trade, we have consulted those in still others, and in all these we find the wholesaler abiding by the ethics of his business, to sell to the legitimate retailer in the business only. But the wholesale grocer would apear to have framed a motto that reads, "First come, first served: all look alike to me."

Naturally, in such a case, we look wistfully for a remedy. A man has his choice of businesses—whether of evils or no—and having decided upon one he feels that it should make his existence in this fair world a possibility, providing he himself is competent. If the retail grocers of this province would combine to form a stock company, subscribing to shares of, say $100 per share, they could control their own wholesale trade, and the chief part of this particular evil would disappear, making existence for the merchant partake less of the nature of a continuous problem in the higher mathematics.

Many merchants have ideas about this matter—let me add 'feelings'—and many would be pleased to hear what the Retail Merchants' Association may say on the subject. If you should feel, Mr. Editor, that the discussion of this question and its remedy be desirable you find a place in your journal for this letter.

"EQUITY."

Pickering, Ont., Jan. 3, 1910.

COMMITTEES ARE READY.

Drummers' Snack Club Prepare Early for the Big 1910 Event at Oakville.

Toronto, January 4.—The Drummers' Snack Club got away to a good start with their annual mid-summer outing when they appointed committees and made the preliminary arrangements on the occasion of their dinner a short time ago.

The receipts from the last outing amounted to $704.97 and the disbursements $471.98 leaving a balance of $232.99.

This year's big event will be held at Oakville, although there were some warm discussions before it was decided upon. Erin, Georgetown and Acton were competitors but Oakville won out in the end. The dates will be July 29 and 30.

The following were the committees decided upon to attend to arrangements:

Refreshment Committee — Michael Matthews, Chairman; Geo. Campbell, M. P. Malone, W. H. Cross, R. E. Smith, Chas. Smith.

Collection of Prizes—Walter Madill, Chairman; Bert Groskurth, Chas. Silver, J. H. Wildfong, R. Smith, M. P. Malone, C. Wilson, Bay Hill.

Games—Thos. Gloster, chairman; J. H. Wildfong, John Charles, C. C. Smye, W. J. Dore.

Advertising—Robt. Algie, Robt. Asher, Dr. Algie.

Transportation—W. Reilly, W. Meen, "Pop" Somerville.

Music: Hamilton—H. Eckstein, Col. Stoneman, Geo. Smye, Chas. Smye, W. Pringle. Toronto—Will J. White, E. Bowles, W. Reilly, Sol Walters, John Charles.

Robt. Asher was again given charge of the issuing of the programmes.

C. H. Lee, manager of the Canada Spice & Grocery Co., London, Ont., entertained the travelers and office staff to a luncheon before the close of the year.

THE SALESMEN BANQUETED.

Toronto, January 3.—Following the annual conference of the Canadian and United States heads of Holbrooks Limited with their salesmen on the American continent, an enjoyable banquet—the third annual—was held on Thursday evening, December 30th, at McConkey's restaurant. Some thirty were in attendance from various parts of the continent, the total distance traveled in getting to Toronto being estimated at 10,000 miles. The banquet tables were attractively decorated and the menu one that would have graced any banquet hall.

H. Gilbert Nobbs, manager in Canada and in the United States, introduced the various toasts and speakers and in the course of his remarks during the evening gave some splendid advice to the salesmen on the co-operation with and loyalty to the firm with which they were connected. "The King" was as usual on such occasions loyally honored. "The Firm" was proposed by N. C. McLean and J. V. Serivener and responded to by Mr. Nobbs. W. N. Bowman, assistant manager in Canada and in the United States, proposed "The Trade Press" which was replied to by the editor of The Canadian Grocer. "Our Agents and Distributors" was heartily toasted on being proposed by the manager. H. H. Simpson, of New York State, replied with some well thought out points on the qualifications of a good salesman.

The entertainers were not a few. Among the vocalists present were J. V. Scrivener, Fred Lewis and C. E. Norris, while in the ranks of elocution, S. T. Morgan and J. G. Nobbs stand among the first. Wm. Middleman, New York city, told some funny stories and short addresses were given by a number of others present. The midnight hour had struck before the merry company dispersed and needless to say all greatly enjoyed the few pleasant hours.

BELIEVERS IN CALENDARS.

Cornwall Merchants Consider that their Advertising Value Warrants Their Circulation.

Editor Canadian Grocer—In the issue of The Canadian Grocer of the 17th inst., we noticed an article on calendar giving, in which was stated that most of the Chatham grocers had dispensed with calendar giving. As we believe that attractive calendars hanging in the homes of our customers is one of the best methods of advertising, we feel that we will always give calendars.

In regard to distributing them to our customers, we deliver one to each customer, about one week before Christmas and make it our business to see that each customer gets one. Not one is given to any child in the store. This has been our practice every year and we have no trouble whatever with children clamoring for them. If children do ask for them, they are told, that if their mother is a customer she has or will get one.

CALENDARS for 1910.

Connors Bros., Black's Harbor, N.B., are sending to the trade an attractive and useful calendar this year, as usual. The illustration is entitled, "Here he Comes," and represents a family eagerly watching from the window for the home-coming of the husband and father.

"Always in the Lead," is the catch line on the artistic 1910 calendar issued by the Royal Polishes Co., Montreal.

Many Grocers in the Municipal Ranks for 1910

Results of Elections Show That Several Business Men are Chosen to Assist in Public Affairs in Their Respective Municipalities — Additional Prestige as a Merchant is Secured.

The municipal elections are over once again in a great many places, and it is gratifying to note that grocers and general merchants, as well as many other business men, have been selected to guide the destinies of villages, towns and cities in Canada during 1910. The men who pay the bulk of the taxes are usually the merchants, and it is up to merchants to see that they are represented by careful business councillors.

In the past a great many used to think that only professional men had the ability to conduct the affairs of a town or city, but this impression has died away. It is the men who have the business experience who know how to conduct business for a municipality, and this is the class required.

Some Grocers Elected.

In London, Ont., R. C. Eckert, of the Gorman, Eckert Co., spice manufacturers, and A. J. Morgan, seed merchant, have been elected as aldermen.

Walter Fairbarn, egg merchant, is one of the councillors in Orangeville, Ont.

The reeve of Deseronto, Ont., for the coming year is James Dryden, grocer and flour dealer. Two grocers were elected to the council, viz., Thos. J. Naylor and Jos. R. Stainton, while Jas. Sexsmith, grocer, is one of the school trustees.

Ald. John Forth, Hamilton, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, was again elected to sit in the council for 1910. Mayor John I. McLaren, grocery broker, who was elected last year, had no opposition.

In Chatham, Jno. McCorvie and Wm. Anderson, two grocers, were reelected as aldermen, and in Kingston, Mayor Dan. Couper, grocer, elected last year receives another term by acclamation.

In Lindsay, Ont., the mayor for 1910 is J. B. Begg, soda water manufacturer. A. C. Babcock, grocer, Amos Hawkins, grocer, and M. J. Lewis, butter manufacturer, have been elected to the council.

A. S. Kimmerly, grocer, has been elected to the council of 1910, in Napanee, Ont.

W. A. Sherwood, grocer and George E. Jones, merchant, have been chosen as aldermen in St. Catherines, Ont.

In addition to the assistance business men can give to carrying on the business of a municipality, there is a certain amount of advertising value attached to the office, especially when no faults can be found with the merchant who offers himself as a candidate.

THE OLDEST OF THEM ALL.

The accompanying illustration shows a store now occupied by Dyer & Son, general merchants, Sutton, Que. The history of this family as grocers dates back to 1834, when a store was opened by the late George C. Dyer, about one half mile south of the present town of Sutton.

In this was opened, in 1848, the Sutton post office. Mr. Dyer held the office of postmaster up to the date of his death in 1890. During this period he was very prominent in all town matters, and acquired the familiar nickname of "Colonel" Dyer among his associates.

His only son, Eugene, in 1858, and his grandson, Leon E. Dyer in 1878 became connected with the business. The latter is now sole owner. The business, therefor, has been owned and managed by one family for three generations, covering a period of 75 years.

In 1834 the store shown in the illustration was built by Elijah Kemp, who carried on business in it for 40 years, when he sold to the present owners.

Store of Dyer & Son, Sutton, Que., Which Was Built 75 Years Ago.

Dyer & Son lengthened the store, moved their stock and the Post Office into it. The old store is now in disuse, and stands on Eugene Dyer's farm. For besides being storekeepers, the Dyer family have kept up the farm as an adjunct, and a home.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

White & Co., cor. Front and Church Sts., Toronto, since their fire, Dec. 11, have lost no time in getting their building into shape again. A large staff of workmen have been rushing the work along so that they expect to be back at the old stand in two weeks time. The ground floor has been remodeled and fitted up conveniently for the different departments. They also intend to raise the building another storey. This latter improvement, however, will not be made till warmer weather arrives. Business is being conducted at their other warehouse, 18, 20 and 22 Church Street, without interruption.

TRADE NOTES.

F. L. Wagner, Aylmer, Ont., has sold his grocery business to Mr. Filby, of Woodstock, Ont.

F. R. Pursell, general merchant, Simcoe, Ont., has assigned and the stock will be sold by auction.

J. A. McCrea & Son, Guelph, Ont., have purchased the retail meat business of J. & A. McHardy, of that city.

F. G. Evans, grocery broker, Vancouver, B.C., is in the east on a business trip extending over some two or three weeks.

W. Roberts, the Maritime province representative of the N. K. Fairbanks Co., Chicago, is being transferred to Vancouver, B.C.

Aylmer, Ont., is to have a general delivery system somewhat similar to the one in Simcoe. It is due to take effect on Monday, Jan. 10th.

F. F. Adams, a bright Cardinal grocer, who is always on the lookout for new ideas, paid a visit to the Montreal office of The Grocer this week.

N. S. Hannah, Winnipeg, representative of the N. K. Fairbanks Co., was in Toronto during the week, and called at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer.

Mr. Ashworth, Toronto representative of the N. K. Fairbanks Co., was in Montreal last week, attending a meeting of the Canadian representatives of that company.

J. Howard Simpson, of the Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, Ont., was presented with a gold headed cane by the traveling, office and warehouse staffs on Christmas eve.

Henry Taylor, manager of the Belleville Fruit & Vinegar Co., Belleville, Ont., was in Toronto on Monday, on a business trip. Mr. Taylor is a retail grocer in that town.

Fred. J. Whitlow, late with Tetley's Tea, starts out on the road next Monday for the Belleville Fruit & Vinegar Co. His territory lies in Western Ontario and along the North Shore.

Gilbert Bros., of Rothesay, King's County, New Brunswick, have sold their wholesale and retail grocery business to J. Renwick Robertson, postmaster at Rothesay, and he has taken possession.

J. C. Horner, a representative of the "Salada" Tea Co. has returned to Toronto from a business trip in British Columbia. He is enthusiastic over conditions existing in the west and predicts a great future for that section of the Dominion.

There is a great deal more liklihood of the amalgamation of independent Canadian canners than there was a month ago. One jobber states that he is almost sure that an amalgamation will be effected but could not say anything about the nature of it.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Loss by Shrinkage in Dried Fruits—Window Sells Barrels of Candy — Bracebridge Merchant Replaces Counter With Silent Salesmen — New Advertising Scheme Originated by Chilliwack Grocer—Early Delivery Endorsed.

Adds Cent For Shrinkage.

Victoria, B.C., January 3.—Evaporated fruits shrink a good deal, and if a grocer expects to be able to sell as many pounds as he buys he is apt to find himself mistaken. The manager of a large grocery store, in discussing this matter the other day, said:

"I always figure that my evaporated fruits cost me one and one-half cents a pound more than they really do. This is a liberal estimate, and probably one cent would be safe. If every grocer added one cent a pound to the cost, calling the increased figure the actual cost he would be safe. There is a shrinkage and there is also overweight, the giving of which can hardly be avoided. If grocers were all in the habit of adding a cent a pound to the cost to provide for shrinkage they would not be so willing to sell prunes costing seven cents for ten cents, for it is practically selling them for what they cost."

Barrels of Candy Sold.

Peterboro, January 4.—The power of window dressing as a medium of reaching the people has undoubtedly been proved to the satisfaction of every grocer who has given proper attention to it and a little example was evidenced during Christmas week by a local grocery. The window dresser essayed to devote it entirely to candy and three barrels of that kind was sold during the week ending with Christmas eve; a box of the same kind was secured to meet the extra demand and finally part of the window display was disposed of. The window design was a good one and could scarcely fail to bring the desired results.

Are Judged by their Faults.

Halifax N.S., January 4.—"The returns in the long run are the returns that count," remarked a local grocer recently. "This fact should inspire the merchant to be diligent and faithful in the multitude of little things which make a store attractive to the buyer.

"Cleanliness is one of these things. It is easy for dirt to accumulate, for flies to die in the show windows and upon the shelves, for packing boxes to be left in the business part of the store after they are emptied, for green goods to wilt. Eternal vigilance is required to ensure uniform cleanliness—but it is uniform cleanliness which counts in the long run.

"There is the matter of deliveries. A haphazard system of delivering goods may work well four days out of the week. It is not, however, by the good days but by the bad days that customers judge the merchant's delivery wagon. They forget the times when the goods are promptly at the door for the simple reason that that is the only manner in which the merchant should deliver them. It is the mistakes the delivery man makes, the failure to land those goods in time for dinner, which the customer cherishes in his memory. That is why the merchant, profiting by each day's experience, should seek to figure out a delivery system which will be as nearly as possible flawless."

A New Advertising Scheme.

Chilliwack, B.C., January 3.—Fred Joudry, of Chilliwack, had a fine big pumpkin in his window during Christmas week, and with every dollar's worth of goods purchased, the buyer was entitled to a guess at the number of seeds in the pumpkin. Those coming nearest were awarded prizes. The scheme attracted considerable attention. The principal feature of this proposition was that any one who brought in a copy of the store's advertisement in the local newspaper were given a guess, without having to purchase any goods. This was a good idea, as it directed atttention to the method of advertising, and once a purchaser's mind is diverted toward a given point it often means a new customer. Many settlers are going into the Chilliwack Valley and something to bring them towards one's store is worth troubling about.

Installs Four Silent Salesmen.

Bracebridge, Ont., January 4.—Hutchison Bros. have improved the interior of their large store by doing away with the one long counter and installing four silent salesmen. This makes more room and adds considerably to the attractiveness of the interior. Another aid is the splendid displaying advantages provided by the silent salesmen.

Endorse the Early Deliveries.

Bracebridge, Ont., January 4.—The agreement entered into among the grocers of this town, stopping the late Saturday night delivery has ran two months successfully. Not once, only on Christmas eve, has the agreement been broken and all merchants agree that never again will they go back to the old system. They, their salesmen and delivery men are highly pleased with the working out of the innovation and would advise other towns to follow suit.

Policy Among Merchants.

Peterboro, January 4.—In his address following his nomination as a mayoralty candidate, E. F. Mason, grocer, made a statement in regard to the stand a merchant should take on the local option question. He says that it is generally conceded by business men that the safe policy is to steer clear of these questions on account of the effect their actions may have on business. Many appreciate the difficulty in which the grocer is placed when he is asked his stand on a question which divides the public and Mr. Mason does not think that a merchant should take a stand on such a question.

Business Increase in 1909.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 4.—The retail grocers have not yet taken stock, but the general opinion seems to be that the past year will show an increase over 1908. During the year the grocers seem to have gone into the confectionery business more extensively; many have taken up the handling of oysters in bulk and by the instalation of slicing machines have materially increased their sales in smoked and cooked meats..

BOARD OF TRADE NOMINATIONS.

Montreal, Jan. 5.—George L. Cains has been nominated for president of the Montreal Board of Trade for the coming year. Lt.-Col. Jeffrey Burland was nominated for vice-president ; R. Wilson Reford for 2nd vice-president, and Norman Wright for treasurer. It is expected that all of these gentlemen will be elected by acclamation. The results will not be announced until Jan 25th, when the annual meeting will take place.

EXTENDING THEIR BUSINESS.

Nicholson & Bain, wholesale commission merchants and brokers, Winnipeg, are establishing a branch in Regina, Sask., which they consider an important business centre.

WHEN FIXED PRICES ARE LEGAL.

According to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law of the United States, it is illegal for manufacturers to establish minimum prices if they are induced to do so by any dealer or trade organization. The manufacturer has the right to fix the retail price when he does it on his own accord and for his own protection. The government calls the other method "conspiracy in restraint of trade."

AN UNPARALLELED OUTLOOK.

Towards the close of 1908, the grocery trade was not in a healthy condition in view of the general depression during the preceeding year or more. Thanks to the optimism of the Canadian people, however, and to the splendid crops which prevailed last year, nineteen hundred and ten is looked forward to with more confidence than ever before. Our total wheat production in 1909 was never excelled; government statistics tell of great progress in fruit and vegetable production; they state that from field crops alone there are some $101,000,000 more money to be circulated than from those of the previous year; manufacturers everywhere are extending their factories or building new ones; the wholesale trade tell of advances in business, and general merchants throughout the Dominion are meeting their accounts with much greater precision than they used a year ago. Railway extension policies, the exploration of new mining fields, and the opening up of untilled soil in New Ontario and in the Canadian northwest have occasioned an influx of people from other countries and this, taken into consideration with the bountiful harvest of 1909 and the freer circulation of money, has brought about what could not well be prevented in the face of such conditions—a marked revival in trade in the grocery field.

The consumption of practically every variety of food-stuff has increased. Particularly was this the case in fresh fruits, canned goods of all kinds, sugar, breakfast foods, condensed milk, dairy and hog products. The tendency during the past year has been one to stronger prices, indicating healthy trade conditions.

Probably the most noticeable advances during the year were in bacon, pork and other hog products. Bacon has advanced four or five cents per pound during the year. Lard has also gone gone up some four or five cents. The causes for this have been the raising of less hogs in Canada on account of high grain prices and the increase in consumption, both at home and abroad. Top prices are now being paid for raw material and these are allowing but little profit to the packer.

The opening of mining camps, and construction work in recently explored sections have been responsible for the advances made in the consumption of canned goods, condensed milk, breakfast foods, etc. Sugar is some thirty cents per hundred dearer than at the beginning of last year, due to increased consumption.

The outlook for trade in 1910 never was brighter. The coming year will be the one in which manufacturers that are aggressive in their manufacturing, selling and advertising policies, will become outstanding figures in their particular fields. On the contrary those which neglect to snatch the opportunities which are bound to come will lose prestige that will take months and years of hard work to regain. At any rate, that is the impression of men who are closely in touch with the trend of conditions. They believe 1910 to be a year of possibilities that have never before been presented.

AN ESSENTIAL TO SALESMANSHIP.

One of the essentials to successful salesmanship is knowledge of the goods the salesman is selling. If he does not know them, he cannot talk intelligently about them.

Those possessed of "the gift of the gab" and little knowledge may be able to sell some goods, just because there are some people who can be fooled all the time, but it must be remembered that "all the people cannot be fooled all the time," and the successful salesman builds for to-morrow as well as for to-day.

He who goes on the assemption that, because he can talk well or has a pleasant manner, he can make a successful salesman without being acquainted with the goods he is is selling, is building his house on sand.

Knowledge that is worth while is not easily obtained. He who seeks it must dig deep and hard for it. Dig into the trade papers and other forms of literature from which information can be obtained. Study methods of manufacture or character of growth.

The more valuable the knowledge, the more difficult is it of attainment. But the reward is worth the effort.

BENEFITS OF ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The principle of holding annual conferences and banquets in order to discuss the successes and shortcomings of the previous year, and to make plans for the future, is rapidly meeting with more and more favor among the trade. During the past couple of weeks the J. R. Heinz Co., the F. F. Dalley Co., and Holbrooks, Limited, have been among the manufacturers who have held year-end conventions and banquets.

These serve a dual purpose. The salesmen and heads of the firm become better acquainted with one another and all are given a stimulus to do better work than in the preceeding year. They are, therefore, to be commended.

Why cannot retail grocery firms pursue similar methods to advantage? We find that when a manufacturing firm once begins these events, they are made annual affairs. It sees that they are profitable. The fact that they are always sure to create a better feeling between salesmen and the heads of the firm, is probably the best justification of their propriety.

The more the retailer shows his salesmen that he is interested in their success and wants their co-operation, the better will their work be in the future. Have them make and discuss suggestions for improvements in the buying, selling, displaying and advertising and watch their interest in the business grow.

GET THE CORRECT MEASURE.

The Interstate Grocer, of St. Louis. Mo., is continually urging retail merchants to weigh, count. measure and gauge everything they buy, and often quoted instances where goods have been shy.

A grocer, for instance, recently bought a barrel of syrup, which was marked 56 gallons, but contained, on being measured, only 52½ gallons. He paid 31c a gallon, which shows that he would have lost $1.08½ if he had not measured the syrup.

Whether this precaution is taken by Canadian grocers or not, it is certainly good advice to follow in the purchasing of all goods. With the small profits on many of them, accuracy in business is necessary.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firmer.
Evaporated Apples—¼ to ½ cent lower.

Canned Fruits and Vegetables—Firm.

Montreal, Jan. 6, 1910.

The first few days of January 1910 have certainly made an impressive showing. Trade in all lines seems to be beyond that of last year during the same period. Of course it is early to prophesy as to whether it will be continuous, but from all present indications 1910 should be a banner year for grocers. Everyone seems to have plenty of money, and what is more, spends it on high priced and profitable goods. Seldom has there been such a rush for Christmas luxuries as during the past three weeks. Articles which in 1908 were too expensive to be stocked were sold in large quantities during the holiday season of 1909. It hardly seems likely that such demands can be be continued for long, but so far there has been a remarkable vitality to such trade.

Sugar refiners are now predicting that the large crops reported in most sections will be absorbed by present demands without materially weakening quotations.

There is a firm feeling through most of the markets, the few exceptions to this being some of the food staples, such as rice. Taken all through, there has seldom been such a promising start for a grocer's New Year.

SUGAR—It is thought by the refiners that demand for granulated is now so large that the immense Cuban crop reported this year, 1,800,000 tons, will be absorbed without weakening the market. In support of this they point out that last year's crop, also a large one, was taken up at an actually increasing price. Raw prices are slightly firmer and higher.

TORONTO. — Canned goods are in good demand. Buying may be a little speculative in view of the contemplated canners amalgamation. One dealer made the remark that if he had the capital he would invest largely in canned goods ust now, especially tomatoes, whether, the amalgamation takes place or not, the chances are that canned goods will not be lower, but are likely to be firm and higher.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firmer.
Evaporated Apples—Declining.
Dried Fruits—Market Advancing.
Canned Vegetables—Prices Strong.

Toronto, Jan. 6, 1910.

The fact that orders come in freely immediately after the holidays, shows that the retailers have had a good holiday trade, and that their stocks are sold out, and require replenishing. The wholesale men are delighted and are wearing the smile that means more than what they say. They are all through stock taking, and the bookkeepers are busy in putting things in order.

"Let them talk about the retailers, but let me tell you," remarked a wholesale man, "there are some excellent characters in the retail grocery business. One man, who allowed his account to run past due, returned his statement, and asked to have the proper interest added, for which he promptly sent his cheque in full. Yes, the business men are finding out that square dealing is necessary to success in business."

The trade is in a healthy condition, and the prices of almost everything are looking up. Retailers are careful in buying and are doing a safer business. What they want is to cultivate a feeling of fairness between themselves and secure a fair living profit on what they sell.

SUGAR—The sugar market is somewhat excited, though the advance of 10 points in New York and also from the strong feeling in Europe. This advance however, is not seriously regarded here, as it is considered to be purely speculative, and our prices therefore have not responded to the stir in New York, and remain unchanged.

Winnipeg, January 6, 1910.

Wholesale houses are buying freely just now. They have found themselves short of goods during the vacation week and the demand has kept up so actively that a continued heavy trade is expected during the first month of the year when as a rule it is considerably quiet.

The landing of all kinds of nuts on the heretofore scarce market is a feature in the present situation. The shelled and unshelled products have come in freely and although orders have not yet revived they will do so at an early date. Stocks in dried fruits have become equalized and there is not the apparent shortage that there was a few weeks ago. Seeded raisins are, however, firm and

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Vancouver, Jan. 6.—The year has closed with every grocer speaking of a bigger business than ever, and of the surprise that attended the Christmas buying. "It seemed as if many had money that they did not know what to do with," one grocer remarked, "and the buying was not confined to any particular line. There was a fine call for goods of the Christmas variety, and besides specials, the staples for cooking, confectionery, etc., were ordered largely.

Last week there was hardly a fig to be obtained in the city, and the odd part of it is the priee has not gone up. Smyrnas were all used up early in the week, and while one or two dealers were fortunate to find a few boxes in Victoria, many had to go without, local dealers having none, and wholesalers in the captal city also being run out. There was a large demand for figs, which is the only way of accounting for the present shortage, for shipments were as usual.

General market prices continue steady and firm. Early June peas in can have increased in price from $1.20 to $1.30 and some dealers go so far as to quote $1.35, though the standard figure is $1.30.

THE DEATH OF CHARLES CREED.

Familiar Figure at Maritime Board of Trade Meetings Passes Beyond the Great Divide.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 5.—On the evening of the first day of the New Year, Charles M. Creed, a notable figure in commercial life of the Maritime Provinces, passed away at his home in Halifax. At the advanced age of 78 years, no one who knew Mr. Creed, would have thought of death. He was rosy and happy and active, and was generally thought to be likely to live for some years. He came from the Island of Newfoundland and inherited an iron constitution. He frequently told of his ancestors having lived to be very old. It was on the Island that he received his sound commercial training in the ship brokerage line. Few men could surpass him in neatness and accuracy of figuring, writing and bookkeeping, in his early days, and even up to the last his work was a marvel of correctness. For several years his chief occupation was secretary of the Maritime Board of Trade, in short he was the Maritime Board—it was generally conceded. He was for many years secretary of the Halifax Board of Trade and was gifted with the ability to organize thoroughly and well as has been proven by the success of that body. Charles Creed was well liked by all who had anything to do with him. He supplied no end of amusement frequently at the Maritime Board meetings by his assertions of youthfulness and his declaration that he would run a hundred yards with any man and so on. He always tabooed the typewriter, and would sit far into the night to write in his immaculate tiny handwriting, as plain as print, his voluminous correspondence at times for his secretaryships. He was a familiar figure on the streets of Halifax and was known about the rotunda of the Halifax hotel by most men about town and in fact by large numbers from all over the provinces.

THE LATE CHAS. M. CREED,

Whose Death Occurred in Halifax on New Year's Day.

Personally he was a warm friend, and possessed sterling qualities which won for him respect socially and otherwise. He had a large family, some of whom are living in the provinces, one daughter residing in New York City.

The Maritime Board lost one of its staunchest members last year in the person of the late M. G. deWolfe, and the late Mr. Creed in reading his resolution of condolence at the board meeting last August, wept copiously, feeling that as he said the board would never be quite the same. It is curious that he should so soon require the same sad resolution to be made for himself. They had always been close friends of one another and naturally the separation caused Mr. Creed many regrets.

This paper offers sincerest sympathy and condolence to the family in their bereavement.

TO BUILD LARGE PLANT.

Coldyke Baking Powder Co. Looking for Another Site—Industry of the Japanese.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 4.—The plant of the New England Fish Co., at Ketchikan, southeastern Alaska, has started operations, and the first frozen fish to arrive from there passed through Vancouver last week. This company has operated from Vancouver, the halibut boats bringing their catches here, but a large cold storage plant has been established in Ketchikan. When the G.T.P. is completed, it is probable that the fish will be run to eastern markets over that route.

Up to the present, it is the Chinese who have been in the majority in the market gardening both on the lower mainland and on Vancouver Island, but now the Japanese are getting into the business. If there is a chance at all in any line, at which a profit may be made or is being made by someone else, the Japs are always sure to be in it sooner or later. They are not remarkable for initiative, but are great on emulation. A Japanese syndicate has purchased the McHouse ranch of 160 acres, not far from Nanaimo, and intend to grow fruit and vegetables, particularly for the markets in their own country, with which they will have business connections.

The Coldyke Baking Powder Co., of Portland, Ore., and Winnipeg, plan the erection of a plant in New Westminster, B.C., to cost $60,000. Mr. Nordyke, president of the company, and C. H. Hubble, secretary, were here a few days ago in connection with the matter.

Creston, in the Kootenay district is becoming noted for its apples, a weight of 33 ounces in many instances being recorded. A second crop of Bartlett pears is not regarded as a rarity there. W. K. Brown has grown strawberries weighing a quarter of a pound, being three inches in circumference.

How Quality Won the Market

When my travellers first came into Ontario to sell Red Rose Tea the greeting they most often got was: "What; another package tea!" It was natural in a way, too. The field was strongly held by a number of package teas of established reputation. It seemed to be full up. But tea, more almost than any other article, should be sold for quality because of the consumers' lack of expert knowledge. My travellers knew they had the quality and they started in with confidence, enthusiasm and pluck, and with only one selling argument, the quality of the tea.

That was only ten years ago, and there were just three travellers. To-day I have eleven travellers in Ontario and Red Rose is acknowledged to be a leader in the package tea business, not alone in Ontario but in the Dominion. Year by year the sales of Red Rose have increased enormously. The year just closed was the largest in the history of the business, and it wound up with a month that beat all records.

The one main reason for this progress is the quality of the tea. Advertising has helped; able travellers, deserving of the confidence of the trade, have helped; but I have never doubted that in building up a business and making it permanent, quality is more than advertising and more than salesmanship. It is this quality that has created faith in Red Rose. It is this quality that enables you to have the same confidence in Red Rose I have. Because of this quality it will pay you to recommend

The Grocer's Encyclopaedia From Week to Week

The Manufaeture of Scrapple, a Dish Known to Few in This Country—Made From Some of the Internal Organs of the Hog Mixed with Cornmeal and Wheat Flour, Ete.—Originated in Pennsylvania.

SCRAPPLE.—Some persons eat and pretend to enjoy that edible eontrivanee known as scrapple. New York is said to have acquired a taste for it, and because of its inereasing popularity away from the ehief source of supply, its price has advaneed. It was only a year or two ago that extra fine scrapple was quoted in Philadelphia markets at 6 cents a pound, with eommon to ordinary at 4 eents. This year the price of select serapple is 9 eents, and the run of the pan at 6 eents. There is a world of differenee in serapple. The variety whieh earries the largest proportion of rieh, delieate meat is worth more than the scrapple that is mostly cornmeal and deception. Serapple was invented in Pennsylvania in the Duteh belt. It is one of the by-products of the pig, just the same as sausage and pudding.

In the winter when the pigs are so heavy with white fat that they no longer beeome agitated when feeding time eome, "hog killing" starts.

Now, hams, shoulders, spare-ribs and a few other seetions have their own particular uses, and they are treated as they deserve; some with sugar and smoke and some fried or roasted. There remains the head, heart, liver, kidneys and odds and ends of mueh merit. These are carefully assembled.

Mueh of the fresh meat is placed in a maehine and ground up finer than the finest hamburg steak foundation that ever was. Moderately salted and somewhat peppered, it is then forced into skins, kindly provided by a generous nature, and it becomes sausage.

A roll of seasoned, appetizing meat sizzles in its own fat, the sausage link goes onward, making happy homes and higher civilization.

First Cousin to Pudding.

As for pudding and serapple, they are first cousins. The heart, liver, kidneys, most tender flesh, are boiled in an iron kettle until they are so soft that they are ready to fall apart of their own weight, and the liquid in whieh they have been stewing is concentrated nutriment, covered with oil.

A proportion of the boiled things are chopped up in the same manner that the sausage meat was handled, and this, after being seasoned, is pressed into large skins and this beeomes pudding.

The rest of the boiled meats and interior deeorations of the pig are chopped up, but not quite so fine, and heaved into the pot where the liquor is still stewing. Then comes the addition of eornmeal, of a small pereentage of wheat flour, of some buekwheat flour. Salt to taste, pepper in generosity, and finally when the whole thing boils down thiek and firm it is turned out into pans and you have serapple—Country scrapple.

CHRISTMAS GIFT ON BIRTHDAY.

At the Toronto branch office of T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B., the traveling and office staffs this Christmas united in sending "The Chief," T. H. Estabrooks, a reminder of their eordial regard for him and an expression of their good wishes in the form of a choice piece of ceramie art, "The Fisher Maiden," by Vanstein from the studio of Goldscheider of Vienna and Paris. It represents a girl exquisitely posed fishing in a crystal pool from an overhanging roek. The pool is contained in a shallow glass bowl and a beautiful lighted effect is obtained by an electrie bulb beneath the glass. Three gold fish in the water add a touch of realism, but nothing can excel the naturalness and eagerness of the maid's faee and pose. On aceount of the rush of express business the present arrived in St. John a day or two late for Christmas, but came to hand on Mr. Estabrook's birthday.

The Scarcity of Hogs Advance the Prices Again

More Difficulty for the Packers in Making Profits From Export Trade—Unsalted Butter Being Shipped to New York From Montreal—Storage Eggs Going Out Rapidly — Poultry Prices Lower.

A recent interview with one of the large hog buyers, who calls regularly on the farmers, and who understands their ideas of hog raising advanced some of the reasons why hogs are so scarce and also he gave it as his opinion that the high prices are here to stay for a time. Farmers, who as a rule, he remarked, were well to do, were making money, and were not only looking at matters from the standpoint of which pays the best, but also which is the least work and trouble.

At the present prices of hogs it can be figured out that it pays farmers well to raise hogs, but they claim that they do very well by selling the grain, instead of feeding it to hogs, without having the labor to attend to them. They are also afraid that as soon as more hogs are produced prices will drop. With all the excellent and extensive packing houses and with the enormous increase in the consumption of hog products which has largely been created through the enterprise of the packers, there is no possible danger that hogs will not always pay the farmer a fair profit. These institutions are provided at great expense and are decidedly in the interests of the farmers and they should do their best to supply them. It took years and years of experinenting at great cost to attain the high standard of our cured meats, and it would be disastrous if through lack of interest on the part of the hog producers, this industry would be crippled or entirely lost. Farmers, especially in Ontario, must depend on mixed farming, and dairying must be a leading feature, and which would never be complete without hog raising. Under these conditions, farmers should take into consideration the institutions which must depend on them for their supply, and without which the farmer's interests would be injured. Farmers have been assisted at the public expense to better their own conditions, but the relation they hold with other industries has been overlooked.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Several lines of provisions are higher in spite of the somewhat slack demand. This is duc to the scarcity of hogs, both live and dressed, prices on which have gone up to $9.25 and $13.25 respectively. Compound lards are up ¼ cent, bacon ½ cent, and porks are firmer, and in some cases higher. A large increasc in demand is looked for in the near future.

BUTTER—Montreal is again furnishing New York with considerable quantities of unsaltcd butter, in spite of the 6c per lb. duty. Over 1,000 packages have rccently gone that way. Vancouver, Winnipeg, and other western points, are also drawing quite heavily. This has resulted in a higher price for creamery. Other lines are firmer, but no changes are as yet reported.

Rcceipts for the week are 2,037 packages as against 1,374 packages same week last ycar. For the season they are 388,393 packages as against 410,032 packages same season 1908.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—Hogs are again higher. Last ycar at this time, live hogs at country points were $5.75 per cwt., which was then regarded as rather high. This week they are $8.25 and even $8.40 at some points, and yet at these prices packers have difficulty in getting their necessary supplies. Prices of cured meats although showing no change this week, will neccssarily advance in consequence of thc sharp raise in hogs.

BUTTER—The receipts of fresh butter are quite sufficient to supply the local market. The poorer qualities which are too plentiful are accumulating, and stored butter is used instead. The old custom of taking in good and bad butter by merchants at thc same price is still too prevalent, and this has its bad effect. It is not fair, and offers no inducements to make good butter and should in some way be stopped. Canada will never take a front stand in butter making, until this practice is discontinued.

POULTRY—There is little fresh poultry coming in, which affords the dealers an opportunity to get rid of the stocks which are left over from the holidays. The sky-high prices are not in evidence, but good stock still sells at fair figures. A good deal of the poorest qualities have to be sold at a loss. As the retailers, as a rule, lost money on poultry this year, they should not forget the lcsson and make the same mistake another year.

GILLETT'S PERFUMED LYE

CAUTION.

Put a strong glass on the label and examine it closely every time. Always look for the name "Gillett's."

Like all good articles, which are extensively advertised, Gillett's Lye is frequently and very closely imitated. In some instances the imitators have actually copied directions and other printed matter from our label word for word. Be wise, and refuse to purchase imitation articles for they are never satisfactory.

Insist On Getting Gillett's Lye

and decline to accept anything that looks to be an imitation or that is represented to be "just as good" or "better," or "the same thing." In our experience of over fifty years in business we have never known of an imitation article that has been a success, for imitators are not reliable people. At the best the "just as good" kinds are only trashy imitations, so decline them with thanks every time.

SHORT OF A MILLION.

Salmon Pack in British Columbia Does Not Measure up to the Other Years of Big Runs.

A despatch from Victoria, B.C., states that the total pack of all kinds of salmon in British Columbia fell below the million mark this season for the first time in many years, during the period of a big run of fish. W. D. Burdis, secretary of the British Columbia Salmon Canners' Association, has completed the compilation of returns for the season of 1909, and the total of all kinds of salmon packed is shown to be 967,920. In 1905, the year of the last previous big run, the total pack amount to 1,167,464 cases; in 1901, another big year, the pack totalled 1,236,156 cases, while in 1897, also a big year, it was 1,015,477 cases. The pack of sockeyes totalled 840,411 cases in the various districts as follows: — Fraser river, 542,248 cases Skeena river, 87,901; Rivers Inlet, 89,027; Naas river, 28,246; outlying districts 93,019. The total pack of the various districts, which includes sockeyes, red and white springs, chums and pinks and cohoes, was as follows: — Fraser river, 567,203; Skeena river, 104,739; Rivers Inlet, 91,014; Naas river, 40,990; outlying districts, 127,974. Canners declare that but for the partial failure of the run on the Fraser river, and the restrictions of the area in which fishing was permitted on the Skeena river, the season's pack would have been as large as that of 1905, the last big year. In 1908 the total salmon pack in British Columbia was 546,689 cases.

WANT STREET FAIR EARLIER.

Majority of Lindsay Merchants Think It to be Too Close to Christmas.

Lindsay, Ont., Jan. 3. — There are varying opinions among the merchants here as to the propriety of holding the annual Christmas Street Fair during the week before Christmas. The merchants all did a good trade, but the question is does it affect the regular Christmas trade.

Your correspondent interviewed several of the leading merchants in their particular lines as to the advisability of holding the Fair earlier—two weeks before Christmas—and the majority of them were in favor of this idea. It is claimed that the people will buy during Christmas week, Fair or no Fair. Some of the interviews are as follows:—

"We had a good day, a splendid day," said Wm. Flavelle, of the drygoods firm of Dundas & Flavelle. "I think the Fair a decided success."

J. E. Adams, of Adams Bros. (grocers) said: "We had an exceptionally good day and I think the Fair a splendid event, but would hold it a week earlier."

F. W. Sutcliffe, of Sutcliffe & Sons, (drygoods), expresses the opinion that the Fair would serve the purpose better if it were held a week previous to Christmas week or the week after.

Felix Forbert, (boots and shoes), considered the Fair to be advantageous to the town and the merchants. He preferred the date to be earlier.

D. Cinnamon, (hardware), "It's a mistake to have the Fair the same week as Christmas. It should be held two or three weeks before."

L. A. Campbell, (grocer), expressed the opinion that the Fair should be held earlier, a week before Christmas, at least. He thought that there was little in the argument that those who brought fowl could not keep them in good condition until Christmas.

A. Higginbotham, (druggist), "I thought the Fair was fine, and I do not see any reason to change the date."

Why Christie biscuits make for success in the grocery business

Success does not happen.

There is nothing accidental about it. There are always good and apparent reasons for success—especially in the grocery business.

The grocer who conducts a pure food shop is bound to succeed, for the simple and conclusive reason that pure foods are the foundation of stable reputation—a reputation that no amount of money can buy.

Since Christie biscuits are the purest of all pure foods, it is reasonable to assert that the grocer who handles them is laying the proper foundation for permanent success.

Your best customers know a great deal about the purity, quality and lasting goodness of Christie biscuits.

Is it wise to risk losing even one good customer?

Remember there's a Christie biscuit for every taste, and—

Christie Biscuits sell more than biscuits.

Wheat Prices Show Tendency to Advance Again

Depressing Reports From the Argentine — Flour Remains Steady—Better Demand for Cereals.

Those who held the idea that wheat would decline, are beginning to change their views and have more confidence in the present value of wheat. Some are even showing a tendency to go the other extreme and are predicting that wheat will, before long, reach $1.25 a bushel. The recent report from Argentine that the crop there is considerably below what it was estimated, has its effect on the world's market, causing a firm feeling.

MONTREAL.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—There is nothing, but the same old story to report, about the wheat and flour situation. The regular movements of a trifle either up or down, are still going on without materially getting away from the price that has ruled for some time. While, however, wheat is fluctuating, flour remains steady, looking for a little more money. With good winter weather, good sleighing and the elections over, the farmers have settled down to every day affairs, and the temptations of getting into trouble removed from about 60 municipalities, it is expected that wheat will come out more freely. As is usually the case immediately after the holidays, the local demand is light.

CEREALS—The cereal market is firm, the demand regular, and prices well maintained. The local supply of wheat and oats is so small that millers pay little attention to it, and depend entirely on the Northwest for their supplies. Wheat from farmers at the mills is worth $1.08 to $1.10 per bushel.

POTATO PRICES DIFFERENT.

Despite Large Quantities in the Okanagan, Prices are High on the Coast.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 3.—An arrival from the Okanagan declares that potatoes are lying there unable to get a purchaser, while in Vancouver the commission men are sending up the price on the ground that potatoes are scarce. It is a peculiar condition of things, and requires an explanation. As soon as the first tinge of frost came here, the price of potatoes went up $3 a ton, since it was believed that the frost would continue, and there would be a good excuse to maintain the price, although large stocks were in. The frost lasted but a few days, but the higher price is still in force. This Okanagan man, and others, complain that they cannot get good prices or good treatment from coast commission men. They allege that the dealers here always have some fault to find, with the result that shipments net little or nothing to the grower. Anway, the Okanagan potatoes are stated to be as good as Asherofts, being grown in a dry country, and growers think there should be no reason why they could not be profitably marketed.

FLOUR FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 5.—An illustration of the fact that Canada's trade with South Africa is increasing, is shown by the cargo now on its way from St. John, N.B., port to South African points, on the steamer Benin. The steamer took away 54,591 sacks of Canadian flour, as against 2,750 of the United States product. She also has 5,455 bushels of wheat. A St. John business man expresses the opinion that as the qualities of the product of Canadian millers becomes more widely known in the Cape, Canada would gradually increase her trade until eventually she will control the market.

Exports from the port of St. John, via the winter steamers, up to Jan. 1, show an increase in valuation over the same period last year, of $379,718. In twenty-two steamers there were forwarded among other goods 1,500,066 bushels of grain, 179,705 bags of flour and 3,102 boxes of cheese.

The annual meeting of the National Canners' Association of the United States will be held at Atlantic City, N.J., from Feb. 7th to 11th.

More Than Soda Crackers

There is something delightfully different in the taste of which distinguishes them from common Soda Crackers.

MOONEY'S Perfection Soda Crackers

The difference begins with better baking of best material in a large, up-to-date oven, built expressly to bake this biscuit.

The difference is protected and preserved for your customer by the package of the biscuit, which effectively retains the freshness, and excludes all dust and moisture.

When You Build, Brother Grocer, Build Strong

JUST at present, you know, we're putting up in Montreal a new office building—for our own convenience and that of our patrons.

But, suppose the architect erred in the construction of his foundation, over-estimating its carrying strength!

What then, Brother Grocer, what then?

Well, as the building grew apace, the foundation would begin to crumble, and—what happened to the Quebec Bridge?

* * * *

Just so with your flourishing flour business, Brother Grocer. Do make sure of your foundation.

Otherwise, 'twill soon be in ruins, together with your ambitions, your dream profits, the confidence of the housewife in your buying judgment.

When you build, Brother Grocer, BUILD STRONG.

* * * *

Twenty-one years ago, we began business building in a flour way on the foundation of FIVE ROSES quality.

'Twas a very modest beginning, you know—800 barrels capacity.

But it was on a solid base. Brother Grocer.

And to-day, due entirely to the success of our retailers, we both handle together a daily capacity of 10,500 barrels.

It's OUR record, yours and ours.

* * * *

So, when you are laying out your plans for 1910, be the architect of your own future—test your foundation.

See that your flour brand will stand your selling plans, your recommendations, your guarantee.

See that it be FIVE ROSES.

Then you will have an embargo on success, a quality trade that nothing can take from you.

Build solid, Brother Grocer.

Build STRONG.

MAKERS OF FIVE R

Concerning the Retail Salesman, and His Work

Some Duties of Clerks to Their Employers — Advisability of Following the Store Policy—Treatment to Customers in and Out of the Store—Need of Studying the Origin and Manufacture of Goods Sold.

By Tom Farmer.

Probably our first duty as salesmen to our employer is to use to best advantage in our employer's interest, the time for which we are paid.

This part of the day is no longer ours to use as we will—we have sold it to our employer and if we use it to reach our own ends we are doing nothing more or less than robbing him of what is his.

We owe it to our employer to represent him before the public as he wishes to be represented.

The firm for which we work will be judged by the way we represent it. Our method of doing business is the store's method in the eyes of the public whom we serve. A clerk may rightly be expected to give just as careful and polite attention to one customer as to another. We are not doing the square thing when a special friend receives overweight or gets special reductions on a price; neither are we right when we give a cold welcome and do the least possible to please someone against whom, perhaps, we have a personal grudge. It is always wrong to give favors or balance old quarrels at our employer's expense.

The cultivation of good habits might also be mentioned. When we spend our spare time in such a way that we have a 'sore' head or cannot attend to business next day, we are doing wrong. Poor service never helped a store yet, and certainly will not help ours.

Let us be punctual. If the store is supposed to open at 7.30, let us be there at 7.30, not at 7.45 or 8 o'clock. We would miss the 7.30 train if we reached the station after it had left and we certainly do not sell goods to the 7.30 customer at 7.45 or 8 o'clock.

Be one upon whom your employer may depend. When one of us is asked to do a certain work and he does it as he is expected to, that one has taken one step in the right direction. A salesman who always carefully carries out orders will be continually relied upon, and it is very likely when higher positions become vacant, that that salesman will have his chance of advancement.

Our firm cannot afford to slight customers. We are the servants of the customers upon whom we are waiting until those customers leave. If you are waiting on Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Smith comes in and wishes to be waited upon at once, ask Mrs. Brown to excuse you before leaving her. Don't give her any excuse to feel slighted. Show her that the first to come is always first served.

Learn to Take Advice.

Accept corrections from your employer. We clerks do not know all about the business and we should profit all we can by our employer's experience. It is to our interest as well as his own. On the other hand, too, we should feel free to discuss with our employer any plan which we think, if carried out, would promote the interests of the business. Two heads are better than one and the planning of half a dozen heads for the good of a store, when considered together, can not help but be better than the plans of one man—pull together.

You or I should not expect an increase in wages until we are worth it. I must earn perhaps $15 a week for my employer before I earn $10 for myself. If I am receiving $10 and earning only that amount for him I am being overpaid, but if I increase my earnings for him to $20 or $25 a week, then perhaps I would really be underpaid. Our employers though, as a rule, are not slow to notice these increased earnings and in most cases we will have our salaries raised when we earn the increase. Service is the test of value.

The best interests of our employer's business are not being served when we talk about store troubles outside of the shop. In any business things go crooked once in a while, but it does not help straighten them in the least, when we tell these troubles outside the store circle. The fewer people who know about them the better. When we run down our store—knock it, make little of its goods and ways of doing business, even outside business hours—we are not doing the fair thing by our employer. Keep the bright side out. If you have anything to say about the store or the people in it let it be something good.

Our employer is right when he expects us to learn all we can about the goods we are selling. The Grocer's Encyclopaedia may seem rather dry reading sometimes, but if we put our hearts into the grocery business and cultivate the desire to learn all we can about it, we will find that weekly column very instructive. If the grocery clerk knows how a food is prepared he will find it easier to interest the housewife in it. In fact the ideal 20th century salesman would be a cook as well.

Tell your customers the truth. It is ours to win new customers and to hold old ones. We can do neither by misrepresentation. Customers may want a cheap price, but they do not want cheap goods. They want quality goods as cheap as they can get them—talk quality. We owe it to our employer, our customers and ourselves.

What Salesmanship Is.

Speak to customers when they enter the store whether you can wait on them at once or not—show them that they are noticed and will be waited upon in their turn. We owe it to our employer to sell all the goods we can. This does not mean that we should overload a customer, but that we should suggest things which perhaps they really want but have forgotten. As long as a person remains in the store he is a possible purchaser ; when he leaves he is still a possible purchaser, but our store's chance of selling him the goods is only on a level with the chance of a score of other groceries.

It is our duty to keep our temper with a customer. It is often very hard when a customer is very unreasonable to remain pleasant, but we should try to do so. Your employer needs that customer's business ; the store loses everything, the customer but little when we lose control of our temper.

Our employer expects us to introduce new goods. When he buys a new line of biscuits or bottled goods he wishes them to be sold. Sales can often be made because the line is a new one. Customers like to try new things and your arousing interest in new lines may lead to extra business. Show a customer that your store considerers his business worth something.

Do your best to remember faces. The most important person to a human being is himself and he likes to be noticed and greeted by name in the store and out of it.

Quite a number of the duties of a clerk are not those in direct relation to customers. We as clerks are not doing our full duty by our employers, if we are not making good use of the time between the arrival of customers. We should be work-finders. There is always something to do if we but look for it. A store quickly loses its tidy appearance if the dusting is neglected, the shelves not kept full, or if the windows are not retrimmed regularly. These things are only kept up when clerks make full use of their spare moments.

W. D. Ritchie, Little Current, Ont., was a visitor at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer on Tuesday.

GREEN FRUITS — All the fruit houses have an exceptionally quiet appearance this week. It is evident that the retailers have still some stock left which was expected to be sold before the holidays, and which they are selling before they call on the wholesale men for more. This accounts for the dullness of the market, and gives them time to discuss the results of the elections, and as one put it "to keep the draft from the stove."

California navels are coming in freely and are improving in quality. A car of Extra Fancy has just arrived, which will be sold at $3.25.

Whether the election of one of the wholesale fruit men as alderman will affect the local market in any way has not yet been found out, but so far it has not caused much uneasiness among the dealers.

VEGETABLES—Fresh vegetables are coming in from where they do not wear fur coats, and are taking a prominent stand on our market. Fresh tomatoes at $6 per case or about 20c a pound, cucumbers at $2 per dozen are among the new comers. Potatoes are steady and are still selling in small lots to stores at 60 to 65c. Cold weather may push them up.

EASTERN FRUIT SHIPPED BACK.

Western Inspector States That Much of it Was of a Poor Quality.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 3.—Fruit growing in British Columbia is attracting more attention than ever, and there is a steady demand for suitable acreage. An upcountry rancher, who was in Vancouver the other day, had just returned from a trip to Oregon and while there had ordered 17,000 young trees, and also 30,000 more in Victoria on his way home. This is a single instance and indicates the rapid extension of the industry.

Thomas Cunningham, provincial fruit pests inspector, states that the fine quality of Japanese oranges, which were received this season, is the result of the pronouncement of his department that if any of the kind generally shipped to Canada arived they would be destroyed. It has been discovered that an inferior quality has been sent here in previous years, and that since it is necessary to send better, the grade of those now arriving is much higher. The price, though, is higher, going from 45c and 55c in former years to 75c and 85c this year. Mr. Cunningham also states that the Ontario fruit, which was shipped to the coast this fall gave his department much trouble. Five carloads that were received in the Kootenay were shipped back again. Apples were scarce here this season, and the first shipment of Nova Scotia fruit reached here as a result, but this was of poor quality.

KEEPING FROST FROM FRUITS.

It has long been the custom in California, southern Texas and Florida to preserve the orange orchards against the blight of sudden frost by employing heating pots or open stoves. In this way the temperature has been raised from two to three degrees or enough to insure the safety of the threatened fruit.

Another, but less effective way to prevent fruit getting frost-bitten is to place straw around apple, pear and peach trees at the ground on the approach of a frost, this idea being employed largely in Oregon and Washington. The plan of having fires in the orchards on frosty nights is now being resorted to in a wholesale way in Colorado, and it is said that the entire crop of fruit this year in the Grand Valley of Colorado, valued at over $3,000,000, was saved from killing by frost by the use of blazing oil in the orchards. These fruit orchards are extensive and of great value, the crops including peaches, apples, pears, plums, cherries and soft-shell almonds. Hitherto the harvest has been uncertain; Jack Frost a terrifying menace. The crop of 1909 was saved by means of some 300,000 smudge-pots of different types, which actually raised the temperature in the valley from eight to nine degrees over twenty-seven miles of territory. While the temperature outside the heated area dropped as low as twenty degrees, within the protected district it did not go below 29.5 degrees. It is said that the cost of the fuel is about $50 per acre the first year and $15 per acre in succeeding years. High as these figures seem they are small items compared with the value of the crops.

Not only is the plan successful, but it shows that it may be possible to grow some of the more delicate fruits further north.

Strong Objections to the New Co-operative Bill

"Time-to-Act" Gives Some Reasons Why the Merchants Should Hasten to Take Steps Against It—Alleges that Promoters Organize Societies For Purely Monetary Reasons.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—What is the matter with the retail merchants? Only a year ago through great effort and expense the Co-operative Bill was defeated in Ottawa and during the last session of the local legislature an attempt was made to force it through the House in Toronto, and now it will again be brought up in Ottawa during the present session Can there be a single retail merchant in the country who will sit down and allow schemers to influence his member in the House whom he has elected, to pass a bill that will give special privileges to put him out of business?

This bill is first-cousin to the trading stamp nuisance, only even more unfair and vicious, and if all the promoters would act on the surface, some trading stamp faces would likely show up. Can the merchants not understand what is being done, when members of parliament support a bill which not a man in their constituencies asks for? Will you, as merchants, allow your member to vote for a bill which is so extremely unfair to you and in the interests of no one except a greedy syndicate, without making a determined protest?

Will you rest with your arms folded when a gigantic monopoly is asking your members of parliament to open for them a way, so that they can send promoters to every town without the expense of a charter, and stir up the people against you, through false representations and secure subscriptions in order to tie them up, and make a good commission for themselves? Will you close your eyes to the fact that these people, who have nothing in view but unfair gain, are leading the members to believe that the poor people whom they say you are keeping poor by overcharging them are asking for this bill? There is not one argument in its favor, and it can lead to nothing but trouble and confusion; it is unnatural.

If your member is in favor of it, ask him his reasons, and do not allow him to "pull the wool over your eyes," but at once call a meeting and invite him and others who understand the nature of the whole scheme to discuss and bring out the facts as they exist.

Bear in mind, like the trading stamps, the scheme is to make money at the cost of others. They know that they cannot give the people better value through co-operative stores, which was demonstrated in Toronto where a number of them have failed, but the scheme is to open a grand field for promoters to operate. It is scarcely conceivable that members of parliament could be induced to support such a bill, but when it had passed the House of Commons once, and was defeated only by one vote in the Senate, then we can see the importance of standing up for our rights, and looking after our interests.

The retail trade is a necessity, and the only system that will give the people the service they demand and need, is the regular wholesale and retail store, and therefore we must see that our rights and the people's rights are not bartered away. The retail merchants have altogether too long been laboring under unfair conditions without demanding fair play, and it is about time that they do not submit to any further encroachments, especially not to the giving of special privileges to unfair competitors, by acts of parliament.

Let every merchant in the land stand to his guns and fight this Co-operative Bill to a finish.

Self-Measuring Systems
For Handling
Kerosene or Gasolene

Emphasize one feature that is important above all others in the general store—

CLEANLINESS

From the slopping and dripping of faucets and funnels, the porous boards of the floor near the oil supply become soaked through and through, making the appearance unsightly and unclean. In any store, under the old method of handling oil, this condition exists—it cannot be avoided. The merchandise stored near such a place is easily contaminated. After drawing oil the least odor from hands or clothes is absorbed by the paper used to wrap up merchandise, which quickly becomes infected with the disagreeable and nauseous taste of oil.

The only system that will remove these objections is one that will hold the oil in a tank absolutely leak and evaporation proof, measure the oil accurately into the customer's can with neither spilling nor slopping, dispose of unclean measures and funnels, and one in which the flow of oil is instantly cut off the moment the desired amount is drawn. All of these features and more are found in the Bowser Adjustable Measure Oil Equipments. They will meet any conditions and requirements, being made in more than fifty different styles.

If you are interested, you need only drop a card, asking for Bulletin 5, and you will then receive full information.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

"Shell" Soap

Bramwell's Epsom Salts show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package. They are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" "Bramwell's" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

Epsom Salts

Pastacaldi's Peel is prepared from the finest Corsican Citrons and you get what you pay for every time. No excess of sugar, but highest quality selected "Peels" peel—drained. Pastacaldi's name on every box.

Our Advertising and Its Relation to You

We want you to be in touch with our plans Mr. Dealer---we want you to know them as intimately as we do ourselves. Co-operation is the only possible way to success for both of us.

Now the sooner you know our plans the sooner you will put in your stock of

Pure Gold Goods

(Trade Mark Registered)

The sooner you put in this stock the sooner you will begin getting your profits on the sale of the goods.

Frankly, we don't care how small your initial order is. In fact, we don't want you to load up on the goods at the start---it's a poor way to prove our case by trying to fill your shelves.

Make your order small---but make your order. What we want is that you be in a position to deliver the goods when they are called for.

We will trust to the quality of the goods, the advertising and your good judgment as to what quantity will constitute an active stock to bring us repeat orders---larger and larger as time goes on.

And this leads up to our original point---write us for sheet illustrating and describing our advertising campaign. Ask us any questions you will about our plans---we will gladly inform you.

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped frem Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

The Grocer's Interest in the Coming Great Exposition

Addition of Millions to Our Population Will Mean Much to the Grocery Trade—Pulse of the Expanding Trade Will be Felt all Over the Dominion With Winnipeg as Centre—Advice on Planning for The Big Event.

By George M. Hall.

When the first great Canadian Exposition is put on in Winnipeg in 1913, there will be none of the several classes of tradesmen who will derive greater benefit from the Exposition or have a greater stake in it than the grocer. The grocer's interest in Canada's Exposition is a real thing now when the event out of which this interests springs is in anticipation. At present this interest is of the sort which arises from profits in prospect from business that is sure to come, but which is not yet to be put upon the books. At the very moment that it shall be decided when the Exposition is to take place, at that moment the concrete interest of the grocers of Canada in the Exposition will take the place of present form of interest, a form partaking more of the abstract. From that time forward, through the several years of preparation, during the busy months, when Canada's International Exposition will be the gathering point for millions of people, after the gates of the exposition shall have been closed and for years to come, the effects of the great exposition on the business of the grocer—retail and wholesale—are bound to be felt and in a manner highly beneficial.

Millions to be Fed.

Three self-evident propositions—corollary to the exposition project and proving the grocer's interest in that enterprise—are:

That the exposition will be the means of bringing many millions of people to Canada.

That these people, will be far from their home base of supplies and must be fed the while.

That the Canadian grocer will be the medium through which the greater part of the immense food supply must be furnished.

All of this is too plain to require more than a bare statement of the facts. Comparison of population figures, accessibility and other features of Winnipeg and other cities where expositions have been held, show that it is highly probable that eight or nine million people will attend the great Canadian Exposition to be held in Winnipeg. It goes without saying that this great influx of visitors into Canada, will create an enormously increased demand for food supplies, a demand which will have its greatest energy centered in and about Winnipeg, but which will rest in varying degrees of weight upon the grocers all over the Dominion. Entering Canada from the east, south and west, the flood of exposition visitors will pour over the country creating an instant demand for goods that stock the shelves of the grocery store and keeping up this demand throughout the time these visitors remain in Canada.

How to meet this demand will be the chief question the grocers of Canada will have to deal with—of the demand itself there can be no doubt. Wholesale and retail stocks must be heavily increased, and where the demand is sharpest and most insistent, there will be needed larger stores and increased service of clerks and distribution. Stocks that will be called for most frequently — ready-to-eat things, especially—will need special attention. The grocer who lays himself out to meet the great demand that will be imposed upon him by the exposition in the most complete and economical way will naturally reap the greatest benefits, but it will be almost an impossibility for any grocer whose store is located within reach of a railroad in any part of Canada to escape the burden of this increased trade or to avoid its profits.

Will Have Time to Prepare.

Fortunately, there will be ample time for preparation. Even in Winnipeg, where the demand will set in soonest and will reach its highest point, the process will be gradual enough for the competent business man to gauge his needs beforehand, and to prepare to supply them. The advance army of artisans, laborers, workmen of all classes, concessionaires, exhibitors, and all manner of people who will visit Winnipeg during the preparatory stages of the exposition, will constitute a demand upon the local grocer that will lead him by stages toward the point where his stock and his service must be as complete and satisfactory as wise provision and sound business management can make them.

The Winnipeg grocer who sets himself to the task of making the highest possible profit from the extraordinary trade which the exposition will bring him, will organize a sales system that shall make cash its chief aim, reduce credit sales to the lowest points and provide for credit collections in the most thorough way.

General Demand Will be Great.

Away from Winnipeg, the problem of how to meet increased trade demands brought about by the exposition will not require so much preparation, but its difficulties will be increased by the comparative suddeness of the demand and its greater force in proportion to the means to meet it. Cheap railroad fares will distribute the exposition visitors pretty well all over the country on incoming and outgoing travel as well as through the countless excursions that will be made within the Dominion by persons whose chief object in coming to Canada will be to acquire first-hand knowledge of the country, which has so large a place in the public eye. No less than those who stay in Winnipeg longer, will these travelers have to be fed, and their food supply will come largely from the grocery stores of the country. Wide-awake grocers who are located at points to be touched by travel, will have plenty of time to prepare for the increase of trade that will come to them and the probable number of exposition visitors will be determinable with reasonable accuracy as time develops the plan and scope of the event.

Who Builds Best, Makes Most.

Everywhere throughout the Dominion, the demand for groceries will be heavily increased as a direct result of Canada's International Exposition. Out of this increased trade profits are to be made in proportion to the trade itself. As is always the case, the men who handle their trade best—who grasp the opportunity most thoroughly—will make the most money; the occasion will offer and it will remain for the grocers of Canada to set their houses in order to meet the greatest demand that has ever been made upon them and to get the highest profit that legitimate business methods entitle them to get.

The condition of trade after the exposition need not worry the Canadian grocer. It would be foolish to expect that the food demand after an occasion that practically doubles the population of the country, will be as great as it is while the event is in being, but there will certainly be more trade for Canadian grocers after the exposition than before it because nothing can be surer than that the permanent population of Canada will be increased largely as a result of the Exposition. The grocer who must prepare for an abnormal demand while the exposition is in progress, will have the great advantage of knowing just when the event will begin and with equal accuracy when it will end. He will have four or five months to dispose of his increased stock and only poor figuring or some extraordinary circumstance can saddle him with an unsold surplus at the close of the season of great demand.

Viewed as a business proposition from the grocer's point of outlook, Canada's International Exposition is more than promising, it is an absolute assurance of heavy trade and good profits.

Wants Elimination of Three-for-a-Quarter System

Figures Showing How Merchants Actually Lose Money Apart From the Cost of Doing Business When They Sell by This Method—Writer Calls it a Foolish Idea Which Lowers Standing of the Trade—Why Grocers Should be Business Men.

By A. H. Harvey.

It seems to me it is time someone should take the initiative in the elimination of that time-worn evil—the two-for-a-quartcr and three for-a-quarter system of selling goods which are disposed of individually at 15 and 10 cents respectively. It has now become so prevalent that it is one of the subtlest parasites in the retail trade of to-day.

A grocer in speaking to me about the same matter rcmarked that the general grocer is more unbusinesslike in his methods than the ordinary farmer's wife and does not deserve the name of merchant.

Ask a farmer's wife on the market whether she would let you have three for a quarter for anything she was selling at 10c each; shc will give you such a "setting out" that you wouldn't try the trick again for some time. A large number of manufacturers of various lines of goods arrange their packages to retail at 10 and 15 cents each, and at this allow the retailer a very fair profit. Some cost 90c, some 95c and somc $1 per dozen, or 7½, 7 11-12, and 8 1-3 each. This would give the retailer 33 1-3, 26 6-19 and 20 per ccnt. profit, but if he sells 3 for a quarter his profits will bc 11 1-9, 10 10-19 and 0 per cent. respectively.

Now there is not a grocer in Canada who can do busincss for what he makes on these goods. Almost unawares the grocer is robbcd of his profits through this pernicious custom. Think of giving 6 cakes of soap for a quarter and making 17c on a box of 100 pieces! A great many of these evils in the grocery trade are traccable to lack of business knowledge.

Take for instance a tobacco which is intended to sell at 10c a plug. The retailers in their foolishness started to sell it 3 for a quarter. The manufacturer seeing that the retailer was giving his profits to the consumer, raised his price to 8 7-9 a plug which makes it impossible to sell 3 for a quarter but if sold at 10c will give the retailer 1 2-9 cents per plug profit. The rctailers in their commercial wisdom are down on this manufacturer for raising the price and are friendly and warm supporters of another tobacco manufacturer whose goods they can sell 3 for a quarter and make only 5-6 of a cent profit.

Should Serve Apprenticeship.

This is neither business nor common sense and yet this is the opposition that confronts the qualificd grocer. Too many are in the business who have never served an apprenticeship and who do not understand thc rudiment of business. One grocer I know of was recently selling a 20c article for 10c and he was naturally doing a rushing business, until his attention was called to the fact that he was selling it about 6c less than he paid for it. Such business blundering is a hindrance to the trade, which brings out forcibly thc necd of a practical business training.

Let us look at some more of the evils the grocer has to contend with, to show that he cannot afford to do business carelessly, or follow the 2 or 3 for a quarter method. What has he in his store which is exclusively handled by grocers? Practically nothing but sugar. Tea, coffee, vegetables, and fruit are all sold by pedlars, canned goods by the butchers and flour and cereals by the flour and feed men, and the grocer gets what is left. Cut out the sugar on which he makes a mere trifle, and the 2 for a quarter goods, and then take a good look at what is left and you will get a fair idea where your profit, to make your business pay, is to come from. Robbed of tradc by pedlars and undersold by ignorant men in the trade, shows the absolute necessity of organized effort in order to save the retail grocery trade from ruin.

The retail grocery trade is a necessity and therefore has a right to be protected, and it remains for the grocers themselves to wake up and drop their foolish, selfish jealousy and work together for the good of their trade.

OTHER SIDE OF FIXED PRICES.

From New York Commercial.

A Government official declared today that unless several large manufacturers of staple grocery articles do away with contracts which they have forced on wholesale grocers to keep up prices, prosecutions would be begun. The manufacturers complained of were called before United States District Attorney Wise, and warned.

Many of the contracts are declared to be in violation of the Anti-Trust laws. All contracts which provide a penalty for changing the selling price come under this head.

The manufacturers have gradually extended their power over the wholesale grocers. Once they were satisfied with a pledge from the wholsaler that he would not undersell to the retail grocer. Now they demand that the retailer maintain a fixed price to the consumer.

High price contracts have been in vogue for some time. Of late the wholesalers have been required to make affidavits regarding their sales. Any variation from the fixed price was punished with a fine and if the fine was not paid the wholesaler was boycotted.

The matter was brought to the attention of District Attorney Wise by Austin, Nichols & Co. The firm refused to sign a high-price contract, and one manufacturer cut them off his selling list. The firm took up another manufacturer's goods and pushed them so successfully that the original manufacturer tried to get back the business.

J. H. Parker, of the Boston wholesale firm of Parker, Cobb, Bates & Yerra Company, is in the city on a campaign against the high-price contract. He said:

"The attitude of the manufacturers is bad. We do not try to dictate to them at what price they shall sell their foodstuffs and claim they have no right to enforce prices upon us that affect our dealings with the public. If wholesalers and retailers are satisfied with a profit that will enable the public to buy for seven cents an article for which they have been compelled to pay ten cents, we believe it is our right.

"This difference of nearly 30 per cent. is just about the average difference housewives are compelled to pay on many staple articles that they could buy cheaper if it were not for these objectionable contracts.

"Now that the wholesalers have found that the contracts are in violation of the law, they are going to fight to a finish and bring trade to a bisis that is not controlled by secret contracts and agreements."

TRADE NOTES.

An explosion in the mill of the Buffalo Cereal Company, Buffalo, N.Y., caused the deaths of three men.

Broderick and Jackson, Vancouver, B.C., are opening a grocery store at the corner of Victoria and Janes Roads.

F. S. Stokes, formerly connected with the International Stock Food Co., Toronto, has gone to Minneapolis to take the position of sales manager for the same firm.

The Zeno Manufacturing Co. has been granted license to do business in Ontario as manufacturers of chewing gum and candies. This company is incorporated in Illinois, U.S.A. Geo. E. Glennie, London, Ont., is the company's attorney.

Hamblin & Brereton, commission merchants, Winnipeg, have recently been incorporated as Hamblin & Brereton, Ltd., with an authorized capital of $40,000. Mr. Brereton spends a greater part of the time in Vancouver, where a branch office has been established.

Lincoln Crowson, accountant with the Acadia Sugar Refining Co., Moncton, N.B., was presented with a pair of gold cuff links as a Christmas gift by the employees of the barrel factory. Nelson Hayes, the manager, was given two pipes and case immediately after.

A grocer subscriber in writing regarding the value advertising has been to him says: "Some of our brother merchants do not seem to have learned that advertising pays and so are still down in the valley of obscurity waiting for some fortunate wind to carry them to the hill-top. With the beginning of the year comes the time to begin an upward climb. Let each business man set his own standard and try to maintain it."

Large Chicago Packers after the Canadian Market?

Rumor Has it That the Armours and Swifts Want to Locate in Toronto to Make a Strong Bid for Business in the Dominion—Already Have Large Interests in Union Stock Yards—Opinions of Heads of Canadian Firms.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Are the Chicago packing interests preparing to locate a beef and pork packing plant at Toronto and go out after the Canadian meat trade? This is a question which is causing some discussion among the provision men at the present time.

For some little time there have been persistent rumors concerning the incoming of the Chicago packing concerns linked up in one shape or other with existing Toronto packing plants. These rumors have been as persistently contradicted by the parties named at this end.

At present the story has taken on more definite form. During the past week The Canadian Grocer has been credibly informed that the Armour Packing Co., of Chicago, has purchased 25 per cent. of the stock of the Union Stock Yards Co., whose premises are at West Toronto, and along with the Swift Packing Co., of Chicago, which already has the controlling interest in the stock yards, have under consideration the purchasing of or obtaining an interest in the Wm. Davies Co. and the Harris Abattoir Co., both of Toronto, and the removal of these two plants to a new location adjacent to the yards at West Toronto. Rumor further connected the name of J. W. Flavelle, the managing director of the Wm. Davies Co., with the management of the merged plants. If this plan were to succeed, it would mean practically the closing of the Western Cattle Market, a Toronto civic enterprise, from which the city derives a revenue of some $40,000 a year.

To be fair it is only right to state that executive officers of both the Toronto companies deny the correctness of even this latest report.

"You can say for me," said Mr. Flavelle to The Grocer, "that there is no truth in the thing. I have not seen any person connected with the Armour Company; I am not personally acquainted with any of the members of that company, and I have not seen a broker representing the Armours. In fact I know as much about it as you do."

J. A. McLean, secretary-treasurer of the Harris Abattoir Co., also contradicted the story. His words were: "there is nothing in it; absolutely no truth in it."

Source of the Rumor.

What lent color to the report in the first place was the source from which it emanated. It may be that the statement was made prematurely, or that the matter dropped before coming to a head. There are many, however, who know that the Swifts got the Union Stock Yards just after the fire in August, 1908, which nearly sent the original Union Stock Yards Co. to the wall. It is said that at that time the Swifts obtained the preference stock worth $100 a share for $80, giving bonds in lieu of cash. These same parties say it is not unlikely that the Armour's have obtained a holding, either by purchasing some independent stock or by getting an interest in conjunction with Swifts, This holding is set down at 25 per cent. All the improvements made at the yards at West Toronto since the fire are credited to the Swifts.

Many of the men interested in the provision trade of the country when interviewed regarding the proposed merger stated that this latest story was quite new to them. Among these were Jas. T. Madden, president and general manager the Wm. Ryan Co., and F. M. Moffatt, secretary-treasurer Gunns, Ltd.

Chas. S. Blackwell, president and managing director of Park, Blackwell & Co., had only seen the repudiated statements in the daily press. He thought it unlikely that the Chicago packers would locate a pork packing plant here, because of the scarcity of supplies. "On Monday of this week there were offered at Chicago alone 45,000 hogs—more than the whole of Canada could offer in two weeks. (Last week the Canadian offerings were 22,000 hogs). With cattle it is different. The Swifts are making a bid for the Canadian cattle in the West. I do not think that Armours or Swift propose to locate here, where existing plants are running but several days in the week."

Henry Wright, president of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., who up to a short while ago acted as selling agents of the Armour potted meat and extract lines, thought it quite probable that the Chicago packing houses would locate in Canada, seeing how the country is expanding, but he had no actual knowledge that such a step was contemplated.

What Representative Here Says.

H. Dawson and John Elliott of the Dawson Commission Co., which concern is acting as selling agents in Canada for some of the Armour products, knew nothing definitely as to this latest move, but thought it quite likely that the Armours would locate in Canada, especially that the country was now growing so rapidly.

"There are the provinces in the west and the mining sections of northern Ontario," said Mr. Elliott, "which would take canned meats, and those sections are worth cultivating." Before joining the Dawson Commission Co., Mr. Elliott was for 14 years an employe of the Armour Co. in the U. S., and from his experience the members of the company did not speak beforehand of what they intended to do. At present the Armours are putting up at Toronto in small Canadian bottles and jars two of their lines. These products come into Canada in bulk, and entering under the class of "semi-manufactured goods" escape the payment of duty, and the company intend adding to these lines this year.

According to Mr. Dawson, the Armours were doing away with such distributing centres as Montreal, and centralizing their Canadian sales department at Toronto. He also said that prominent members of the Armour company had paid visits to Toronto of late.

A. Gunn, of Gunns Ltd., did not know the Armours had obtained a holding in the Union Stock Yards, but seeing that they had done so it was not unlikely that they would sooner or later erect a plant here. "Of course there is this to be said," said Mr. Gunn "before the Swifts and Armours became interested in the stock yards at the Junction their buyers were compelled to travel up and down the country to purchase their live stock. Now they can effect a saving by purchasing their animals at their own stock yards. Toronto is the stock centre of this part of Canada and the offerings here are greater than at any other point. Louis F. Swift, president of the Swift Packing Co., was out at the stock yards just before Christmas and paid a visit to our plant. Unfortunately both Mr. Moffatt and myself were away that day. What his business was of course I am unable to say."

Mr. Ashcroft, local manager at the Union Stock Yards, was unable to say anything about the matter. He said he was ignorant of any such scheme being contemplated. He knew the Swifts were interested in the yards, of course, but did not know the actual amount of their holdings. The company at present is capitalized at $1,500,000, all common stock, but he was ignorant of the element holding the controlling or, in fact, any large portion of the stock.

In general, the opinion was vouchsafed by several persons who have been following these rumors that it would cost a pretty large penny to get control of the Wm. Davies Co. and the Harris Abattoir, or either of them. And even to move these plants independently to the Junction as separate concerns would be a costly undertaking. During the past year about $100,000 has been spent in improvements on the Harris Abattoir, and at the lowest estimate the Davies pork-packing plant is set down at nearly half a million. "It would take $1,000,000 to move the Davies plant from their present location," said one party, "and $25,000 at least would have to be the figure that would entice Mr. Flavelle to assume the management of such a merger as rumored—that is presuming that he would consent to occupy such a position at all, which is doubtful."

At the recent Christmas stock show at Chicago, Messrs. Flavelle, Harris, Sr., Harris Jr., and MacLean paid a visit to that city, and rumors concerning a sale were afloat, but Mr. Flavelle in a letter to the Toronto press contradicted any such intention.

At present the Swifts have a large interest in the stock yard industries at Winnipeg, and a little over a year ago built an enormous packing plant at Edmonton. Several years ago they took over the Fowler plant at Hamilton so the Swifts are evidently no strangers to Canada. Both these Chicago concerns recognize the superiority of Canadian bacon and while their hams and beef do compete with similar Canadian products abroad and even in some Canadian points, officers of both the Swift and Armour companies have publicly acknowledged the superiority of Canadian bacon lines, especially Wiltshire and Cumberland cuts.

A Hundred and Fifty Dollars Found Beneath Till

Had Been in Use Over Half a Century—Finally Replaced by Modern Cash Machine—The Trend of Modern Merchandising.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduction of photographs of an old cash till taken a few years ago in Hamilton, Ont., where the till was in use in a grocery store for fifty-one years.

For the first twenty-five years of its history it was used under the counter from which each clerk made change.

An Interior View of Old Cash Box.

During the following twenty-six years it was installed in the centre of the store and operated by a cashier.

When, however, it became so rickety that it would scarcely hold cash it was dispensed with and a modern cash machine was installed in its place.

An interesting story is told of how the dust accumulated under it during its long period of services and when it was removed and the dust sifted, over one hundred and fifty dollars in cash was found.

A View of the Front of the Till Showing How the Jack-knife Has Gotten in Work.

There are yet to be found in many stores similar cash boxes, but they are gradually being replaced by modern appliances, which denotes the change from antique to modern methods in merchandising. Grocers are fast recognizing the fact that up-to-date systems and appliances are the cheaper in the end—that money is actually saved by their uses.

AN END-OF-THE-YEAR WINDOW.

Face of a Clock With Hands Near the Midnight Hour Made of Groceries.

Chatham, Ont., Jan. 7.—Attractive Christmas and New Year's window displays were put on last year by the local branch of Bradley & Son, grocers.

The Christmas display represented the arrival of Santa Claus. The window showed a drawing room with a large, old fashioned fireplace and oak mantel. A collection of stockings were hung from the edge of the mantel above the fire place, in which an incandescent bulb, shining through red tissue paper, bore a comfortable resemblance to a hearth. In the middle of the room stood Santa with his pack, the latter being filled with groceries of various sorts. A feature of the display was the exceptional care given to the various details of the room. The floor was carpeted with rugs, there were chairs, and a table with a dish of Christmas groceries, while an old fashioned candlestick (one with something of a history) stood on the mantel, and a couple of bird cages containing live canaries hung from the top of the window, which was roofed in with white cheese cloth dotted with holly. The entire display formed a pretty direct hint to the Christmas buyer that nothing would form a more genuinely seasonable gift than a substantial basket of groceries to some poor person who was in need.

The New Year's window was less elaborate. As with the Christmas display, the large corner window, fronting on both streets, was used. At the front a clock face was shown on a ground of white shredded cocoanut, the circle of the dial being marked out with English walnuts (unshelled) while the numbers on the face of the clock and the hands, pointing a few minutes to midnight, were formed with shelled almonds. The clock face was accompanied by the wording, "We wish you all a Happy New Year," this being partly on one side and partly on the other, the letters being formed with shelled almonds. In the side portion of the corner window the words, "Farewell, 1909, Welcome, 1910," also formed in shelled almonds on white cocoanut also appeared. The intervening space between the edges of the two cocoanut patches and the window itself was filled in with unshelled almonds, their color contrasting with the white cocoanut and helping to mark it off.

EXAGGERATED, AS USUAL.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—That it was the duty of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, with headquarters in Montreal, to protest against the exaggerated prominence being given in local papers to an unfortunate prevalence of typhoid fever in the city, was unanimously declared at the regular monthly meeting of the directors on Saturday last.

Reports presented in an informal way by various members present showed that there was no epidemic in the city. For instance among the school children only 7 cases were reported, while 12,000 children were attending the schools.

It was stated that much injury was being done trade in Montreal through the scare-head reports published. While the association as a body, and the members individually, were desirous of doing everything possible to check the disease, and to improve the water supply and hospital facilities, it did not seem necessary to give to the world the impression that everything was at a standstill in the city because of a few cases of fever. President Samuel J. Mathewson, was instructed to write a protest along these lines, same to be sent to all the newspapers.

COMPETITION TOO KEEN.

In commenting on the wholesale grocery trade in St. John, N.B., Dun's Review says: "The grocery trade report an off year, turnover probably about the same as last, competition has been keener than ever and but little profit in the business. Prospects for the winter and spring none too favorable, the construction of the new Transcontinental Railway, that has given much more business to the grocery trade than to any others, now being well on to completion."

CONDEMNATION OF COMBINES.

There are many people who will condemn, at first sight, anything in the shape of an amalgamation, merger or trade association as an offensive combine for the purpose of raising prices or restraining trade and commerce. They have been led to do this principally through newspapers which deem it their duty to pounce upon anything that savors of trade organization without first investigating either its legal or moral status.

Just now the House of Commons is interesting itself in proposed changes to the Combines Act and some newspapers seem to think that they should make any kind of general statements as long as they oppose "combines."

This is undoubtedly a mistake. There are combines, mergers, amalgamations and trade organizations which are perfectly legal, and tend to stimulate trade and place the methods of doing business on a stronger foundation. Such as these are beneficial to the community and should not be condemned by men who know nothing about their natures. There are others, of course, which are directly opposite to this in effect.

The trouble is that individuals have a sort of hallucination that all amalgamations or organizations are being formed to boost prices and restrain trade illegally. If they make a loud noise and are backed up by newspapers, the government is practically forced to step in and investigate. Even if there is nothing to show an illegal combine, the men interested are sometimes put to several thousand dollars expense, which they are unjustly compelled to bear.

The question of internal trade and commerce is one of such vital importance that we cannot afford to treat it without the greatest care and attention. If there were a permanent commission to investigate all trade conditions and present facts as they are it would prove of great value from many standpoints.

Deliberate action should be taken; haste is not necessary in making changes to the act and for that reason every board of trade and trade organization in Canada should be made acquainted with what the proposed changes are in order that the government may be supplied with the opinions of business men who are fully acquainted with the trend of conditions.

That Parliament should study the views of the business men who think and not listen to the cries of any irresponsible person should be the wish of those who are anxious for the advancement of the internal trade and commerce conditions in Canada.

The right of labor to organize is recognized. The same right should not be denied retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers, provided the object of the organization is not unjust.

AVOID THE SNARE.

"On to the Porcupine gold fields!" is now the new slogan of the "get-rich-quick" fraternity. Soon business men who have surplus capital and clerks who have a few spare dollars will be enticed by the glowing prospectus to buy stock in "sure things."

The Porcupine gold fields may be all right. There is every indication that they will be. The Government officials say they are most promising. But gold is not scattered over the district like leaves in autumn, although one would gather from the liberal way in which claims are being staked out on the deep carpet of snow, that prospectors believed it was.

That we are justified in warning business men against being caught and torn in the claws of wild-cat schemes is evident from the warning which the Hon. Mr. Cochrane, Ontario Minister of Mines, has sent out. He says in effect, "have a care."

In mining, as in lotteries, the prizes are few and far between. The few may make, but the many lose. John Hays Hammond, the great mining expert, once said: "Do not abandon your common sense in mining matters."

That is all we ask of the business men and clerks throughout the country. If they will invest their surplus capital or their small savings in mining enterprises, by all means let them. All we ask is that they should know "where they are at" before they make a venture.

It would be easier to crawl through the eye of a needle than to attain riches through wild-cat mining schemes.

If you must venture into mining schemes confine your enterprise to properties in which it has been demonstrated by actual development that there is at least some trace of the precious metal. There will even then be uncertainty enough to make the venture interesting.

Ordinary business enterprises, small and all as the profits may be, yield on the whole a safer and better return than speculation in mining shares. "Cobbler, stick to your last."

FIGHT CO-OPERATIVE BILL.

In last week's issue a letter appeared from a merchant signing himself "Time-to-Act," which should receive more than a passing notice. It referred to the introduction of the proposed new Co-operative Bill into the House of Commons, and the need of taking prompt action to have it blocked. The letter is very timely and should awaken the interest of every merchants' and grocers' association in Canada as well as every individual merchant. This co-operative scheme is primarily one to advance the interests of a few promoters in most cases and not for the general good of the community. It is not, as the writer of the communication points out, put forward by special request by any of the constituents of a municipality, but from the purely monetary point of view of a few men who are anxious to get rich quick. Once they have secured the passage of this bill and get their share of organization expenses, what interest will they have in the societies formed?

The Canadian Grocer strongly urges associations and individuals to take decisive steps to see that this Bill does not go through. They should have more weight with the members who represent them in parliament than a few promoters out for private gain.

BUSINESS MEN AND PLEDGES.

Should a business man who is a candidate for a public office definitely pledge himself on moral and social questions which are before the electorate, when requested to do so, and especially when his business might be affected thereby?

A business man who during the last municipal contest in an Ontario city was a candidate for the mayoralty, declared in an address, that a business man should for that reason not be compelled to pledge himself. The particular pledge he was requested to make was in regard to local option.

The question is undoubtedly a delicate one. No man should be afraid to define his position in regard to any moral or social question. The "trimmer" never cuts much of a figure in public or any other sphere of life. It is an evidence of circumscribed mind and weak courage.

The question is not so much as to whether a business man should answer such questions, as it is whether the questions should be submitted to him at all. Only too often the men who are the first to subscribe to questions submitted are men who are not noted for either strength of character or moral courage. They are not infrequently men of the ward type of politicians, who are willing to subscribe to anything to catch votes. Principles seldom disturb them; the desire for office is their only concern.

The business man, or the professional man for that matter, who offers himself for public office, should stand on his general character and general fitness. If his character is good and his efficiency evident there is no doubt where he will stand in regard to moral questions which may come before municipal councils or parliamentary bodies.

If a man has neither character nor business efficiency, of what use is a pledge from him? It is always safer to judge a man by his life and conduct than by his promises.

By all means, let him who cannot stand on his life's record subscribe to pledges when running for municipal or parliamentary honors. Let him who has character stand firmly on that. That will never injuriously affect his business. Even if it did, it would be better to affect his business than his character.

THE QUESTION OF SALARIES.

What was said in The Canadian Grocer the other day in regard to the inadequately-paid professors at the Ontario Agricultural College unfortunately applies with equal force to educational institutions in general.

It is a crying shame that men who give years of their life in preparatory work should be so inadequately paid for their services. Their responsibility is obviously great, for upon the efficiency of the teachers or professors largely depends the efficiency of the boys and girls and men and women who subsequently have to take their place in life either in the business world, the professions or mechanical pursuits.

Business men all over the country complain of the poor equipment of the average young man who enters their employ. Is it any wonder when the men who are responsible for their training are so poorly remunerated for the responsible work to which they are called?

Germany, some years ago, awoke to the important part that technical and ordinary education played in the industrial efficiency of its national life. They are making big strides in Great Britain and in the United States, and while Canada is waking up, it is obvious to everyone who gives the matter any attention that she is far from being as wide-awake as she should be.

If we are stingy in the expenditure of money with which to provide ways and means of producing national industrial efficiency we cannot expect very material growth.

When trade and commerce offer such superior remunerative advantages as compared to the professions, and especially the educational profession, it is obvious that the better men will be attracted thereto.

The Ontario Government has now an opportunity, by increasing the remuneration of the professors at the Agricultural College, to take the first step in a very necessary reform.

CANNED GOODS WORTH HAVING.

A feature of the grocery market these days is the firmness in canned goods prices. Canned goods, particularly vegetables and salmon, are good holdings for the grocer, as there is little chance of prices getting any lower—in fact, the tendency is to higher figures.

The 1908 salmon pack was small, and last year—the year of the big run—the expectations of the packers were by no means realized, and the market now is found to be short. This is exemplified by the assertions of one eastern jobber who ordered 2,000 cases of one brand from the coast, but who received only 1,300 cases. The source of supply informed him that he was fortunate in getting that much. He is, therefore, short 700 cases in that one brand.

Referring to his supply of canned goods as a whole, he remarked that at this time last year he had $18,000 worth of goods to arrive, which he had purchased under contract from the packers. To-day he hadn't 18 cents' worth.

Retailers, therefore, who stocked their supplies early are lucky, as there is likely to be few canned goods on the market when the next season's supply is growing. They should follow the market closely and take advantage of any profit that may offer itself should future advances occur.

COMMERCIAL FEEDING STUFFS' ACT.

A new Act in which millers and dealers in feeds for domestic animals will be interested came into force on January 1st, 1910. It is known as the Commercial Feeding Stuffs Act, and compels the registration of brands of feeds other than those made from all parts of any particular grain or from all parts of mixed grains.

For example, if peas are ground and mixed with bran or hulls of oats, the feed and name of brand has to be registered with the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa, giving the percentage of protein, fat and fibre, the fee being $2 for each brand. Every manufacturer of such feeds has to pay a license of $5 in order to be allowed to sell them—only one license of course being necessary in the manufacture of as many brands as desired.

The penalty for a conviction for the first offense is not to exceed $50, and for the second $100, and, in default of payment imprisonment for 30 days.

Since it is practically impossible for a manufacturer to have exactly the same percentage of protein, fat and fibre every time, the law will not prosecute if there is one per cent. less of protein and fat than specified in the registration papers or two per cent. more of fibre than specified.

FOR A LOWER DAIRY TARIFF.

Julius D. Mahr, recently elected president of the New York Mercantile Exchange, in a recent speech, strongly recommended that duties on butter, eggs, and cheese coming from Canada to the United States be lowered. Prices of these articles are now almost prohibitive in the States, more especialy the first two.

He stated that commission men were unable to lower prices on these articles now, simply because of insufficient supplies, whereas, in Canada there was an overplus.

As a remedy Mr. Mahr suggested that the Exchange appoint a committee to investigate conditions and bring the facts before Congress, with a view to obtaining legislative relief.

It is a good sight to see our neighbors wanting to lighten the tariff on Canadian goods. A very profitable reduction to Canada in the duty on cream was put into effect last August, whereby it was lowered from 5c per lb. to 5c per gallon. Even if it were a mistake on the part of the officials in drawing up the tariff it has resulted in from a quarter to a half million dollars additional profit for the Canadian farmer in a little over four months. It all helps.

The Markets — Advance in Sugar Considered Likely

Montreal, Jan. 13th, 1910.

Inventory taking is well along and in some cases entirely finished. Reports are all most encouraging, both from wholesale and retail houses. Many retailers who thought they had bought enough to carry them through have had to order additional lots, sometimes twice or more. Naturally this benefits everyone back to the producer. Prosperity seems to be the order of the day in 1910, and 1909 certainly gave it a great send off.

Many lines are either higher or firm with a tendency toward higher prices. Even the unusually large sugar crop this year in Cuba and the West Indies seems to be powerless to cut down refined prices. Raws are going up most of the time.

The nut market is almost bare of "broken" walnuts, and some dealers have discontinued quoting them in their lists.

Signs of life are appearing in lines which "took a holiday" at Christmas time such as beans and rice. Everything seems to point to 1910 as a banner year.

SUGAR—Raws have finally stopped advancing. Refiners began to wonder if it were never going to stop. The cause of the firmness is said to be the increasing consumption of sugar. People who used a little are using more. Those who didn't use it have reformed and are helping matters along.

ONTARIO MARKETS

Sugar—Advance expected.

Beans—Market up.

Starch—Decline in one brand of ½ cent.

Toronto, Jan. 13, 1910.

The immediate orders after the holidays to replenish the lines which had been sold out, are all filled, and since then trade has been quiet. On the whole, however, there is no reason for complaint. Prospects for a good and healthy trade are rosy and looked forward to with great expectations.

SUGAR—The sugar market is strong and the situation may be better understood from the following telegram received on Wednesday from Willett & Gray, New York: "Statistical position very strong, believe average price next six months will be much higher than present basis." There is no change in our market, but it would not be a surprise if an advance would soon take place.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—There is nothing, but a regular trade to report in these lines, without any extra demand, or any change in prices. The price of Canada Pure Corn Starch went down from 6½ to 6 cents on Wednesday morning and this was in the face of a strong market in corn.

BEANS—Beans are gradually climbing and are now worth from $2 to $2.10 a bushel, and are hard to get. Farmers who are bossing the situation in almost everything, are holding back and are forcing the prices to their liking. They have got the pork sky-high and now they are shoving up the beans. Winnipeg, Jan. 13, 1910.

The present period is one in which there is always a laxity in trade. The bulk of business transactions are between manufacturer and wholesaler rather than between wholesaler and retailer at this season. Travelers have all gone out to their various appointments, but few have sent in large orders as yet, for the new year. Some reports have been circulated to the effect that many merchants have low stocks and that the last few days of December were red letter days for the merchants. Wholesale houses have sent out requests to their customers, asking for reports on their stocktaking in order that they might buy accordingly. These reports will come in shortly. It is generally thought that there is to be a grand rush for goods by all wholesale and jobbing houses of the west, and the reason for this impression is based upon the past year's condition and future propects of the trade.

Although orders are not heavy just now collections are good, and money seems to be circulating freely everywhere.

Several lines are firm and growing stronger, due to shortages and brisk demands everywhere on the continent.

SUGAR—The N. Y. market has gone up several points and although the Eastern Canada market did not follow, prices have become stiffer, and advances may possibly be quoted soon. The heavy holiday demand for icing and powdered stuff has greatly reduced local stocks.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—The following quotations on syrup are stated to be too low to last. The market has already shown signs of advance. Raw products are plentiful, but the export demand has become so great that conditions will be similar to that of a short crop.

GREEN RIO COFFEE—The market is firm at 10 to 10½ cents just now and no one need look for lower prices.

EVAPORATED APPLES—We quote these up ¼ of a cent this week, and the advance may continue if the demand continues to increase. Stocks are well equalized and plentiful.

BUTTER—The creamery product is firm at 30 cents to-day, while the second grade creamery stands at 28. The demand is good for the No. 1 dairy, which is steady at 30 cents, the No. 2 being about 24 cents.

EGGS—Ontario fresh storage eggs are 30 cents to-day, while all other storage eggs are at 28 cents per dozen. Despite the firm prices the demand in eggs continues good.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, Jan. 13, 1910.

Forty-five cents per dozen was the price asked by retail dealers this week for fresh laid eggs. The quantity of new laid eggs coming on the market at the present time is small. The demand for case eggs is rather quiet, at 28 cents per dozen. Since the passing of the holidays the fruit trade has slackened off considerably, and locally there is practically nothing doing in apples. The market is well stocked with all varieties with the exception of Spys, which are being held back by the growers until later in the season. Shipments to the British market have been hampered of late by extreme frost, and the danger of the fruit being frozen in the railway cars.

Potatoes are in good demand, and the price is firm. There is a scarcity of both Nova Scotia and New Brunswick stock. Prince Edward Island potatoes are now quoted at $1.50 per bag, an advance of 25 cents since last report. Canadian onions are firmer and higher. They are quoted at $1.50 per bag an advance of five cents. There was a considerable quantity of fresh made butter marketed this week, and it is of fine quality. It found a ready sale at 28 cents for the rolls. and 30 cents for the prints. The predictions late in the autumn that there would be a marked scarcity of butter during the winter at the present time do seem as if they will be realized. The market is practically bare of poultry.

ALBERTA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Calgary, Jan. 13, 1910.

The New Year's trade was somewhat curtailed, owing to the rather severe weather, which set in on Dec. 31. However, taking it all in all the holiday trade was the greatest on record and merchants all are more than satisfied with results. Holiday lines were well cleaned up. Both wholesale and retail grocers' stocks are in fine shape to start the year 1910; the prospects for big business were never before so good. Farmers are in good circumstances, having received remunerative prices for all products disposed of.

Fresh local eggs are scarce and high indeed. One Calgary retailer is to-day selling strictly new laid eggs at 75c per dozen. Northern white fish is being received in fine condition and retails at 11c per lb. Meats are not in such active demand, although prices remain high. There is a better supply of Alberta poultry than heretofore, the quality of which is good, and for once at least the western housewife can procure her supplies at prices equal with her eastern sisters. NEW COMPANIES.

The Jordan Co-operative Co., Jordan, Ont., has been formed to deal in fruit, farm and dairy products.

An Ontario charter has been granted to The Canadian Carriers for the purpose of manufacturing and dealing in carriers and packages for eggs, etc. Among those interested in the new company are E. G. Willard and Walter Woods, manufacturers, and P. J. Galvin, grocer, all of Hamilton.

TRADE NOTES.

Lorenzo Leduc, a grocer in Hull, Que., has been arrested charged with issuing bogus cheques on the Bank of Ottawa.

F. J. Lewis, eastern representative of Holbrooks, Limited, Toronto, leaves on Monday for an eastern trip which will include visits to the trade in all the maritime provinces.

S. T. Nishimura, head of S. T. Nishimura & Co., tea importers, arrived in Montreal from Japan last Tuesday. During his stay in this country he will try to visit all his customers before returning at the opening of next season.

Brazil, South America, is paying considerable attention to the growing and exporting of fruit in order to develop the fruit industry of that country, as much as possible. Representatives are in the United States at present with a view to creating a market there. The Brazilian Government is interested in the project and has taken steps to compel steamship companies doing business with Brazil to have refrigerators on board and the best possible ventilation.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, are announcing special bargain reductions in all lines of staple groceries before stock taking, and especially in French and Norwegian sardines, French assorted pastes and all standard brands of teas.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

How a Village Merchant Overcomes Outside Competition—The Giving of Special Favors to Customers—A Sorrel, Que., Merchant Specializes on Goods With Large Profits—Carelessness Sometimes Exhibited by Salesmen When Talking to Customers—A Guelph Store Opening at 6.30 a.m.

Meets Outside Competition.

Brownsville, Ont., January 12.—N. W. Corbett, one of the general merchants of Brownsville, believes in using the weapons of the mail-order houses to meet their competition. He claims that his plan has been successful. He had published a catalogue 8½x6 inches in dimensions just before Christmas. It contained 16 pages exclusive of the covers, the first being introductory in its purpose and the others taken up with different departments such as toys, chinaware, cutlery, lamps and clocks, furniture, dry goods, wall paper, hardware and groceries.

When it is considered that Brownsville has a population of less than 500, Mr. Corbett's progressiveness is to be commended.

In discussing the results obtained by issuing the catalogue, Mr. Corbett says: "I got it out for the Christmas trade and found it to be a very profitable investment. In the grocery line I met or beat prices of the Toronto departmental stores, as they are working the country harder every year. I think if all stores would work along the same line, they could hold at home a lot of trade that goes to Toronto."

No one will question Mr. Corbett in his contention. It takes aggressiveness and a spirit of determination sometimes to overcome outside competition and protect home business. There are many grocers and general merchants throughout the country who would consider the getting out of such a catalogue as a pure bill of expense. They think that if they were to spend five or ten dollars on a catalogue, that so much money had been wasted.

Mr. Corbett's catalogue is nicely illustrated and contains several introductory talks at the tops of the different pages before prices are quoted.

Gives Special Favors to None.

Moncton, N.B., January 12.—A merchant in Moncton is opposed to the stand taken by many in the trade of giving favors to one customer which another does not receive. Often too, favors and privileges are granted one person at the expense of another and this he strenuously objects to in his store.

"It is a simple matter" he says, "to recognize every customer's entrance. Then wait on them in order. Look at it in this way: a customer lost, means perhaps several more lost, as the average grocer knows only too well. Dissatisfaction is a disease that spreads only too rapidly. Tact and politeness are needed, but, do not favor anyone."

Selling Goods With Small Profits.

Sorrel, Que., January 11.—There are so many lines in the average grocery business that yield a good margin that it is somewhat surprising to find in many stores that the goods which are pushed the most are the ones which yield the smallest profits. The reason assigned for this by a Sorrel grocer, was that those lines which yielded the least margin, were, for the most part, the easiest to sell, and clerks were very apt to follow the line of the least resistance.

"Staples, such as sugar, will sell themselves," said the merchant. "See that clerks are pushing the lines which do not find such a ready sale, but yield much larger profits. No one is in the grocery, or any other business, for his health only."

The Carelessness of a Clerk.

Brantford, Ont., Jan. 12.—Many customers are undoubtedly lost, or at the very least highly aggrieved, at the easy-going, apparently careless attitude of some retail salesmen while being served. Your correspondent was in a Dalhousie street store on Saturday, and observed a clerk, who apparently knew better, but who, probably through sheer carelessness, stood in front of the customer with his hands in his pockets, in a "devil-may-care" position. Such an attitude is easy to assume, and in time grows to a habit difficult to eradicate. A smart-looking salesman will gain customers for his firm, where a slouch one will lose them.

Open Their Store at 6.30 A.M.

Guelph, Ont., January 12.—Robinson Bros. have bought the grocery business on Suffolk street, formerly conducted by Homer Precious. The two young men are the youngest grocers in the city, but apparently they are not the least enterprising. One noticeable thing about their store is that they are open at 6.30 in the morning. There were noticed some hand bills that this firm had printed announcing in bold black type their intention to be ready for business at this apparently unseasonable hour in the morning. When asked the reason, "Bob," the older member of the firm stated that owing to the fact that they were located in a residential section of the city they intended to make capital of their conveniences to the homes in their immediate vicinity.

"There are generally some of the housewives in the many homes, around here that forget to order something, and find themselves without the things they need for getting breakfast, and the fact that we can be right on the job, with the very thing they want pleases them and gets us in right." This was the terse explanation that he offered.

Clerks Must Read the Ads.

Montreal, January 11.—"In case I put an advertisement in one of the dailies, said a St. Catherine St., Montreal grocer, "I post a copy of the ad. in a prominent place in the store, and see that my clerks know exactly what is special. These specials are chosen for the express purpose of getting rid of the stock on hand and I see that I get all the possible results from my advertising."

This may look like a very small thing to be careful over, but it is in just such small things that success or mediority in business lies.

Convince Yourself First.

Halifax, N.S., January 12.—To be convinced that you are telling what you really know to be the truth, is something absolutely necessary to running a store, thinks one of the leading grocers of Halifax. "We must believe ourselves," he says, "when we tell a customer that our tea is the best at the price in the city. We will not convince a level headed customer unless we ourselves think so. It pays to have goods stocked that one can conscientiously assure a customer they are the best for the money."

If you have wondered why you are not convincing in some of your statements think this over.

Instal Collecting Cabinet.

Bracebridge, Ont., January 12.—Kirk Bros., of Bracebridge, have placed in their store an account collecting cabinet. This is a splendid asquisition added to the many useful fixtures to be found in this model grocery store.

During Xmas week one of the large grocery store had a magnificent display of cut flowers, making the store one of attractiveness. It was commented favorably on by many of the townspeople and farmers, and proved to be a good advertisement. This is a move in the right direction and if handled correctly a good profit can be made.

To Cover the West Indies for the MacLean Papers

David Williams Leaves Canada for the South to go Over That Field Again—Trade Relationship Between Canada and the Islands Becoming More Intimate—Value of an Extensive Circulation There.

When the steamship "Sobo" sailed from Halifax on Wednesday the 5th instant, among her passengers was David Williams, special subscription solicitor for MacLean's Trade Newspapers and Magazines. He will be away several months, for the task to which he has been sent is no small one. He is to cover the Bermudas, the British West Indies, and British Guiana. His instructions are implicit; he must thoroughly cover the field, no matter how long it takes him to do so.

MacLean's Trade Newspapers and Magazines have already a good circulation in the Bermudas, the West Indies and British Guiana. The late John Cameron, for many years a trusted and efficient subscription solicitor of the company, well and truly laid the foundation of our circulation in that part of the British Empire, when he some years ago spent three or four months there.

David Williams, is now to follow in his footsteps; indeed he is to do even more. He is to blaze the way to one or two places which Mr. Cameron had not the opportunity of reaching.

Mr. Williams is a worthy successor to the late Mr. Cameron. He has for some time been on the subscription staff of the MacLean Publishing Co. in Ontario and during the last five or six months has been devoting his time entirely to subscription work in the maritime provinces. The success which has characterized his work in Ontario and the maritime provinces will no doubt follow him to the West Indies, for he believes to a degree of ardent enthusiasm, in the MacLean Trade Newspapers and Magazines. To this quality is added that of untiring industry. He will certainly materially add to the already substantial circulation of the MacLean Trade Newspapers and Magazines in the West Indies.

Canada's relationship with the Bermudas, the West Indies and British Guiana is gradually improving. Not only is sentiment getting warmer but the volume of trade between them and this country is assuming more important proportions. It now aggregates in value between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000. But this is only a small part of what it can be made. In blazing the way for this desired end no factors are more potent than the trade newspapers. Their work is specialization, and it tells.

To exporters the circulation which the MacLean Trade Newspapers and Magazines has already attained in the Bermudas, the West Indies and British Guiana, plus that which is to come, is most important, and is worthy of their careful attention. There is certainly no advertising mediums that offer such possibilities to those who wish to reach buyers in that part of the British Empire, besides the wide and general circulation in the home field. Another matter which should not be overlooked is the advantage which accrues from the circulation of the MacLean Trade Newspapers and Magazines in China, Japan, Australia, South Africa, Great Britain, and the United States. It, of course, does not approximate to the circulation in the home field nor is it relatively as large as that in the West Indies, but it counts and that not insignificantly.

The late Mr. Cameron had only been in the West Indies a few weeks when he sent a hurried call to the head office for a fresh supply of subscription order forms, the new subscriptions which he had taken up to that time having far exceeded his expectations. We hope this will also be Mr. Williams' experience.

In the meantime we wish him bon voyage and good luck.

DAVID WILLIAMS.

Special subscription solicitor for MacLean's trade newspapers and magazines, who is on his way to the West Indies and British Guiana to supplement their already large subscriptions there.

SELLING FORMOSA TEA.

Samuel C. Reat reports as follows from Tamsui on prospective changes in the selling of Formosan tea: A report from Japan that under the promotion of some prominent tea exporters of Yokohama a tea-exporting company, with a capital of $500,000 gold, is about to be established at Taihoku, Formosa, is not credulously received here. It is believed that if any Japanese company engages in the business of exporting tea on a large scale from Formosa it will be the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, the company which now controls the camphor output under governmental supervision. Under present conditions the exporting of tea from Formosa is practically confined to British and American companies, and it would be some time before any new firm could secure a large export trade. If, however, the Formosan government should give to a Japanese or a Formosan company the $30,000 appropriated annually by the government for advertising Formosa tea, the favored firm would have a very substantial bonus with which to begin its operations, and some advantages over the foreign firms. Without this governmental support the foreign houses do not consider the prospective company a possible competitor. The exports of Oolong tea from Formosa to the United States, which takes 97 per cent. of the crop, amount to over 16,000,000 pounds a year.

CALENDARS FOR 1910.

The Ontario Lantern and Lamp Co., Hamilton, Ont., have issued a richly colored calendar showing the interior of a hallway, the foot of the stairway and a woman ascending. It is a large calendar, 3 feet long by a foot and a half wide.

Freeman & Cobb Co., Boston, Mass., have issued a Fast day calendar which is very handsomely gotten up. The chief advantage of the calendar lies in the size of the numbers, which can be readily seen across an office.

D. Hatton Co.'s calendar is a reproduction of a painting. It shows a beautiful girl by the name of Alice, and is certainly a work of art.

An artistic and useful calendar is that of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., who every year send around one of the best calendars circulated. The 1910 design is an unusual one, the feature of which is the bust of an Indian on a red background. He is holding a cream colored cutout giving the panoramic view of the company's mills at Keewatin and Portage La Prairie. On either side of the cutout are colored reproductions of Five Roses and Harvest Queen flour in bags and barrels. In the two lower corners are given the capacity of the firm's mills and elevators and a list of their various offices.

KEEPING FROST FROM WINDOWS.

At the present time many stores have trouble with moisture obscuring their bulk windows. The warm air in the store is condensed by the cold glass and deposits the water it contains. Many schemes for getting around this by means of ventilation, etc., have been suggested at different times, but there's a little trick that seldom fails to solve the problem. This is to rub the glass with glycerine. Only a small quantity is required and it can be rubbed on with a cloth.

"They say jealousy is a terrible thing," said an old grocer the other day. "But it is easy to handle—in business. Jealousy is a dare. That's all. One fellow does something better than you and you're jealous. Go him one better and it's all off. Great thing to work beside a man of this kind. For the love of goodness, don't be "jealous." That's taking back water. That's falling down. Best thing can happen you is to get beside a better man than yourself."

To the Manufacturer or Wholesaler——

If it were possible to employ a traveller who could call on 7,000 of the best dealers all through Canada every week, what salary would you figure he'd be worth—even supposing he did nothing more than go in and shake hands with these dealers, under such circumstances they'd be glad to see him.

Would he be worth $200, $300 or $500 per week? Many a house would pretty nearly let him fix his own salary.

Equip an advertisement in the Canadian Grocer with a verbal handshake for every dealer in Canada, and a frank, brief, pointed talk about your goods and you add a traveller to your staff who will make 7,000 calls a week for you at a salary of $4 to $8 a week—less than you would pay a first-class stenographer.

Of course this traveller won't displace any of your regular salesmen, but he will help them to sell more goods and open up more new accounts.

Intimate Knowledge of the Stock Needed in Buying

Arguments Collected from Western Canadian Merchants on Why Buying in Small Quantities is the Better Method—More Money Left in the Business—When to Buy on Speculation.

By L. C. Harkness.

The present trend in the retail grocery business seems to be that of greater concentration upon the buying end of the business. The influences which have brought about this condition may not be difficult to discern. As years go on business efficiency in every line is becoming more and more pronounced.

The science of specialization has been taking deep root everywhere. The merchant of fifty years ago is not the merchant of to-day; not necessarily because there was a laxity in concentration on everyday business principles in the older days, but because the merchant of to-day is compelled, by the very nature of the business world in which he lives, to make an acute specialized study of his business.

Every dollar he invests must bring such returns as will justify that investment in the light of modern business opportunities. And every merchant who buys goods and stock them for sale is investment his money.

Another influence which may have contributed toward better buying tendencies is the fact that in recent years, more than ever before, merchants have been buying in smaller lots and more frequently. In this way he has purchased goods for immediate use and the money which he had paid out formerly for future goods is retained in the business.

Within the past year this condition has become prominent in western Canada more particularly. Wholesale houses are opening up branches everywhere making it more convenient for the merchant to purchase his stocks. He may order stocks for a period of two or three months where formerly he ordered stocks for a year. Everywhere in Canada the wholesale competition has become keener and better opportunities for short orders prevail. The result is that merchants have become aware of the value of retained capital.

Why Buyers are More Careful.

It is not necessary to enumerate the conditions which have brought about a more careful consideration of buying problems, only in so far as they throw light upon solutions.

As an outcome of the condition referred to above the tendency would naturally be toward smaller stocks in the retailers hands. This, however, involves other problems, one is, how is the merchant to secure the best buying price if he adheres to the principle of restricted surplus stock? And is it not best to make a special effort to take advantage of a large a discount as possible in the cash payment for a large quantity of goods?

And another problem may be, if an effort is made to keep stocks limited and under control, would it not incur more work in management, and would there not be risks in running out of goods which for the time being have either advanced or gone off the market?

All these questions are on the surface favorable to the idea of heavy buying; and it would seem that it is just such arguments as these that have lead many merchants into the error of keeping surplus stocks which become a bugbear and a hindrance to the general health of the business.

Perfect Control of Stock Needed.

In the first place, there are few who would wisely conduct their business on the principle of small stocks or stock restriction, but rather upon the principle of stock control. The argument is in favor of better and more careful manipulation of salable goods. Just what might be called a small or a large stock varies according to the custom which the business supports. But there are grocers everywhere in the country who carry as large stocks as their competitors who do double or one-half more retail business.

The object of the merchant in the smaller business, of course, is to buy at the best possible figures. That merchant needs to be reminded, however, that his turnover is not gained so quickly as that of his competitor, and his goods are eating away profit as they decorate the shelves.

Regarding taking advantage of discounts or cash payments, this is always wise, but it is obvious that money is worth too much to have it tied up in superfluous stocks even if a considerable discount is granted off cash payments. So in an effort to buy in quantities and obtain a liberal discount the business might be seriously strained if the money is not returned by a rapid turnover.

That is system of careful buying would mean more work for the management does not necessarily follow. But it does follow that there would be more expert management. It would mean a keen scrutiny of business details, and this is necessary in every business.

An expert stock keeper is as essential in a grocery store as an expert salesman, and it seems reasonable that the man who keeps his stock well under control to such an extent that no capital is lost in overstocking, and at the same time to have every article on hand when it is asked for, is the most valuable man in the business.

It is true there are times when it is well to buy and "lay in" stocks when a "short crop" or a "corner" condition prevails. This is a matter of business foresight; and speculation is a wholesome pursuit providing your capital and past experiences warrant its continuation.

There is no "wear-out" to the confidence with which housekeeping women everywhere welcome Fels-Naptha.

The honest quality of Fels-Naptha soap is earnestly and steadily advertised and it's always easier for the grocer to quickly sell such goods as Fels-Naptha.

To the Retail Grocers of the Dominion of Canada

Gentlemen:—

We wish to congratulate you upon the result of the business of the year just closed, and thank you for the liberal support given us, which has largely assisted us in making "KELLOGG'S TOASTED CORN FLAKES" a household word from one end of the Dominion to the other.

Our policy has been to keep the grade of our excellent product up to the highest possible standard—to insist that our Flakes are sold at a uniform price of ten cents per package, giving the dealers a reasonable profit, and by the use of our unique coupon plan, obviate the necessity of unnecessarily stocking up.

THIS POLICY will be continued through the present year, and we respectfully ask from you a continuance of your support.

KELLOGG'S TOASTED CORN FLAKES is undoubtedly the leading Cereal Food of the world to-day. By persistent and aggressive advertising, such as elegant bill-board posting, newspaper copy and extensive sampling, the demand will be largely increased.

KELLOGG'S is the only Corn Flake required in your business.

We want you to participate in the boom which it will enjoy in the immediate future. PUSH KELLOGG'S. SAVE YOUR COUPONS and you will have reason to congratulate yourself at the end of the present term.

Yours truly,

The Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co.

SURPRISED AT LLOYD HARRIS.

Hamilton, Jan. 13.—The Retail Groeers' Association met last Thursday for eleetion of officers and they evidently made some good choices. The officers and executive are efficient and progressive. The new president, J. A. MeIntosh, is a very desirable man for the office, and good things are looked for this year in the association. Important questions such as the Co-operative Bill, cash discount, good roads, a Provineial Asseiation, etc.—measures that will give the president ample opportunity to show what a pushing, progressive man can do, will come up. Hamilton dealers were surprised to learn that Lloyd Harris, M.P. of Brantford was stated to have brought in a bill regarding Co-operative stores. Numerous opinions were ventured, as to why, but so far it is only an echo that we hear. The following officers were eleeted:—J. A. McIntosh, president; E. Hazell, first vice-president; J. M. Semmens, second vice-president; James Main, treasurer: M. R. Hill, secretary; A. G. Bain, W. Smye, J. O. Carpenter, Arthur Lavis and J. L. Brown, executive committee; A. G. Bain and J. Kirkpatrick, auditors.

THE MERGER PROBABLE.

"In a week or ten days," remarked a jobber elosely in touch with the independent canners, "you will find that the amalgamation of the independent canners will be put through. You will find that practically every canner will be in the merger. The promoters have so conducted this affair that they have been able to meet the demands of those who at first were somewhat opposed to the scheme."

The contentions of the American Can Co., which were at first strong againsr the merger on account of having sueh an interest in the sale of cans among the independents, have been dropped apparently.

The jobber further intimated that there would eventually be an amalgamation with the Canadian Canners, Ltd.

STAND AGAINST THE BILL.

Editor Canadian Groeer,—The letter in your last issue signed "Time to Aet," should be read by every wholesale and retail merehant in Canada. As it was written from the wholesalers standpoint, it shows how keen they feel on the subject. How much keener should the retail merchant in any line of business feel the position he will be placed in if any bill, the counterpart of Mr. Monk's, should beeome law. I think every member of the House of Commons should be seen by the merchants in each county, and have the matter thoroughly gone into. Let every clerk who reads your paper, take a personal interest in this matter and use his influence to help along the work of deafeating a bill whieh would mean disaster to thousands of Canadian merehants.

"RETAILER."

Hamilton, January 13, 1910.

TRADE NOTES.

Wm. Lesson, Sr., grocer in Merritton, Ont., died on Monday.

W. C. Christmas, broker, Montreal, and W. H. Escott, of Winnipeg, are in New York on business connected with Hills Bros., whom they have ageneies for in their respective cities.

A. Grills, a grocer on Broadview Ave., Toronto, has assigned to N. L. Martin & Company. A meeting of the creditors was held on Wednesday afternoon in the assignee's office.

Robert Simpson, formerly of the Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, Ont., who recently moved to Hamilton, is going into the wholesale tea and coffee business in the latter city. He will also act as manufacturers' agent for other lines of goods.

T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B., was in Toronto during the week. In referring to business conditions of 1910, Mr. Estabrooks predicted a banner year for trade and commerce. Speaking on the tea market, he said there was no possibility for lower prices. This was due in a large measure to the decrease in the tea growing industry in China and Japan where the inhabitants find it more profitable to cultivate other plants and develop other industries.

Hog Situation Yet Discouraging to the Packer

Their Margin of Profit Cut Down—If Prices of Hog Products are Raised Consumption Will Decrease—Butter Fairly Plentiful With Tendency to an Easier Market—Stored Eggs Firmer in Prices.

There is nothing in the hog situation in sight that looks encouraging to the packers. In order to get the hogs, to hold their trade, they are forced to pay more for them than the prices of cured meats warrant, and to raise the prices would almost be certain to check the consumption. People will only pay to a certain limit for an article, and when it goes beyond that they switch to something else. It is believed that cured meats have reached that point, and therefore the danger of raising the price. One of the packers has stated that he remembered when dressed hogs were selling as low as 4c a lb. and when the farmers got 6c they felt rich.

Rather than strain the consuming end it would perhaps be in the interests of all concerned should the packers decide to pay a lower price for hogs. The farmer is not entitled to receive more than an article is worth, at the expense of the consuming public. Hogs would be a good paying price if they were 2c a lb. cheaper.

MONTREAL.

The general trend of the provision market seems to be toward higher prices. Live and dressed hogs remain steady at last week's high quotations. Pure lards in wooden packages are up ¼ cent. Other lines remain firm. Sales are brisk and rapidly increasing.

PROVISIONS—Twelve to twelve and a half dollars per cwt. for hogs necessitates a corresponding raise in cured meats. With the keen competition between packers, it is claimed that the prices of cured meats are too low, and will leave them no margin. In speaking with one of them, he said, "I am simply disgusted." Prices, no doubt, are so high now, that packers are afraid another raise will check consumption, and yet to work without a margin is discouraging and even ruinous.

BUTTER—Without any outlet for our butter, and the liberal supplies of fresh made butter, it is nearly safe to predict that it will get cheaper. The exports of our butter to England this year are 53,911 packages less than last year, and as the yield was a fair comparison with last year it is reasonable to suppose, even with the understanding that home consumption has remarkably increased, that a large quantity is still in the hands of our dealers. It is the general impression that the quality of fresh butter this winter is better than last year. If this is the case there is not so much danger of a break, and prices are likely to be steady.

EGGS—New laid eggs are a little more plentiful here and do not now bring any price a farmer may ask. They, however, have no effect on the price of stored eggs, which are firm, and even in some cases a cent higher. It will be at least five or six weeks before there will be sufficient new laid eggs to affect the market, and the price will depend on the weather and in the way the stocks diminish. Rather a better demand than was expected caused a firmer feeling with an upward tendency. On the whole the egg situation is in good shape.

Wants Tariff Lowered on Canada's Dairy Products

New York Provision Merchant Sees no Other Way of Reducing Cost of Butter, Cheese and Eggs to New England Consumers—Market There Suffering With Ample Supply Close at Hand in Canada.

Julius D. Mahr, provision merchant of New York city and president of the New York Mercantile Exchange, is advocating the lowering of the duty on Canadian dairy products and eggs in order to reduce the high cost of these to the consumers of the eastern United States. This he advocates in the strongest terms and declares that under the rates on these dairy products at present the commission merchants handling the New York and Eastern trade are unable to lower the prices on domestic food articles, despite the crying demand of thousands of consumers that something radical be done to their advantage.

In his first report to the Mercantile Exchange, and in the statements, Mr. Mahr commends the agitation in regard to the existing tariff rates, which, he says, place out of the reach of the consumer the most necessary and needed products of the Canadian market. He recommends in his report to the Exchange that the Committee on Legislation made up among its members, be directed to investigate and report on the possibilities of obtaining legislative relief from Congress on these points.

Endangers Produce Trade.

Unless some remedial action is taken in the near future, Mr. Mahr declares, the growing tendency and inclination of the consuming public to use questionable manufactured products for butter will be in itself a problem. And, he says, if this proves to be true the dairy produce trade in New York and throughout the east will suffer proportionately. The report says:—

"It is regrettable that the dairy produce trade offers its services for such a low remuneration, particularly since operating expenses and all other necessary expense items connected with the business are larger now than they ever have been. On the other hand, prevailing market prices are decidedly higher. No line of business, allowing for capital invested, risk and other conditions, offers its labor and facilities for such a low percentage of gain. Ought not the trade, under all the circumstances, adopt more liberal income charges for the handling of dairy products?

"The Executive Committee passed a resolution several months ago addressed to the Tariff Committee of Congress advocating the lowering of the duties on butter, eggs and cheese. This recommendation was not acted upon favorably by Congress, and yet it is one of the greatest questions affecting the consuming public of the United States, and more so at the present time than at any other in many years.

"It is beyond question a fact that if the present virtually prohibitive duties on dairy products were not in force butter, eggs and cheese would sell at more reasonable prices. If Congress really requires a revenue to pay the expenses of government. I would suggest that this Exchange co-operate actively with other mercantile bodies in the country and exert every influence possible to have the duties reduced to reasonable figures, and at the same time enable them to yield a revenue to the government."

ORIGINALITY IN DISPLAY.

By G. Hunter.

Many claim, indeed emphatically state, that their windows form their best means of advertising. Next to the newspaper the window undoubtedly is a powerful means of inducing purchases, but when one takes a look at the various windows and observes their dress, the lack of attention to individuality is quite apparent. While it may be true that the goods are not thrown in haphazardly, at the same time there is too much of a sameness—everything straight up and down.

Of course, it must be conceded that a good window dresser is often hard to secure, but a little study, by the salesmen, if they be at all interested in their work and their own future, will enable them to intelligently arrange the various articles in an attractive manner. And practice will eventually effect a degree of originality, for this characteristic can only be developed by consistent and constant study.

An hour or half an hour each evening spent in perusing some good trade paper, magazine or publication referring to window dressing will assist in producing good effective work. Watch the "other fellow's" doings; critically examine his productions; see if you cannot discover some vulnerable point where you might strengthen the effectiveness. By closely watching your competitor you will not only keep aware of his methods but any latent talent within you will be awakened and before you really realize it you will be making progress which will have the approval not only of your employer and fellow-employees, but of the observant outsider, and it is to him that you primarily appeal.

Yes, make the window effective. Make your wares known through the press; state in your advertisements the contents of your windows, and if you have what you consider a unique window design " proclaim it from the housetops," and the result will surely be to your reward.

Try it next week; take one evening; pull down the blinds and set to work conscientiously and banish modesty as regards your own ability. Set to it with a purposeful spirit and you'll win; your employer will win, everybody will be the better.

PEANUT CROP SMALLER.

According to Robt. Frazer in a report from Valencia, Spain, the area under peanuts in that district is calculated at 8 per cent. less than the previous season. The crop promised an abundant harvest up to the beginning of October, when, owing to some unexplained cause, its growth was arrested, with partial failure in several sections and a shrinkage in the total yield estimated at 25 per cent. below the average. Average production in normal years is about 98 arrobas of 28 pounds (2,744 pounds of peanuts in shell to the acre). Although prices are subject to considerable fluctuations, oscillating between $65 and $83 a ton in shell, the crop is considered a fairly remunerative one for the farmer, and also posses the advantage of being admirably adapted as a second crop to follow early onions and wheat, both of which are harvested at the end of June. The total production of the district is calculated at 14,000 tons, of which 5,000 to 6,000 tons are exported annually. There is an increasing demand recently for the fine whitish peanut which contains three and four grains in each pod, but the characteristic Valencia peanut of dark reddish color and two grains to the shell yields a heavier crop and considerably more oil.

Canada as a market for the highly nutritious cotton-seed products has apparently been overlooked. Both articles enter free of duty. For several years about $500,000 worth of the oil has been imported annually, practically all from the United States, but only 7 cents per capita for the Dominion's population. The Canadian imports of American cotton-seed meal has never reached $20,000 worth in a year—a negligible quantity—yet the dairy and animal-breeding interests of the Dominion are enormous. Canada produces annually $36,000,000 worth of butter and cheese (factory); $22,000,000 of dairy butter; $1,000,000 of condensed milk, and $35,000,000 of milk for home consumption. It is evident that the dairymen and stock breeders there are not acquainted with the economic feeding value of cotton-seed meal. Canada has extensive stock farms, which, in addition to furnishing the main meat supply for the 7,000,000 people at home, yearly produce for export over $10,000,000 worth of cattle, about the same amount of bacon and hams, and many other meat foods.—American Hay, Flour and Feed Journal.

COTTON-SEED OIL SHORT.

In 1908 the estimated output of cotton-seed oil was 3,500,000 barrels. During 1909, it was only 2,000,000 barrels due to the shortage in the cotton crop. The demand for cotton-seed oil has been heavy, although prices have been higher than usual, owing to the high price of pure lard. The latter is of course due to the shortage in the hog supply.

SALESMEN'S RESPONSIBILITY.

The store salesman who is always afraid to assume responsibility of any kind is pretty likely to remain one. A clerk who is not afraid of responsibility, even if he makes a bad mistake once in a while, is worth a good deal more to his employer than the other kind. The more responsibility there is placed on the clerks the greater will be their interest in the welfare of the business. Some grocers, when in doubt as to the selling quality of an article, ask their clerks, and if the latter say yes, they order it. This may or may not be a good plan, depending on the judgment and ability of the men. No long ago the foreman of a very large store declared against buying a certain article. The proprietor took some home and tried it. The article was a food. Convinced that it was all right he ordered some, against the wishes of his foreman. The second order was for thirty cases. In this instance the proprietor's judgment was the better. Getting clerks to try foods on their own tables is a good way of getting them enthusiastic over something one wishes to push.—Grocers' Magazine.

FATHER OF BEAN INDUSTRY DIES.

The father of the great bean industry which is one of the features of farming life in Southwestern Ontario died on Friday, January 7, in his 99th year. His name was Collins Handy. Born at Wellingport, Connecticut, on April 7, 1811, he came to Kent County in 1831 as a carpenter, built the first frame house in Orford township, and afterward engaged with his father-in-law, Capt. Baldwin, in buying and shipping grain, also filling the contract for the first mail route west from St. Thomas to Malden. It was not till some years after his arrival in Kent that he first experimented with bean growing. The industry has since then grown till it now approximated 900,000 bushels annually.

Some Fluctuations Occur in the Wheat Market

Prices Went Down on Monday But Market Recovered Again—No Change in Flour Prices—Cereals are Firm and Feed Advances.

Since last week the wheat markets have undergone several slight changes in ups and downs, putting life into the speculation feature of the grain trade, and affording margins to dealers. For a while this week the market had a decided weak tendency, but it has quite recovered itself again and the indications are that the $1.25 point might be reached for May delivery in the near future. Millers are, however, complaining that wheat is too high to give them a margin to manufacture it into flour.

This is a bad state of affairs and unless the demand for flour increases with an advance in price, the expected rise in wheat cannot well materialize. Millers are buying cautiously and would like to see a more settled market, with a better margin on which to work.

PERSONAL NOTES.

C. D. Cowles, a representative of the St. Charles Condensing Co., was a visitor at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer during the week.

The Canadian Grocer is in receipt of a Christmas greeting card from Frank Creed, Amsterdam, Holland, a representative of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, Ont.

A delegation of six representatives of the E. W. Gillette Co., Ltd., namely: Geo. D. Sinclair, Winnipeg; R. J. Helstrope, Nova Scotia; A. E. Potts, Manitoba; W. C. Murray, Montreal; C. E. Moyle, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and J. G. McIntosh, British Columbia, were in Toronto during the week and paid their respects to The Canadian Grocer.

R. R. Hendry, secretary of Rose & Laflamme, Ltd., Montreal, was married to Miss Olive N. Church, St. Lamberts, Que., Jan 5th. The groom is a progressive young business man, whose rise has been rapid and who, in the course of his business, has made many warm friends. He is a son of Alex Hendry, tea merchant, of Montreal. The Grocer extends its heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

Chase & Sanborn's traveling staff, in Montreal for the holidays, is now back on the ground in its entirety. H. C. McGinnis, who covers Manitoba and Saskatchewan, from Winnipeg, left yesterday, while J. J. Speirs, Western Ontario representative left last week. W. A. Craven, left for the Maritime Provinces Monday, and A. C. Smith for Northern Ontario. The representative for the far west did not come in, as he reported at headquarters in September.

Travelers representing the Improved Match Co., Montreal, were entertained at a banquet in St. Lawrence Hall by the firm. Directly preceding the banquet the annual conference had been held in the Montreal office, 29 William street. J. N. Harvey, president of the company occupied the chair at the head of the table, with Henry T. Graham, sales manager, as his right hand man. Among the travelers present were: J. W. Limoges, Martin Sichel, F. J. Temple, A. W. Drum, A. A. Lavoie, T. Graham and Charles Cousineau.

What the Grocer Said to Mrs. Brown

One day, Brother Grocer, last November Mrs. Brown while out on a shopping tour found herself out in the cold, facing a 10 by 20 blizzard of sleet and rain.
Did she run into Jones' store? She did.
Was Jones glad to see her? Tickled sick.
And they had quite a confab.
Maybe, Brother Grocer, you'd like to hear what Jones said.

* * * *

Well, the FIVE ROSES Advertising Department has in preparation a little 16-page booklet in the form of a monologue, or grocer's selling talk.
Just the right size to enclose in an envelope, you know.
Tells what Jones said to Mrs B.
You see, Brother Grocer, it rained so hard outdoors Mrs. Brown couldn't get away—so she listened

* * * *

Printed in three colours with a cover in four—we did ourselves proud this time.
Cover represents the inside of Jones' store, with picture almost big as life of Brother Jones gushing to interested Mrs. B.
Inside the booklet there's a dinkey little bunch of illustrations in colours to explain just what Jones is chirping about.
That artist certainly deserves a bigger salary.

* * * *

To finish up this wonderful booklet of ours we've added a series of FIVE ROSES flour recipes and household hints in order to prolong its life a little longer than usual.
You know, Brother Grocer, the soft spot the women have for good recipes.
Well, these are the genuine article.
Your customers will all sit up and beg for them—you watch.
Then on the back cover there's a neat little panel (blank) to put in your name and address, so that the booklet is really YOURS. Don't believe we have mentioned ourselves more than twice all told.

About Getting Flour wise—a Booklet

What, Brother Grocer, you'd like to see this little offspring of ours?
Just write at once—the edition is really limited.
If you like it, tell us how many you'd like to have and we will do our best to let you have them IMMEDIATELY we get them from the printer.
Costs you nothing, you know.
DO IT NOW, while you think of it—first come first served. Ask for booklet "G".

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

Importance of Punctuality, Courtesy, Accuracy, Co-operation and Doing Things Right at the Right Time—Loyalty to the Management and Thrift are Necessary to a Good Salesman.

By W. J. Irvine.

The salesman who has no ambition is surely in the wrong store. If he is not in a receptive mood he had better not come to business.

The people who have achieved the highest success are those who are able to grasp an opportunity when it presents itself.

If there is one weak link in your chain the whole structure will fall when the strain comes.

Punctuality is one of the great essentials of system. If your time to arrive is 7 o'clock, it is unbusinesslike to arrive a little later and it is wrong.

Every day each one of you, at some time or other, is being weighed in the mental balance by the management. They know who is fit to fill the important position when it becomes vacant. Remember if you sow corn, corn will grow, not wheat.

The men and women who have no ambition are a handicap to the institution. In this age of competition no business can afford to carry a handicap.

A lot of business is lost through lack of courtesy, and the clerk who overlooks its importance, not only does damage to his employer, but to himself.

Be courteous, because you feel that way, not because it is a part of the program of the store. If you do not get eight hours' sleep, you will not feel like it—you may have a grouch. What do the public want to know about that? When you have trouble, keep it to yourself, don't impart it to everyone.

Remember, the clerk who never does anything to foster the progress of the store in which he is employed, never does anything for his own advancement.

Do what should be done, right, whether you are recognized immediately or not.

A man is as he thinketh. There is nothing so plain as character written in your faces. If a man has a high line of thought, his life will show it.

If you do things 99 per cent. right and one per cent. wrong, you are straining the weak link in your chain.

The customer may not mark upon your courteous treatment, but if you slight her she will publish it.

A friend of mine went into a furnishing house for a tie. He picked up one and holding it up to his neck, asked the salesman, How do you think that would look? "Well, I'm not going to wear it, you know," he replied. Such fellows will be behind the retail counter at $10 a week all their lives. If you earn $10 a week you are $10 a week smart, not $10.05.

We measure system by results. We measure the salesman's ability by the amount of money he makes, because in commercial life, that is how it is regulated.

What One Dollar Means.

Let us see what happens to an incoming dollar. Eighty cents of it is stock, fifteen cents expenses, and there are five cents left. When you miss an opportunity to sell more goods it comes out of that little profit of five cents.

What are counter check books for? To keep an account of purchases—a receipt to the purchaser and a sales statement to the office. But clerks make mistakes. They do not add up correctly, nor do they always enclose the receipt in the parcel. Sometimes one will see them strewn upon the floor.

Why should a salesman make mistakes? If their positions depended upon their accuracy, I fancy many would be idle.

We must have things done correctly. We are living in a progressive age.

Three parties are concerned in a transaction, the customer, the salesperson, the management. The only clean-cut method of handling a transaction is by placing the receipt in the parcel. The salesperson has his own reputation to protect, and at the same time he is protecting the management, is giving the customer satisfactory service, and satisfactory service is good advertising. Nothing can come of poor method.

A good system is fair to all; a poor system, is unfair to an honest clerk.

No salesman should hamper the institution with which he is connected if he is not loyal. There is nothing more contemptible than a scandalmonger or a traitor.

Successful Men Wanted.

Be thrifty; save a little every week. Develop the spirit of sacrifice and self denial, the very highest ideal in a man's life.

If your work all the day long is done with the idea of getting away at 6 o'clock, your interest is not there.

The reason these things are so important to the retail clerk is because there are so few successful men. The world is waiting for successful men—men who know an opportunity and grasp it.

ADVOCATE A TRADE TRIBUNAL.

London Wholesale Grocers in Board of Trade Refer to Combines Act and Co-operative Societies.

London, Ont., Jan. 12.—A number of men interested in the grocery business, as members of the local Board of Trade, are out in favor of a trade tribunal, dealing with trade questions and with duties and scope somewhat like the Railway Commission. At the last meeting of the board, T. B. Escott, wholesale grocer, introduced the subject. He pointed out that a bill was to come before the House of Commons shortly dealing with trade combinations and co-operative societies. The former bill was not considered in the best interests of trade. The Hamilton Board of Trade had taken a stand against it, and Mr. Escott considered that the local board should also take such a stand.

"I think a permanent trade tribunal, something after the style of the Dominion Railway Commission, would be of inestimable benefit to the businessmen of the country," he stated. "Complaints of unjust combinations could be investigated, and the difficulty adjusted. As the law stands now two men are liable to be arrested if they meet and agree to raise the price of butter. All the wholesalers and retailers in the country are interested in this matter, and I think we should do something."

W. Turnbull, of Edward Adams & Co., wholesale grocers, also favored the suggestion. He referred to the prosecution of the Grocers' Guild, a suit that had cost them $10,000, when it could easily have been adjusted without so much expense. The bill would come up shortly, and the London board should take a decided stand on it.

Mr. Escott also spoke against co-operative societies, and declared that they were unsuccessful, and had been in the past. The board intends getting a copy of the proposed Combines Act and to discuss the matter further.

TRADE NOTES.

D. H. Lusted is opening a general store business in Erskine, Alta.

Jas. McGeough, a Toronto grocer, was injured last week by a street car.

W. M. Burch has opened a grocery and confectionery business at 381 Woolwich, Guelph Ont.

R. S. Herron has taken over the management of sales of W. D. McLaren, Ltd., Montreal, manufacturers of Cook's Friend Baking Powder.

The Northern Produce Co., have decided to erect a $50,000 abattoir in Winnipeg. The members of the company are: D. J. A. Morgan, F. W. Halliday, G. Russell, O. Callaghan, J. McKenzie and J. Norin.

A despatch from Vancouver states that J. H. Todd & Sons, cannerymen and wholesale grocers, will shortly retire from business, their fortune being estimated in round figures at $4,000,000.

Norman P. Schaffer, for eleven years connected with McLarens, Ltd., Hamilton, Ont., and for three years western manager for the company, has gone with Brooke, Bond & Co., London, Eng., as their Chicago representative.

W. F. Athawes, proprietor of the Dominion Grocery, Calgary, Alta., has removed from the corner of 17th Ave., and 5th St. W., to the new brick store, corner of 17th Ave., and 7th St. W., where he is putting in a new stock of staple and fancy groceries, fruits, confections, etc.

Delemere D. Butler, for some time on the traveling staff of T. H. Estabrooks in western Ontario, has resigned to accept an important position offered him in Winnipeg, Manitoba. He leaves in a few days for the west and his friends hope to see him progress there in the same degree as did in the east.

A. J. Stephenson, of Glenoak, Caradon township, Ont., has pleaded guilty to two changes in connection with the packing of some 82 barrels of apples on October 19 last, in contravention of the fruit marks act, and was fined $23, including costs, on both charges. The apples were consigned to Winnipeg. Fruit Inspector Carey, of Toronto, laid the information.

FISH—Trade is comparatively active due to a shortage in many lines of frozen and pickled fish. Haddock will certainly be scarce as will halibut and green cod; the trade is looking for a good advance in those lines. Tom cods and smelts, on account of bad weather, are scarce and are selling at nearly prohibitive prices. In general the outlook is for higher prices with stocks limited.

GREEN FRUITS—The usual quietness which always follows the holiday trade is not yet over. Stocktaking, laying new plans, making alterations in the premises and arranging for the new year's business are absorbing the attention of dealers. Oranges, lemons, grapes, etc., seem to be accumulating, and stocks on hand are heavy, and are waiting for the retailers when they get through with their holiday goods. OPTIMISTIC REGARDING OUTLOOK.

F. G. Evans, of F. G. Evans & Co., merchandise brokers, Vancouver, B.C., who is east on a business trip, was a visitor at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer on Monday. Referring to the business outlook in the west, Mr. Evans was very optimistic. He states that 1910 will be the best year in the history of the west from a business standpoint and business men in British Columbia are looking forward to a greatly increased trade. Vancouver, with a population of close upon 140,000, is steadily growing, as well as other cities and towns in the Pacific province, and trade is bound to increase.

Mr. Evans is a believer in the future of the fruit industry in the Okanagan. "It is a beautiful country," he says, "and produces splendid fruit."

Fruit inspectors are on the look-out for the importation from the east of any fruit which does not measure to to the proper standard, and already several carloads have been sent back. It has to be of good quality or it can't get into British Columbia.

The Florida Fruit and Produce News in a recent editorial on the market situation in Florida stated that the market for grapefruits has shown some weakness, as there have been many shipments of inferior stock of undesirable sizes which has held the market low. Any fruit of good quality and desirable sizes has been selling fairly well. As soon as the present stock is cleaned up we expect a fair market, and any fruit of good quality that is not moved will undoubtedly pay handsomely for the holding.

Heavy Losses to Nova Scotia Apple Speculators

Thousands of Dollars Dropped—Much Fruit Packed Too Early in Season—Prices Went Down and Market Was Overcrowded.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 11.—Apple speculators in the Annapolis Valley lost heavily so far this season. One dealer is reported to have dropped $28,000 already and will probably be much more behind the game before the season closes. Practically no prices are offered at present for winter fruit, and a large proportion of the apples now being forwarded are handled on commission, as the speculators refuse to buy. Much of the fall fruit, being packed too early, was immature, and poorly colored when shipped and arrived at the market slack and mushy. This pulled down the prices, and they are still down.

In consequence of this the market here was glutted with apples at one time. Most of this fruit is of poor quality and therefore the sales are not very heavy. Good fruit is in demand, but the quantity offered for sale is limited to some extent as the growers are holding back the best stock for higher prices. The majority of the apples on the market are Nos. 2 and 3, and the prices asked of these range from $1.25 to $2.

The quantity of apples handled here so far this season for local consumption has been unusually heavy. All the steamers sailing from here for Liverpool and London have taken large shipments, some as high as 28,000 barrels. The total shipments of apples from Halifax, so far this season, is estimated at 350,000 barrels to Great Britain, and about 50,000 barrels to Newfoundland and elsewhere. Before the season closes it is expected that the total exports from Nova Scotia will reach 750,000 barrels.

MANY GROCERS ELECTED.

Great Interest Being Taken by the Trade in Municipal Affairs.

The Grocer again calls the attention of retail grocers and general merchants to the advisability of being represented in municipal circles. Business men are needed in the councils to look after the interests of the municipalities in which they are the heaviest tax-payers and they should therefore stand together to secure adequate representation.

Since last week the following extra names have come to hand of those elected to principal councils:

In Dresden, Ont., Wm. Bear, grocer, and J. W. Grece, of J. W. Grece & Sons, apple evaporators have been elected councillors. Robt. Rankin, grocer, North Bay, has been elected mayor; among the councillors in Parkhill, Ont., is F. V. W. Laughton, grocer; Jos. A. Brown, grocer, was elected deputy reeve of Collingwood and Robt. Gilpin, of the Dominion Fish Co., and Basil Patton, flour and feed merchant, as councillors; Geo. R. Fox, grocer, is one of the Leamington, Ont., council; in Dunnville, Ont., W. E. Werner, grocer, is on the council for 1910; Patrick Radigan, a Galt grocer was elected an alderman in Galt as well as Herbert Goldie, flour manufacturer; Donald J. Gillies, grocer, is a member of the Cornwall council; in Southampton, Ont., D. MacLeod, manager Dominion Fish Co., and Jas. Wells, general merchant, were elected councillors; R. N. Price, manager Campbell Milling Co., St. Thomas, Ont., is an alderman for 1910; and in Ottawa Walter Cunningham, grocer, was elected to fill a similar position; J. W. Vanatter, grocer, Goderich, Ont., was elected councillor; in Alexandria, Jos. A. C. Huot, general merchant, was elected reeve and Geo. Campeau, Jas. O. Simpson and Geo. Simon, all general merchants, as councillors.

In Owen Sound Jno. McQuaker, grocer, is the deputy reeve for the coming year, and Elias Lemon, of Lemon Bros., wholesale grocers and fruiters, was elected a councillor; H. W. Knight, of the Aylmer Condensing Co. and R. G. Moore are councillors in Aylmer for 1910, and in Hamilton the grocers elected to the council are Jno. H. Plunkett and Jno. Forth; T. J. Cherry, manager of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., Keewatin, Ont., was elected mayor of that town, and H. J. Cummer, general merchant, a councillor. Wm. Bone, grocer, is on the Wingham, Ont., council.

The above list contains names of only those who are connected with the grocery trade and does not include a large number of other business men in municipal life. It all goes to show the increased interest being taken by business men in the affairs of their respective municipilities.

CONVENTION AND BANQUET.

Following the usual custom of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., the whole traveling force assembled at the office here the first of last week, and have since been the guests of the company. During the week they attended several theatre parties and also a banquet at which many of the office staff and officers of the company were present. Advantage was taken of the meeting to present President Dobie and Assistant General Manager Macfarlane with two fine electric lamps. T. T. Cartwright, Newfoundland representative, in a few well chosen remarks made the presentation. Replying, Mr. Dobie and Mr. Macfarlane thanked the boys and hoped that all would meet a year hence. Capt. Holmes, one of the oldest representatives, was absent on account of illness. A box of roses was sent him with regrets that his genial face was missing from the gathering.

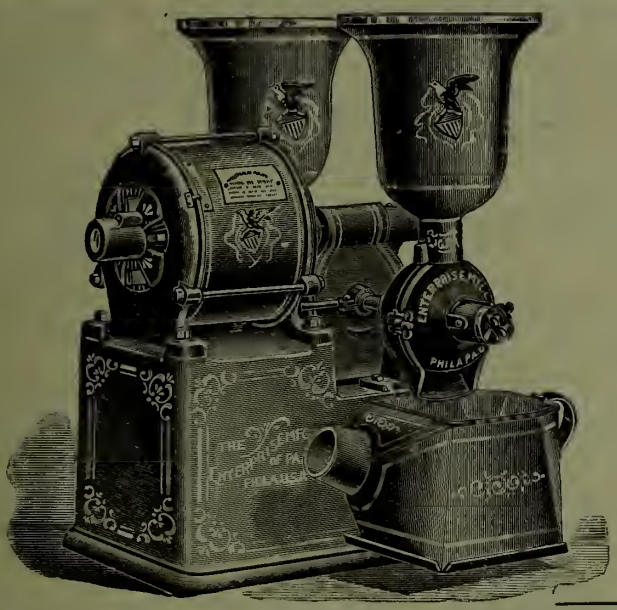
Opening New Accounts

Your business will not grow unless you do add new customers constantly. The old ones will drop out with surprising regularity and those that remain will not increase their purchases materially.

Have a good live talk about your goods in THE GROCER every week. All the best grocers in Canada will read it, and if what you say is worth while, they'll steadily be influenced in your favor.

You will find THE GROCER the most powerful agent at your disposal in the cultivation of new accounts.

"Enterprise" Economy



An Enterprising grocer, who does things right, uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill.

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No. 08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

MR. GROCER,

Have you ever stopped to think over the question as to which of the most popular Package Teas gives you the best returns? Compare our prices against other package teas you are handling. We think you will soon see, with the popularity Blue Ribbon Tea has with the General Public to-day, that, if you are not handling our lines, it would be to your advantage to do so.

THE BEST YOU CAN SELL

When you are disposing of our products you are reaping a good margin of profit, handling that which moves quickly and out of which you can get your money without an exhaustive expenditure. Goods that build up a paying trade and hold it are the only kind to handle. Such are

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND
Canned Fruits and Vegetables

You can absolutely rely on their uniform high quality. Uniformity in unbeatable excellence is the claim we advance—a claim substantiated by every can bearing the Old Homestead label. Old Homestead quality is maintained by very critical selection of stock. Our inspectors reject everything that does not come up to the high standard we have adopted. When stock has been bought it is packed in a factory that is a model of scientific sanitation and up-to-date processing equipment and methods.

ORDER FROM YOUR JOBBER

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

PICTON - - ONTARIO

Old Tea is Bad Tea

and bad Tea is a mighty poor thing for your trade.

Tea kept in stock six months loses one cent per pound in value, after one year two cents, after two years it is positively unfit for sale and is just about as bad as it can be.

The absolute necessity of selling only fresh tea cannot be too strongly emphasized. Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed metal packages it keeps very much better than in bulk, still it loses flavor. We do our utmost to have "SALADA" reach the consumer in all its garden freshness and fine flavor. We ask for our mutual advantage, the co-operation of every retailer in our efforts to serve the public with fresh tea. Our advice is to buy not more than three months' supply at a time. Eighteen years' experience proves to us that this is vitally important.

If any retailer—anywhere—at any time, has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, ship it back to us (freight collect) and we will refund the full price you paid for it. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of fresh tea by this sweeping guarantee.

The "SALADA" Tea Co. Toronto and Montreal

We pave your way to greater profits

Apart from the undoubted excellence of

"E.D.S." Brand Jams and Jellies

you must realize how profitable it is to handle a line of goods backed by regular consumer advertising. This is what we are now doing—creating a demand for you.

Any proposition that brings trade to your store is worth investigating, isn't it? Give "E.D.S." Brand a trial. There's money in it for you.

To the Trade:

You Should in Stocking

CEYLON TEA

Be Ever Careful to Buy

The Better Grades.

IT IS

The Most Profitable

Policy in the Long Run.

Selling Cheap Teas at Fine Tea Prices Might Show Big Profits Temporarily, but It Would Eventually Kill Trade. And It Would Discourage Growing Fine Teas.

How shrewd grocers are increasing their flour trade

Shrewd grocers are beginning to realize that it pays better to push a high-grade flour instead of the average kind.

Home-bakers know they cannot make as good bread with average flour as they can with PURITY flour, which consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry. There isn't a particle of low-grade hard wheat flour, nor an atom of soft wheat flour, in

PURITY FLOUR

That the army of home-bakers who demand PURITY flour is becoming larger and larger is evidenced by the increasing size and frequency of our orders from grocers in all sections of the Dominion.

Why tie up money in slow-selling lines when it pays better to handle PURITY? PURITY not alone makes for the home-baker, but will bring more trade and better trade to your store.

"More bread and better bread"

Get rid of the slow sellers. Give the space to the neat, attractive bags of quick-selling PURITY flour. And to let the home-bakers know you have PURITY flour in stock—just place a few bags in your window. But before you do that you'll have to send us an order—and now is the very time to send it.

MATHIEU'S SYRUP
of Tar and Cod Liver Oil

commends itself to dealers.

It has the double advantage of present popularity and future certainty.

Its popularity is due to the wonderful cures it has effected, as attested by thousands of testimonials.

Its future is assured because its history is one of steady and rapid growth.

Of all cough and cold cures none assure the dealer a greater certainty of immediate and future profits.

During Fall and Winter the demand will be continuous.

Keep well supplied and when ordering order also

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

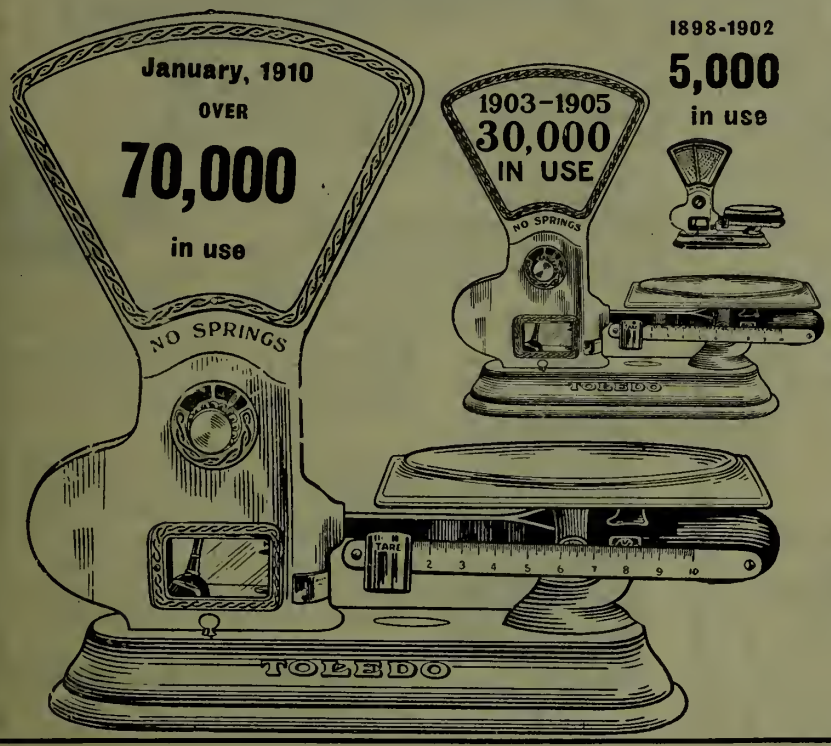
GROWTH—AN INDEX OF MERIT



The first springless, automatic, computing scale ever made was invented and built in Toledo in 1898. That scale, though most crude as compared with the improved 1909 models of Toledo scales, marked the greatest advance in scale building and retail store weighing methods in the history of civilization.

It Solved the Problem of Accurate Weight

It provided the merchant with the first practical, reliable device for measuring and determining the money value of his merchandise. Due to the superiority of its springless, automatic principle, the popularity of Toledo scales has grown world wide. Now England, Canada, Australia, Europe, New Zealand, South America and Mexico use these scales.

102 styles and sizes of Toledo Scales: adapted to all classes of stores. Price $37.50 to $165. We guarantee to furnish a better automatic computing scale for less money than you can get from any other source.

Where Responsibility Lies in Adulterated Foods

Chief Analyst of Inland Revenue Department of Dominion Government Says the Retailer is to Blame in Most Cases—Selling Compounds Legal if They are Sold as Such—Where Adulterated Cream of Tartar and Ginger Have Been Offered to the Public for Pure Goods.

Written by A. McGill, for The Canadian Grocer.

The "Adulteration of Food" Act makes the vendor directly responsible for the quality of the goods he sells. It is difficult to see how it could do otherwise. The purchaser, whether he is himself a dealer or a consumer, has direct relations only with the person who sells the goods to him, and he, quite naturally, looks to this person as responsible for their quality.

In cases where the vendor has been himself a purchaser, and not a manufacturer of the artiele he sells, it is often urged as a hardship that he should be held as guarantor, since he is, in the nature of things, eompelled to take on trust the genuineness of what the actual manufacturer has supplied to him. A little consideration will make it evident that no other eourse is tenable. The retailer has certainly had the goods in his possession. He is the only one who ean establish the fact of their source; more than that, he is the only one who can vouch for the fact that they have not been tampered with while in his charge.

The Adulteration Act recognizes the importance, to the retailer, of his dependence upon the honesty of the manufacturer, and provides for his being able to call into the case, as third party, the manufacturer himself. This he does by the production of a warranty from the manufacturer; and it is not too much to ask of any person, having intelligence enough to go into business at all, that he should be wise enough to secure himself by having such a guaranty furnished him, with all goods he buys. For the further protection of the retail dealer, the Act provides a form of guaranty, so that he eannot plead anything but his own gross ignorance or carelessness, if he fails to fully protect himself against all charges of having, with knowledge, any adulterated goods in his stock.

When Compounds Are Legal.

It must be clearly understood—and we believe that it is generally understood—that neither cheap goods, nor mixed goods, are necessarily adulterated. Compound lard, for example, is a perfectly legal article. But the retailer should know, and we believe he generally does know, that it is compound lard, and not simple lard. If a customer asks for compound lard, or is willing to accept compound lard, the sale is entirely legal. It is the same with Cream of Tartar substitute, or Compound Cream of Tartar; with Coffee Compounds or Substitutes, and so on. These things are not Cream of Tartar, or Coffee, and must not be sold as such. We will venture to say that in vastly the greater number of cases they were not bought as such by the retailer himself. The lard he buys at 4 or 5 cents a pound cheaper than the highest grade offered to him by the manufacturer, is almost invariably marked as Compound Lard on the container. He might suspect its quality from the mere fact of the lower price he pays for it. The same thing is true for cheap goods in general.

A. McGILL,

Dominion Government Analyst, Who Points out to Retailers the Danger of Selling Adulterated Food-Stuffs.

Now we have before us some recent bulletins of the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa. Turning to No. 184, which treats of Ground Ginger, we find the retail prices for which these samples were sold. The inspectors purchased, as a rule, three-quarters of a pound. Twenty-one samples out of 150 examined are found to be adulterated. Are these 21 samples sold at lower prices than other samples, which are genuine? Not at all. In a few cases the differenee in price is note-worthy, because it assures us that the retailer bought the goods at a lower price than he would have paid for pure goods, and he has given his customers the benefit of the lower cost to himself. But this is so far from being true all along the line, that the rule is for adulterated ginger to be sold at the same price as the genuine.

Lays Blame to Retailer.

The advantage is evidently a financial gain to the retailer alone. The manufacturer is not to blame for this kind of thing; and if the retailer pleads that he did not know the goods to be other than genuine, he either stultifiies himself, or worse.

Turning again to Bulletin 180, which deals with Cream of Tartar, forty-one samples out 180 are adulterated. Genuine Cream of Tartar appears to be sold at from 30 to 40 cents a pound. In some cases the adulterated article is sold, by retail, at distinctly lower prices, but these cases are exceptional. As a rule it is sold at 40 cents per pound.

Does any one believe that the retailer did not know that he was charging exorbitantly for what he sold?

The same tale is told by one Inland Revenue Report after another. And the inference is unavoidable. The retailer, in too many cases, is acting the highwayman, on a small scale. He is buying the cheapest, mixed or compound goods, and selling them at the price of high grade and pure goods.

Undoubtedly there may be here and there, instances of middle men, and sometimes of middle women, who are really unsophisticated enough to believe that lard is lard, and butter is butter, no matter at what price it is bought or sold; but it is open to question whether such cases have not claim on our contempt rather than upon our pity.

A GOOD RECOMMENDATION.

The Canadian Grocer,
Toronto.

Dear Sirs,—Please change address of Canadian Grocer to Lakeview, Ont., also change name from N. H. McConnell to George McConnell. I have moved to Buffalo and also gone out of business and for this reason I am having you send this to my father at Lakeview. I have always valued this paper very much, and hope that you may have a steady subscriber in the person of my father by sending it to him the balance of the time.

Grocers' Association Against Co-operative Bill

The London Merchants Anxious to Stop Its Progress and Will Forward Resolutions to Member in House of Commons—Movement on Foot to Hold Union Picnic of Western Ontario Grocers.

London, Ont., Jan. 18.—Judging by the manner in which the Retail Grocers' Association has opened the year, there promises to be some live business done by it in 1910.

At their regular meeting last week several important matters were advanced for discussion including the Co-operative Bill now in the House of Commons, changes to the London market, the holding of a gigantic picnic for Western Ontario grocers and the next annual banquet.

ED. J. RYAN,

President of The London Retail Grocers' Association Which is Opposing the Co-operative Bill.

The Co-operative Bill will find stiff opposition from the association. This bill is primarily to allow the incorporation of co-operative societies in Canada without charters, and is directly opposed to the business of the retail merchant. Being wanted by a few promoters who apparently have no other interest in it than the making of money rapidly, it is not something that the country needs, but rather something that the general trade of the country would be better without. Not having to secure a charter, a co-operative society does not have to report its business or standing to the government. A strong resolution condemning it will be prepared, and after being signed, will be forwarded to Major Beattie, who will be asked to present it and speak against the bill. Local grocers feel strongly about the matter, and contend that it will be a gross injustice to the retail trade throughout the country if the bill is allowed to pass.

Monster Picnic Suggested.

To hold a union picnic and make London the gathering place for the grocers and their friends from Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, St. Thomas and Chatham, was a proposal launched at the meeting.

As a preliminary step, it was definitely decided to hold a banquet about the first of February, and to invite the presidents of the Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, St. Thomas and Chatham associations to be present, and talk the matter over, and come to some arrangement.

"We propose to make London the first place for the holding of the picnic," says President Ed. Ryan, "and then every year, turn about, the picnic can be held at one or other of the places."

The grocers' picnic is one of the most successful held, and in the past Niagara Falls and Detroit have been the favorite places for the visit.

The association also took hold of the suggestion of Mayor Beattie in reference to accommodation at the market. They support his proposal to pull down the present market house and the fish market, and make the added recommendation that the whole market be paved.

The following resolution was passed, and will be sent on to the council:

"Resolved, that the Retail Grocers' Association are convinced that the market would be plenty large enough for years to come if the present market house and fish market were pulled down, as suggested by Mayor Beattie, in his inaugural address to the council. We strongly recommend the carrying out of the mayor's suggestion.

"We also recommend the paving of the market, as it is a disgrace in its present condition."

BOTH MANUFACTURER AND PURCHASER.

E. J. Walker, Jr., president of the Walker Bin Co., of the United States, has been in Canada recently for the purpose of investigating some infringements of their patent by retail grocers and manufacturers. Accompanied by W. C. McCuaig, secretary of the Walker Bin & Store Fixtures Co., Berlin, Ont., he made a trip through the eastern provinces, and states that a number of cases were discovered. All of these have been turned over to their solicitors in Montreal, who have been authorized to commence action against both the manufacturers of infringing fixtures and the grocers who bought them. Mr. Walker expressed regret that it would be necessary to enjoin the grocers, whom he felt were, in some cases, innocent of any intention of infringing his company's patents. However, his solicitors say the law is clear on this point and that it will be necessary to prosecute the purchaser as well as the manufacturer.

SUGAR FROM INDIAN CORN.

F. L. Stewart, Murraysville, Pa., U.S.A., writing in the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, New York, states that sugar can be produced from Indian Corn by means of certain treatments during cultivation. He says that the fine results reached in the work at the experimental plant at Murraysville, Pa., the past season, and the final tests of the machinery, prepare the way for the rapid introduction of the processes into regular use this year on the most extensive scale, wherever corn can be grown to the most advantage for these purposes.

The Prize Windows in Christmas Window Contests

Every Province in Canada Represented— British Columbia Carries off Two Prizes—Competition Brought in Many Splendid Windows and Was Most Successful Ever Held—Descriptions of the Winners.

The Canadian Grocer herewith announces the results of the most successful Christmas Window Dressing Competition which it has ever yet inaugurated. In giving the winners of the prizes it was deemed advisable by the judges to add the following three runners up in the contests in order to let the latter know how closely they came to the top. When it is considered that the competitions were open to the grocers of Canada, the vastness of the field makes it evident that the contests are more than of the ordinary importance—in fact they are of national importance.

The winners in Class 1—places over 10,000 population—and the three runners-up in their order of merit are :

FRASER, VIGER & CO., MONTREAL, QUE., dressed by Chas. Macklaier.

DIXI H. ROSS & CO., VICTORIA, B.C., dressed by Alex. McNeill.

Bruce & Sanderson, Toronto, Ont., dressed by L. H. Sanderson.

R. Higgins & Son, Toronto, Ont., dressed by R. H. Patchett.

Wm. T. Patterson, Belleville, Ont., dressed by Murray T. Patterson.

The winners in class 2—places under 10,000 population—and the three runners-up are :

KIRK BROS., BRACEBRIDGE, ONT., dressed by E. J. Kirk.

THOS. LAWSON, LTD., KELOWNA, B.C., dressed by Geo. S. McKenzie.

A. D. Ingraham, Sydney, C.B., dressed by Jas. N. Dempsey.

F. W. Hutton, St. Marys, Ont., dressed by S. C. Bartlett.

Wm. Hyndman, Smith's Falls, Ont., dressed by W. Hyndman.

The judging of the windows from the photographs was left in the hands of three window display critics, impartial and unprejudiced.

The nature of the displays were such that considerable difficulty arose in placing the winners, especially those for the second prize in each case. There were windows from all provinces of Canada. Several photographs came from the west and it will be seen that both second prizes went there. They also came from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario, showing the deep interest taken in window dressing throughout the country and, incidentally illustrating the national character and wide circulation of The Canadian Grocer.

The competition was never so successful. Grocers in the smaller places appreciated, as they did in other years, the fact that they did not have to compete with cities where there are usually better facilities for displaying goods. As a result photographs came in from towns all over Canada—large and small photographs and long and wide. They began to arrive at the office of The Grocer a week or ten days before Christmas, but the majority of them came the following week when the Christmas rush was over and merchants had the time to think of something else.

The judges in making their decisions divided each display into three parts :

Selling Power, Attractiveness and Originality. They aimed to award the prizes to the windows showing these three in the best combinations. The windows of course had all to be dressed with Christmas goods.

Winner in Class I.

In describing the contents of the Fraser, Viger & Co.'s window, and how it was constructed, Chas. Macklaier decribes it as follows : "The window contains crystalized and glace fruits in small boxes with sprigs of holly between on the slant near the glass and with a cluster of table raisins above. Large boxes of crystalized angelica cherries, pineapple with champagne bottles are leaning on the edge of the table.

"The table is covered with a table cloth and contains a French plum pudding, 5 lbs. homemade candy canes, imported Scotch buns (old-fashioned fruit cake), Edinburgh rock candy, English Stilton cheese, stuffed California prunes, glace melons, a bowl of carnations, beef in glass jars and Xmas crackers. At the ends of the window are several other dainties including American plum pudding, Scotch shortcake, brandied fruits and English candy.

"To the rear of the table is a bronze figure with a light attached representing "purity." The curtains are made of evergreen and strung back with wide ribbon of the same color ; carnations are stuck in the evergreens and Xmas stockings are peeping out between the curtains. A holly wreath is strung up with silver hangings and ribbons on either side of the front part of the window."

The whole window is the very picture of attractiveness and its selling power with the introduction of a few handsomely written show-cards is apparently above the average. To be effective as a selling window it must draw those who study it into the store to buy. This window is also original.

The Second Prize.

British Columbia carried off the second prize with the Christmas window of Dixi H. Ross & Co. The cut shown here scarcely does it justice as the depth is not brought out well by the photograph.

The display was arranged by Alex. McNeill, who has been with the firm several years. The floor of the window is covered with currants and sultana raisins, divided with candied peels and inlaid with boxes of crystalized fruits, cherries and fancy packages of confectionery, also bottled fruits, olives and extracts, etc., interspersed with potted flowers. The centre section of the floor is filled with cranberries and in line with that were placed rows of Smyrna figs and Arabian dates. At the back will be noticed tiers of apples, dried fruits and bottled goods, etc.; these are set in an alcove over which is built a strong shelf on which the goods are set to form the second story of the window. The alcove was lighted with frosted electric lamps, and asparagas ferns hung from above and trailed among the goods. The woodwork at the back is trimmed with white puff bunting, relieved with green; all the woodwork throughout the window was trimmed in this way, and the boxes and bottles were trimmed with tinsel, giving a pretty and bright effect.

The two upper stories of the window are filled with all kinds of Xmas dainties, and suggestions trimmed with tinsel and grape vines hung here and there. The panes of glass at the back of the upper part of the window were all frosted so as to give a more seasonable effect to the display.

This window shows considerable work and planning on the part of the trimmer and certainly should have been a good trade getter. It might have been made a little better with the addition of a few price tickets.

Bruce & Sanderson's display was constructed in three steps. The first step was covered with different varieties of nuts with boxes of table raisins dividing them. For a background of the next step, Christmas wines were used and the floor filled with fancy dates, figs, bon-bons and chocolates in different sized boxes. The third step was piled with oranges of various prices. In the centre was a display of preserved fruits and two baskets of grapes were hung from the ceiling, with a background to the whole display of holly and holly-wreaths, relieved in the centre by a Merry Xmas sign. A large number of price tickets were used also.

The window of R. Higgins & Son was also a good one. It had plenty of price tickets and was carefully executed. The front contained different kinds of nuts about four inches deep backed up by raisins, crackers, table figs and dates. About two inches above were two rows of grape fruit and oranges with honey to the rear. A small Xmas tree was also used and handsome gold and silver fancy edged paper, tissue paper bells, holly and wreaths formed other pretty decorations.

Murray G. Patterson, Belleville, Ont., also dressed a fine window, particularly from an attractive standpoint. Strung from the ceiling on colored string are Almeria grapes on artificial grape vines.

Second Prize Window in Class II., Dressed by Geo. S. McKenzie, With Thos. Lauson, Ltd., Kelowna, B.C

The Runners Up.

The judges had considerable difficulty in choosing the third best window. It finally lay between that dressed by L. H. Sanderson, of Bruce & Sanderson, Parliament St., Toronto, and by R. H. Patchett, with R. Higgins & Son, Toronto, and upon the merits of the two being more closely discussed, the decision went to the former principally because of a better variety of Christmas goods having been shown, and to the fact there was a great deal of work accomplished in dressing it.

Window Dressed by Jas. N. Dempsey, With A. D. Ingraham, Sydney, C.B.

The photograph was a splendid one—unlike some of the others. It was given 30 minutes exposure after 8 p.m. The color scheme was red and green and price tickets were freely used.

For originality Walter Fitzgerald, with White & Gillespie, Peterboro, Ont., had one of the best windows. It was composed of candy illustrating a mountain with a tunnel through it, and with a river and lake, foot-bridge and road below. It was apparently a good candy selling window too.

J. W. Island, 262 Dundas St., Toronto, sent another good window for the competition. It was trimmed by C. J. Bamford. The outline was made of slats about an inch in width. The outline of a number of stars and a crescent moon were formed of the same material, the interior of the former being composed of different kinds of peel and of the moon by currants. The whole was imbedded in raisins and nuts making a pretty effect. Stockings full of candy hung over the window and evergreens above that again.

A Hamilton window dressed by Chas. E. Dore for John O. Carpenter was attractive, neatly arranged and evidently a good seller. The details, however, could not be easily seen as the photograph was taken at too great a distance away. It showed, nevertheless, a splendid store front.

Another neatly dressed window was that of Harry Ranahan, London, Ont. It contained several pyramids, including glass jars of preserved fruits, olives and olive oils, French peas, etc. A distinctive feature about Mr. Ranahan's window is the large number of high-class goods he showed in it. The nut display was presented in a half dozen cut glass jars at the front of the window, the whole display bringing out strongly the idea of cleanliness.

Space does not permit going into the merits of the various other displays, but it is only fair to give honorable mention to those which deserve it. These are the displays of C. F. Walbridge, Belleville, Ont., Chris. J. Delany, manager of McHendry's store, Brockville, Ont., and Share & Campbell, Halifax, N.S.

Competition in Class II.

As will be readily seen from the cut of the window of Kirk Bros., Bracebridge, Ont., it compares favorably with the best in the larger cities.

The main feature of the window is the "teeter-tawter" which was in actual motion driven by electric motor, and reduced to a natural speed, this is kept going day and night, requiring no attention whatever with the exception of occasional oiling.

The mechanism was entirely concealed and looked as if it were actually driven by the riders. It will be noticed by the reader that the board is rocking over a pyramid of oranges, and to convey this idea the oranges were built up so as to touch the board. All cards and tickets appearing in this window were written by E. J. Kirk, who arranged the display and represents 9 months' practice in card writing, showing that many merchants or clerks may learn writing by spending a few minutes each day.

The second prize in this contest was won by Geo. S. McKenzie, with Thos. Lanson & Co., Kelowna, B.C.

The front portion of the window is separated by packages of currants into a number of sections which are filled with different kinds of nuts, behind which is a row of package raisins. On these are placed six glass fruit stands containing peels, oranges, lemon, citron, and shelled almonds, walnuts and California bleached sultanas. This front part is on a level or on the bottom of the window. From there to the rear, there is a slight incline. The next row at the left contains bulk currants above which is a box of raisins, next to the right are boxes of figs and dates. Behind them are spread out Valencia raisins. Here and there are boxes of crystalized fruits.

Behind this again on a level are mince meat in pails, puddings, oranges, Malaga grapes, etc. Behind each picture and stack of mince meat are package raisins and currants, which made the windows appetizing from the rear. Directly above and at the back of the window are four rows of Christmas stockings. "This window," says Mr. McKenzie, "was the best selling window I ever put in."

A Window From the Far East.

A runner up in this class was Jas. N. Dempsey, with A. D. Ingraham, Sydney, Cape Breton. In the foreground are different kinds of bulk confectionery in trays, arranged obliquely, above which are fancy boxes of chocolates.

The pyramid is constructed of Christmas crackers or properly speaking, cosaques, of bright colors, which tend to attract the eye as well as making a pretty display. Hung across the back are Christmas stockings of different sizes. On either side are arranged pails of confectionery, behind which are palms.

The price tickets are the main feature of the window, which proved according to Mr. Dempsey, to be a good salesman.

The window dressed by S. C. Bartlett, with F. W. Hutton, St. Mary's, Ont., showed careful attention to attractiveness and originality. With it, like a good many others, the photograph did not do it justice.

Other windows deserving honorable mention are those of Wm. Hyndman, Smith's Falls, Ont.; A. E. French & Co., North Bay, Ont., and D. Simpson & Co., Pickering, Ont. The latter was dressed by Allan H. Clark, and would have given a much better account of itself had the photograph been better.

The competition was undoubtedly a successful one. The Canadian Grocer desires to be helpful to every merchant in Canada, who is interested in window display and it certainly will be if the accompanying windows are carefully studied.

Retailers Behind the Times in Matters of Credits

So Maintains Simcoe Grocer, Who Points Out Lesson From Wholesalers Who Have Shortened the Terms—In Many Respects Grocery Trade is in Healthier Condition Than a Few Years Ago—Better Business Men and Work of Trade Journals Responsible.

By a Simcoe Retail Grocer.

With the advent of a new year, I wish to say a few things to my fellow grocers in Canada. In the first place I wish to utter words of praise for your most excellent trade journal. A trade journal is as necessary to the up-to-date grocer, as a medicine chest is to a medical man.

There is not a grocer in Canada but can make several times more than the subscription price by reading and giving thought to what he reads. When I started in business several years ago, everything in the grocery trade was upside down, everybody trying to see who could sell the cheapest. In many cases the consumer got trash. To-day the grocery trade is in a fairly healthy condition, thanks largely to your trade journal and more brains behind the counter. To-day the public are better served, have better stores at which to trade, and are receiving better goods. In fact there has been quite an improvement in the last fifteen years.

There is always room for more improvement. Would it not be better for the retail grocers instead of growling about the shortening of wholesale credit to take a leaf out of the wholesalers' book and do likewise—shorten retail credits. It must be apparent to every retail man that the wholesalers' loss is much reduced by the shortening of credits.

If this is true of the wholesale trade why would it not be true of the retail trade? If every grocer would make an honest confession he would say, he had lost more customers by allowing them unlimited credit than by sharp collections. Is it not rank injustice to us that we often allow our customers to run our credit business instead of running it ourselves, allowing them to have goods and pay when they get ready?

This is the way many retail credit businesses are run to-day. Conditions are such that this is no longer necessary. Have we any right, and are we doing ourselves justice when we allow Mr. Jones to owe us money for a year because he has bought a house and lot or this and that? Is it not something like buying it for him?

If the retail terms of credit were placed on a business basis and made as systematic as the rest of our business the losses from bad debts would be minimized.

If a customer gets paid by the week for his work see that we get our pay in full for our account at that time or quit doing business with him. If we grocers buy anything from a farmer, he wants his money—not in two months or a year, but spot cash—and the same if we have any work done for us. If we buy from the wholesalers, they want their money according to their terms of credit, and justly so. Then why should we give three months', six months' or a year's credit? It is nonsense and we are to blame.

ADVANCES IN COFFEE.

In reviewing the market changes in Brazil coffees the New York correspondent of the Tea and Coffee Journal, says that a year ago Rio No. 7 was quoted on exchange at 6⅛ cents, and before the year closed the quotation advanced to 8½ cents, showing an increase of 2⅜ cents. The advance in the Santos market was not so marked, the quotation being 8⅜ cents last year and 9¼ cents this year, a variation of ⅞ of a cent. The difference in the advance of Rio and Santos is attributed to the fact that low-grade Rios have become somewhat scarce and are needed for certain brands of low-grade coffees. This is due in part to the operation of the pure food law in shutting out all coffees grading below an 8, and also to the fact that Rio coffee is not so much in favor as heretofore. The Santos crop fell short of early estimates, and is of smaller bean than usual. This crop has been hurriedly marketed, so that instead of shipments being made during the twelve months the limit of 9,500,000 was reached in less than five. The smallness of the bean is due in part to haste in gathering the crop.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

The Serving of Apprenticeship by Clerks—D. W. Clarke's Communication to the Canadian Grocer Referred to—The Serving of Time Behind the Counter Considered Advisable.

By L. C. Mortimer.

There was a communication in a recent issue of The Canadian Grocer from D. W. Clarke regarding the apprenticeship of clerks, which must prove interesting to readers of the paper, and which should be thought over carefully. It seems to me that the best way to raise the standard of any calling is to raise the standard of the manhood in the calling. In fact, it is the only way, for there is no vocation in life worth anything without the personality. This is true in either of the realms of business or professional life.

A few years ago there passed away in Chicago a great man, who ever since has been known as the "Merchant Prince." The influence of that one man in raising the standard of the retail business can never be fully estimated. There is no more noble business endeavor in the world's commercial arena than that of the retail merchant, simply because of the opportunities that that business affords, as was demonstrated by the life of Marshal Field.

But how is the standard of the retail business or any one section of that business to be raised? Have all ideals been exhausted? and are there no more fields to be won? The trade is surely too great for that, and its greatness consists in the fact that there are opportunities undeveloped and resources undiscovered. It is obvious, however, that the presence of an expert in any business is essential to insure the most effective development of that business. The grocer, for instance, must spend years of patient toil to acquaint himself with every phase of his business. He must pass through the experiences of other men—his predecessors in the business, before he himself can contribute anything to the trade out of his own experience. It would seem then that it would not be for the best interests of the grocery business as a whole, that a grocer should have control of a grocery business before he is thoroughly competent to do so. If he has not passed through the training necessary to equip himself with that efficiency by which the trade is standardized, is he not weakening in some sense the standard of the business in which he participates?

This is a great question. Should a clerk serve his apprenticeship thoroughly before he is dignified with the name of a retail grocer? The clerks, who, by the way, are in the majority as to numbers, naturally say "no," but it is interesting to note that the merchant, once he gets there, invariably says emphatically "yes."

The merchant may or may not have served a rigid apprenticeship himself, but he sees the absurdity of paying a clerk top wages, who cannot weigh a pound of sugar properly, or who cannot open the door politely for a customer. If by such a practice, the merchant concludes that his own business is demoralized, he is justified in believing that the trade, as a whole, cannot be built up so long as such principles are in vogue.

Charles W. Waring, manager of Robinson & Co.'s grocery department, Winnipeg, who served a thorough apprenticeship in England, said recently that it was a difficult thing to get good clerks, and the reason for it lies in the lack of an apprentice system. "I have had clerks," he said, "that it was a pleasure to watch, waiting on a customer; they were trained, they were clean, saving of goods, polite, always secured an extra order if possible, and in every way contributed directly to the development of my business. At the same time I have had clerks to whom I paid almost as much, who daily drove away business. They were all good felows, but the poor clerks lacked that discipline which comes with apprenticeship."

Just what apprenticeship means always depends upon the connection in which it is used. Apprenticeship as a mechanic means one thing, and as a grocery clerk another. In any case it means the saving of time to master every phase of the special line of work where efficiency is a first requisite. Whether it is a prime requisite in the grocery business is the question before us. That it is necesary for competent clerkship seems to be evident. It might be further argued that for the security of the public health and comfort, the inexperienced man or woman should not be allowed control of a grocery business, and that the wholesale and manufacturing industries of our country should not be jeopardized by allowing those absolutely void of business training or inherent business ability to become responsible for a grocery business.

EGG RECEIPTS AT MONTREAL.

Many provision dealers have the idea that the receipts of eggs at Montreal during the year, 1909, were smaller than during 1908. But this is not so, as the following table indicates :

Jan. 1st to Jan. 1st—

	Receipts. Cases.	Shipments. Cases.
1907	213,922	28,175
1908	236,961	10,377
1909	252,579	398

The Board of Trade returns in Montreal give total receipts from May 1st to Jan. 1st, and these led to the popular belief that the receipts were greater in 1908 than in 1909.

ANOTHER MERCHANT PROTESTS.

Time to Take Action Against Co-Operative Bill Now In the House of Commons.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I was much pleased to see the letter in The Grocer a couple of weeks ago from "Time-to-Act," regarding the Co-operative Bill now before the House of Commons, and I think we Canadian merchants should at once get together as far as possible to prevent it going through.

Can anyone tell me why we elect members of parliament, primarily to look after our interests, and then have to spend time and money every year to protect ourselves against the injury they would do us if they were allowed to have their own way? For several years an attempt was made by a crowd to secure special privileges to promote these co-operative stores, which would have been granted by our trusted representatives, had it not been for the determined fight on the part of the retail merchants of the Dominion. If this legislation were asked for by any class of people, other than the promoters, there might be some excuse, at least, to investigate the matter, but when members of parliament support a bill so directly in opposition to the retail trade, with no advantages to any one, except the schemers of a syndicate, then it is time for the merchants and the people in general to wake up and find out what it is that influences the men who are entrusted with our affairs in Parliament.

Will the merchants for one moment allow a rich syndicate to have more influence with their own members than the people whom they represent? Will the merchants continue to vote party or will they decide to elect men whom they can trust?

Imagine a member of parliament recommending the retail merchants to retain, at a large fee, in adition to his parliamentary allowance, a lawyer member to look after their interests. Think of it again. You elect your member, and then hire a lawyer to watch him. This looks ridiculous, but it is no more ridiculous than to spend time and money to keep your own member from voting away your own interests.

A DISGUSTED VOTER.

Regina, Sask., Jan. 18, 1910.

OFFICERS FOR 1910.

The Montreal Produce Merchants' Association held its annual meeting last week, when the officers elected for the ensuing year were :

President—J. A. Vaillancourt.

Vice-president—John A. Gunn.

Treasurer—Richard Gray.

Executive Committee.—Ed. Denning, A. McCullough, P. W. McLagan, John H. Scott.

Arbitration Committee—A. A. Ayer, R. M. Ballantyne, A. J. Hodgson, Arthur Jones, W. H. Olive.

J. A. Vaillancourt was unanimously chosen as the association's nominee for election to the council of the Board of Trade.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

ORDERS FROM WEST INDIES.

The first bunch of new subscriptions from our special West India solicitor, D. Williams, came to hand on the 18th inst. There were 25 in the lot, and they all came from Hamilton, Bermudas, and were the result of three days' work. Not so bad in view of the fact that the MacLean publications have already a good circulation in Bermudas.

Mr. Williams says that the MacLean Trade Newspapers and Magazines are held in high esteem and he intimates that he did not find it a difficult task to take subscriptions from those who are not already on our list. Mr. Williams' letter was dated January 14th, he having arrived at Hamilton on the 11th. This is the first stage on his three or four months' journey. He has certainly struck a good average, and he is not through with the Bermudas yet.

"They are," he writes, "a wonderfully friendly people, while the climate is magnificent. It is pleasant to see at this time of the year vegetation green and flowers in bloom everywhere. The first crop of early potatoes is about off."

DON'T ECONOMIZE ON WRITING PAPER.

Now and again manufacturers and jobbers receive complaints from merchants that their communications are unanswered, or at least are not answered promptly, and that goods ordered are delayed in shipment. Opprobrium is then heaped on the jobbers' and manufacturers' heads for allowing such a condition to exist.

But the jobber and manufacturer resent this aspersion, and state that there is something to be said on their side, holding that the blame for delay should really be charged against the merchants themselves. They say that in every case they do their best to hurry out the goods, but the retailers' habit of writing an order, making a complaint, enclosing a remittance, and asking a query about goods—all on one sheet of letter paper—is the little thing that blocks the cogs in the wheel of business and causes mistakes.

In all large mercantile establishments where the daily mail is heavy it devolves on some one person to open and sort the mail. Remittances and money enclosures are sent to the cashier, orders to the order department, complaints to the manager, and inquiries to the sales department. Now if these four subjects were written on four separate sheets of paper, say the jobbers, they would all receive immediate attention and all at the same time, enabling a reply to be sent promptly. But instead the letter goes the rounds: to the cashier, order department, manager, and sales department, with a good chance of it being held up anywhere en route. There is a consequent delay in replying to the letter and in sending the goods—all because of a desire to save a little writing paper. This is false economy, and business men should be above it. Paper is cheap and delays are costly.

BEAN PRICES FIRM.

Judging from the production of beans in Canada last year, one would probably have thought that beans now would have been cheaper than at this time last year. But such is not the case and it is not likely they will decrease to any appreciable extent if they decrease in price at all.

The estimated bean production in Kent and Elgin counties, Western Ontario, in 1908 was 856,800 bushels, this being about 20 per cent. in excess of the preceding year.

They were, however, of a better quality. The consumption of beans throughout Canada has increased considerably during recent years, large quantities being necessary to supply mining, construction and lumber camps. These facts taken into consideration have much to do with keeping up the prices. Also there are a lot of beans in the hands of well-to-do Kent and Elgin farmers who do not have to sell until prices suit them and this, with a brisk demand from Quebec, Eastern Ontario, Northern Ontario and from the Canadian North-west, will tend to keep them firm.

At present there seems no reason to expect lower prices, and if a change does occur it will likely be to a higher market.

TOO MANY CUSTOMERS.

Retail merchants throughout Canada experienced a good Christmas trade. If anything it was above the average. Probably none of them, however, found customers too numerous to accommodate. According to a well-known Canadian business man, who has just returned from a three months trip in Central Europe, there was at least one day in Berlin, Germany, on which there were too many customers for the comfort of the retailers.

It is the custom in Berlin, and has been from time immemorial, to allow the retailers to keep their stores open on two Sundays preceding Christmas Day. On December 12th, the first of these days, the crowd of shoppers on certain streets became so great that business was brought to a stand-still. The current of trade was actually choked. Not only were the stores packed, but the streets from curb to curb were in a similar condition. The Canadian business man, who was a witness of the scene, says that about 4 o'clock in the afternoon the police were called out and the stores emptied of the crowds. He said that the shoppers appeared to be imbued with the idea that unless they hurried they would have no chance of buying Christmas goods. It was simply a panic and the only remedy was to close the stores.

The same gentleman is authority for the statement that Christmas shopping was good throughout Central Europe. One day he picked up, in Cologne, a newspaper urging people to do their shopping early in order to prevent a crush. This reminded him of the custom which has come into vogue in Canada during the last few years.

They were experiencing, he said, good shopping weather in Central Europe, and in Bohemia there was four feet of snow.

COMPARISON OF SUGAR PRICES.

It is interesting to note the changes that have occurred during the year in the refined sugar market. Willett & Gray's recapitulation gives some interesting figures showing the ups and downs in the market, the highest and lowest prices and comparisons with other years.

Granulated, the standard of refined, opened the year at 4.50c per pound net cash, declined to 4.30c. in February, advancing from 4.45c. to 4.80c. in March; advance continued to 4.90c. in April; declined in May to 4.70c., and in June to 4.60c. and recovered to 4.75c. and then with slight reactions advanced to 5.00c in September, closing the month at 4.85c.; October, 4.85c to 4.90c.; November, 4.90c. to 5.00c.; December, 5.00 to 4.80c. at the closing of the year.

The highest price was 5c. per pound in September; the lowest being 4.30c. per pound net cash in February.

The average price of granulated sugar in 1909 was 4.765c. per pound, against 4.957c. in 1908; 4.649c. in 1907; 4.515c. in 1906; 5.256c. in 1905; 4.772c. in 1904; 4.638c. in 1903; 4.455c. in 1902; 5.05c. in 1901 and 5.32c. in 1900, all net cash.

The average difference between raw and refined in 1909 was .758c. per pound, against .884c in 1908; .893c. in 1907; .829c. in 1906; .977c. in 1905.

The average price of granulated for the past ten years is 4.838c. per pound. The average difference between raw and refined for the past ten years is .873c. per pound, or .115c. per pound more than in 1909.

The highest price of granulated sugar since July, 1897, was 6.00c. per pound in March, 1905, and the lowest, 4.21c per pound in November, 1902.

These figures show that during the last 10 years the highest prices were in 1900, the average price per lb. being 5.32 cents.

MERCHANTS MUST KEEP BOOKS.

What is probably the first conviction in Canada under Section 417 of the Criminal Code which requires every merchant to keep a set of books, was recorded at Toronto last week when Judge Denton imposed a fine of $50 on a merchant tailor who admitted that his debts exceeded $1,000 and yet he had no proper system of keeping records of his transactions. The tailor had misrepresented his business position to a jobbing house and although no goods had been secured as a result of the false statements, the judge imposed a fine on the charge that no record of his business transactions had been kept.

The section of the criminal code dealing with this matter reads as follows:

> "Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence, and liable to a fine of eight hundred dollars and to one year's imprisonment who being a trader and indebted to an amount exceeding one thousand-sand dollars, is unable to pay his creditors in full, and has not, for five years next before such inability, kept such books of account as, according to the usual course of any trade or business in which he may have been engaged, are necessary to exhibit or explain his transactions, unless he be able to account for his losses to the satisfaction of the court or judge, and to show that the absence of such books was not intended to defraud his creditors."

The decision is an important one affecting every business man, tending to compel every retailer to conduct his business along modern lines. The law cannot compel men to be honest but it can at least provide machinery requiring a certain degree of that quality.

MERCHANTS SHOULD DEAL AT HOME.

There are some newspapers throughout the country bold enough to advocate that the citizens patronize their home towns by buying from their home merchants. Others are not, for some reason or other, and if the merchants only tried they could have the newspapers vigorously support them in their attempts to keep trade at home.

But some merchants do not practice what they preach. A grocer often, rather than buy his boots from the boot and shoe dealer across the street, will send to the mail-order house for them.

In this connection the Bracebridge Gazette is to be commended for its stand. It says that no town can be permanently prosperous in which the citizens and tradesmen, dependent on each other, do not patronize each other. The merchant wants a harness, for instance, and although his neighbor is a good harness maker, and trades with him, he imagines he can save fifty cents by sending to another city or state for his harness. The harness maker, in turn, sends away for his groceries, boots, shoes and clothing. The shoemaker sends away for his coat, and the tailor sends away for his boots, and so it goes.

As a result the farmers coming in to trade, see all the tradesmen sending to other places for goods, because, they say they can save money by doing so, and to the conclusion that they, too, can do better elsewhere; and then everybody is growling about hard times and no business. No wonder. The business men themselves turn the tide of trade elsewhere, for if they can supply themselves to better advantage by depriving their neighbor of their trade, others learn to try the same experiment. It is a dangerous one to inaugurate. Ten dollars is lost where one is saved, because the entire business of the place is dwarfed and hampered thereby.

The fact is, but little is ever made in going away to trade, and oftener, counting all expenses, there is a loss. Show us a town in which the people make it a rule not to send away for anything they can get at home, and we will show you a town in which the business is lively, and everybody buys, and trade is centreing from abroad. Prices are low and the tradesmen patronize each other, having no suspicions that confidence will be abused.

Let it once be understood that the business men of any town are in the habit of sending abroad for purchases, and the business will languish. Having no confidence in each other, how can they expect others to have confidence in them? No, that's not the way to build up a town. Patronize each other and keep all your business at home.

FIRE INSURANCE SUGGESTIONS.

It is good business judgment for a merchant to keep his property insured to the amount of eighty per cent. of its value and it is wise to make careful and true statements of all true conditions; ownership, chattels, lease ground, etc. Taking in a partner or transferring insurance should be at once reported to the company for approval, as well as keeping the company advised as to additional insurance taken.

Report all hazards the property may be exposed to, even after the policy is written.

When a fire occurs report it in writing at once and then look after and protect the property saved from further loss and damage. Many insured persons have suffered loss by neglecting to comply with the requirements of the policy immediately after a fire. Separate the damaged from the undamaged property. Make a careful inventory of both, stating the cost and damage claimed under each article, extended alterations made necessary to the store, prolonged vacancy, sale and storage of hazardous goods, etc. Be sure to get a standard fire insurance policy form when insuring your property. Then utilize your leisure time to inform yourself of the conditions of your policy.

By all means have a fireproof safe. Take an inventory of your stock each year. Keep daily sales account, also book all your purchases. Keep account of expenses and moneys withdrawn from the business. When you do this, you will have no difficulty to establish your loss and to get the same promptly and satisfactorily settled. Outside of the assistance to adjust your fire loss, a full accounting of your business kept in your books will pay you largely and will put you in a position to keep tab on your financial situation and help you make a larger success of your business.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Carrier Pigeons Bring Back Grocery Orders—Brantford Grocer Opens New Store With Big Reception—A Confectionery Department Opened by a Peterboro Merchant—An Advertisement on the Letter Head — Trying out a "Dunning" Wagon.

Pigeons Carry the Orders.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 18.—Harry Harm, a Columbia, Pa., U.S.A., grocer, used to take a half-day to gather his orders from the surrounding country, a half-day to fill them, and a half day to deliver ; but now, thanks to a fine lot of pigeons which he carries in a crate on his wagon route, the work is done in one day. After he secures a few orders he takes the thin duplicate order slips, makes them up into a roll, and attaches it to a pigeon's leg. As soon as it returns to its loft the clerks relieve it of the orders. As a result, when Mr. Harm returns to his store the clerks have the goods all ready for delivery.

Reception Idea Spreading.

Brantford, Jan. 18.—One of the really good features, both from the standpoint of advertising and securing the good will of customers, which has been introduced in this city recently is the formal reception idea. Alf. Patterson, when he opened his enlarged and remodelled grocery in William Street, decided to make an experiment along this line. He advertised that on the opening afternoon and evening his premises would be open for inspection, and customers and visitors were cordially invited to pay him a call. A large number availed themselves of the opportunity. When they arrived they found an orchestra, discoursing sweet music, attentive assistants busy serving refreshments, and the entire store presenting a most delightful and attractive appearance. The affair for days was one of the principal topics of discussion among the people of the locality.

The scheme seems to be an excellent one, provided a dealer has new premises or a brand new stock to display. The cost, too, is trifling, as compared with the lasting benefits which are possible from following such a course. The public admires the spirit and enterprise which are necessarily behind such plans. And besides it likes novelty. There is a variety of lines along which the reception idea could be carried out. It would not be necessary, for example, to serve refreshments nor would it be required of every grocer that he engage an orchestra. Other features could be adopted with possibly equal success if properly worked out. The great object is to advertise the store and get it before the public in such a way as to make a favorable impression.

Special Department for Confectionery.

Peterboro, Jan. 19.—In looking over their business of the past year, White & Gillespie have found most satisfactory results from the handling of confectionery, and as a result have set apart a section of their store to meet the increased trade in that respect. They began this department with an odd order or two of chocolate buds, chocolates, etc., while fancy confections found favor with the public, and as the demand increased the supply was necessarily proportionate. The section devoted to canndy is not large, but it is compact and adequate. A show case has been set apart entirely for confectionery, and the shelves behind it bear only candy. The sweet goods are therefore practically apart from the general groceries, the display is a pleasing one and but few customers fail to fall victims.

A Letter-head Advertisement.

Sherbrooke, Que., Jan. 18.—May & Houlahan, grocers of Sherbrooke, make good use of the space at the top of their letter head without spoiling its appearance. To the upper left hand corner where there is plenty of room, they give in a vertical list under the heading "Our Specialties," four high-class brands of goods including pickles, sauces, etc., biscuits, canned goods and coffee. This little ad. undoubtedly creates a favorable impression on the prospective purchaser who may happen to receive a letter from this firm, and will tend to hold regular customers who want only first-class goods.

To Try a "Dun Wagon."

Stockton, Cal., U.S.A., Jan. 17.—The merchants of Stockton, California, have arrived at the point where they believe that delinquent customers should be handled without gloves. A plan which has been tried before, but which it is said is new in the western country, is being given consideration by the dealers in the above town and it is altogether likely that in the near future, what will be known as a "dun wagon" will be a familiar sight on the city's streets.

Distinguishing marks of a conspicuous nature, indicating the purpose for which the wagon is used, will make it an unwelcome visitor and it is figured that its existence will have a great moral effect upon those debtors possessed of any self-respect.

It will be interesting to know with what success this innovation meets in the western city.

Departure From the Calendar.

Brantford, Jan 18.—It may be rather late in the season to discuss Christmas gifts of grocers to their customers, but the "over-doing" of the calendar idea during the past month in many centres naturally suggests that there may be some remedial measures which may be worthy of consideration as a working basis for the next Yuletide season.

"Why is it that ninety-nine per cent. of the grocers of the country imagine that calendars are the one thing that their customers want for a Christmas remembrance?" remarked a retailer the other day. "Probably few of them can answer. The calendar craze has grown to be a habit and is followed from year to year as a matter of course. That is the only explanation. The consequence is that nearly every householder has more calendars from the grocer, butcher, baker and a half dozen other functionaries than she knows how to handle.

"I would advise grocers to get away from the beaten path and be original. Let the other fellow give the calendars. You get something better, it matters not wat ; anything will be welcomed for a change. Originality is just as important in a grocery business when it comes to handing out Christmas presents as it is in faking up stories of imaginary dashes to the north pole. What is better than calendars? That depends somewhat on the contemplated outlay and the field. Every grocer should remember his customers if he can, but he should study their needs, and so far as possible give them something original, attractive, useful and novel. Gifts of this nature need not be expensive so long as they make a hit."

Economic Store Lighting.

Peterboro, Jan. 19.—The problem of economically lighting his store concerns every practical grocer, particularly during the winter season and in this respect the experience of one member of the trade may be of interest. He had been using the ordinary 16 c.p. and 32 c.p. lamps on all floors of his establishment, but was not entirely suited. The new Tungsten lamp appealed to him from an economic standpoint, and also because of its bright light. He had thought of installing a number of arc lamps, but after a little consideration decided upon the Tungsten. That was about six weeks ago, and up to the present he is highly pleased with the change. He finds that his store is uniformly lighted throughout, that the quality and brightness of the new light is not inferior to the arc lamp, and it is just half as cheap as the latter.

Some Duties of a Proprietor.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., January 18.—There is one merchant here who is particularly anxious that he stand in well with the customers who deal with him. He wants to do this not only on his own account but because he wishes to deal fairly with his salesmen.

"If the head of a concern," he says, "is not liked by the public, it seems to cast a damper over the salesman's chances and handicaps him to a large degree. If the salesman has good personal qualities he can secure and hold considerable business through his own individuality, but there is always a large majority who will not deal with a concern that does not have a good reputation, which can only be obtained by having good character in all departments."

Attention to Assortment.

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 18.—Assortment is something that every merchant should give particular attention, as it often serves to prevent business being transacted with the mail-order houses.

A Hamilton merchant in expressing his views on this question says :

"In buying goods, pay particular attention to the assortment. You cannot carry as large a stock as some stores, but care in buying the assortment obviates the difficulty greatly. A well selected stock is of more worth to you than double the stock illy assorted.

"Many grocers lack judgment and fail to follow even the slightest premonitory symptoms of good judgment. No rule can be laid down for buying. No two dealers can base their buying upon the same principles because different conditions rule different stores ; yet, it is simple enough, it seems to me, for a retail grocer to exercise wisdom in buying assortments of goods. He has an absolutely safe and positive rule to go by, namely, his own experience. Every dealer knows what kind or line or brand of goods goes the best in his town or section, and he is safe in basing his judgment in buying upon the average demand of his customers.

"No dealer, however, can follow a perfectly straight line throughout the year in purchasing goods. If, for instance, during the Christmas season he does not augment his stock of raisins by some of the finest cluster raisins the chances are that his old customers will cross the street to the other store where better and more seasonable judgment has been used. I do not mean to say that a grocer should always buy the same goods ; on the other hand, he should with nice discrimination try new brands and new kinds, new varieties, calling the attention of his customers to the same, and if they are liked put in a moderate stock. If these go it is easy to buy more goods, but many grocers make the mistake of laying in a heavy stock at once, before they are sure as to the extent of the demand, hence, they often 'get stuck,' as the saying is. Public taste is very fickle, and the grocer should be careful to move cautiously until he is sure whether the demand is to be lasting or only temporary."

WHY QUALITY WAS POOR.

More About the Proposal to Ship Currants on Consignment.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—We have received the following letter from a Patras, Greece, exporter of currants, which applies to a recent article in your paper regarding the quality of some of the goods from the European markets: "I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 8th, with the enclosed cutting from The Canadian Grocer, for which I am much obliged.

"If Canadian dealers get poor quality of currants from Greece they have only themselves to blame and certainly not the shippers, especially the respectable ones. They always make it a point to snap at the cheapest offers, no matter wherefrom they proceed, and it stands to reason that under the circumstances they certainly can never expect to get good serviceable fruit suitable for their requirements. Evidently your buyers are not so very articular about quality, and if such poor stuff as the sample you sent us passes muster, we naturally come to the conclusion that it is just the quality that suits them, and for this very reason, we ourselves suggested that we ought to follow the example of some of our neighbors in order to take a share of the Montreal business, seeing that by offering what we consider as good quality and genuine Fine Filiatra, we cannot make any headway.

"I may further add that it seems to me rather extraordinary that your buyers are pleased with the supplies they get from New York, considering that the fruit shipped to that market is, as a rule, the cheapest in the market in this side, and certainly inferior to the Fine Filiatra we have been offering so far to the Canadian markets without success. Your buyers surely ought to know that good quality cannot be obtained at the cheapest price. Let them apply to the proper quarter and pay the right price and then, and only then they will have a right to complain if they do not get what they contracted for.

"As to the expectation of the author of the article in question that currants in future will have to be shipped on consignment, he may rest assured that there is not a ghost of a chance of it ever being realized, as shippers on this side know well enough and to their cost, that in nine cases out of ten the returns of such consignments are invariably the very reverse of satisfactory and even ruinous some times."

"SUBSCRIBER."

Montreal, Jan. 18, 1910.

ESTABROOKS' COFFEE.

Proprietor of Red Rose Tea Adds New Department to His Business.

T. H. Estabrooks, of St. John, Toronto and Winnipeg, proprietor of Red Rose Tea is extending his business to coffee, and is now putting on the market in the Maritime Provinces, a coffee to be known as "Estabrooks' Red Rose Coffee." The new coffee is to be crushed, not ground. This is said to be the latest and most approved method of preparing the fragrant bean for the pot. The whole bean is passed between serriated steel rollers. This reduces it to grains of uniform size and the portion of the outer skin that remains in the eye of the bean after roasting is drawn off by air suction, leaving the coffee free of all skin or chaff.

Mr. Estabrooks is packing only one grade, to retail at 40c, intended to meet the requirements of particular people. It is put up only in sealed tins. Preparations for this undertaking have been under way for a year, and an up-to-date plant for the roasting, crushing and packing of the coffee has been installed.

CALENDARS FOR 1910.

The Essex Canning and Preserving Co., Essex, Ont., have issued an elaborate calendar—one of the most costly that has found its way to the office of The Canadian Grocer this year. The illustration is a representation of an original painting by Wm. Thorne, A.N.A., entitled "Elizabeth," the picture alone being over twenty inches in length. Attached to the calendar is a small booklet referring to Wm. Thorne, with an educative talk on painting.

TRADE NOTES.

The Weir Company, general merchants, Kingsville, Ont., has assigned to Richard Tew.

A. G. Snowdon, of Snowdon & Ebbitt, Montreal, has left for a business trip to Europe.

The Calgary branch of the United Commercial Travelers, held the first "At Home" of the season recently.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association intend holding their 30th annual at-home on Wednesday evening, Jan. 26th. The event will be held in the Temple Building. J. C. Beaumont, 29 Bathurst St., Toronto, is the secretary of the association.

Fire broke out last Thursday night in the store of E. C. Clark, Orangeville, Ont., and caused some loss to the stock. The business had just been purchased by A. J. Smith, Toronto, who was to take possession on Monday last.

Lorenzo Bourbonnier, grocer, 466 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, has been arrested, charged with infringement of a milk trade mark. The complainant was the Guaranteed Pure Milk Co., who allege that accused was using their bottles and filling them himself.

MOLASSES IMPORTATIONS.

The importations of molasses into Halifax for the year just closed from Porto Rico and the British West Indes were as follows:—

The Markets — Rise in Sugar Prices Materializes

Market Up 10 Cents Per Cwt. With Prices Still Firm—Tea Market Strong—Future Rice May Be Lower.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—10c higher.
Coffees—Firm.
Almonds and Filberts—½ to 1 cent higher.
Future Rice—20c lower.

Montreal, Jan. 20, 1910.

Markets, taken generally, are firm or higher. This goes to prove the prophecy made in a recent issue, that 1910 would be a banner year for the grocery trade. Most of the standard lines are increasing in demand, some of them even at increased prices. Sugar is up 10c, a rise which took place last Friday, just too late for last week's issue. Crops are reported good from most countries, particularly the cane crops in the West Indies, and teas in Japan and Ceylon. It seems as if with the general feeling of prosperity pervading Canada, and plentiful supplies of foodstuffs coming in, everyone should do well this year from the importer and manufacturer to the retailer. Owing to the poor quality of last year's crop of walnuts, sales have fallen off considerably. Otherwise conditions seem to be satisfactory.

SUGAR—Sugar went up 10c last week, just too late for our issue of Jan. 14. This rise has been expected for some time past, owing to the condition of the raw market. Prices on raw sugars have been soaring for some time with only temporary lulls. Sales continue good at the increase and give stability to present prices.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Considering the time of year the demand for both lines is good. Several shipments of small lots of molasses have been received lately, and have been quickly absorbed. The situation appears to be satisfactory to local men.

CANNED GOODS

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advance of 10 cents.

Tea—Market still firm.

Beans—Good demand.

Toronto, January 20, 1910.

While the wholesale trade is passing through the usual dullness during this month, they are also finding reason to complain about the collections which are not up to expectations, especially in Toronto. This is said to be owing to the Santa Claus craze where people are induced to spend their money for things which they need for the necessaries of life.

The most important market change is a rise in the price of sugar of 10 cents. This, as The Grocer stated during recent issues, was not unexpected.

SUGAR—Just before we went to press last week the sugar market was in such a condition that it was clearly seen that an advance was about to take place, but all we could do was to call attention to that fact. What was expected has happened and sugar is now 10c per 100 lbs. high. With the strong feeling existing in the leading markets it is likely to remain up, if not go higher.

TEA—The tone of the tea market has been firm for some time, and there is nothing in sight that is likely to change this condition. As the lower grades of tea are affected more by the higher prices than the better grades, it should have the effect of using better qualities. If the public could be induced to do this, it would be of advantage to themselves as well as to the grocer.

Winnipeg, January 20, 1910.

Reports are coming in from all points in the west to the effect that stocks are comparatively low. Although the average dealer is not sending in extreme orders to replace his stock yet he is ordering freely with the idea of ordering often as the goods are needed. In the more distant and remote sections, however, this cannot be carried out so well and merchants are calling for as much goods as they require for some time to come. Travelers report the merchants active in studying the market situations from week to week from every available source, and this is an evidence of more careful buying, but not necessarily smaller buying. As an evidence of the prosperous condition as a whole, many cash payments have been received recently, and when orders are increasing with the collections there is certainly no fear for the future.

The markets are interesting this week, several important advances and declines having taken place. The demand everywhere on the continent, and also the export demand, for the same class of goods at the same time is brisk just now and this keeps the markets in those particular lines strong.

SUGAR—The market is up 10 cents this week. The Canadian market held out bravely, and not until New York advanced the product twice did Montreal follow. The recent investigation in New York has given an opening for new and larger capital to control the product. Just what the future of the market will be is difficult to discern, but it is always more or less strong when quotations are as low as those of last week. The market may yet continue strong.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 20.

Quite a number of changes were listed in the local markets last week. Ontario and Manitoba flour advanced 10 cents a barrel, sugar was marked up a like amount, per cwt., rolled oats advanced 20 cents, and cornmeal 20 cents a barrel and 10 cents a bag. Codfish is also higher, medium sized fish selling at $4.00 and smoked herring likewise. Latest quotations now are:

Halifax, Jan. 20, 1910

There is little produce moving now the weather being against the handling of perishable stock. Some small shipments of apples were made during a moderate spell this week. The demand for potatoes continues good and as the stocks held by the dealers are small, the prices will in all probability advance considerably before the spring sets in. There is a general scarcity of eggs and the price continues high and firm. A large quantity of Jamaica oranges are being handled here this season. The stock is of good quality and the price reasonable.

The market for pickled fish, particularly mackerel is looking up considerably. The statistical position is good and the distributing demand better than usual. Oporto to-day has a stock of 18,000 qtls. against about 32,000 qtls. at this time last year, and with very little on the way.

The stocks of bank codfish in the hands of fishermen have been nearly cleaned up, the last sales being at $5.20 ex vessel. Holders of the balance are said to be expecting $5.50, but this extreme price is not likely to be realized.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 20.—With the high price for hogs, comes the expected increase in the price of pork products. The best bacon is now jobbed at 29c, being an increase from 27½c. Pure lard, which was 18c is now 18½c and 19c, and compound has advanced half a cent to 17½c.

Eastern eggs are being cleared out at 32c and 33c, because of an anticipated increase to 35c at the first of next month. Locals may be quoted at 55c wholesale, retailing at 65c, but they are few. A large shipment of eggs arrived from Victoria this week, and sold as first-class, and are about as near the good article that one can get. In the winter in Vancouver, many householders have private arrangements with hen fanciers, who distribute their eggs themselves. Often in such instances, five cents more per dozen is charged, but there is the advantage of being absolutely sure that the eggs are at least less than a week old, which is something to be considered.

The navel oranges now on the market are of better quality than the variety available at Christmas. They sell for $3 a crate. Oscar Brown, of Oscar Brown & Co., is in California looking after the selection of fruit shipments, where the weather played serious havoc with the crop. He writes that at least 25 per cent. of the orange crop has been ruined, and in some districts the groves look as if they had been fire swept, so cut are they by frost and storm.

At the market at New Westminster a week ago, offerings were made of Chilliwack potatoes at $9 a ton. The cheapest potatoes in Vancouver are $16 and $18 a ton, and these for the kind that are not supposed to be of particularly good quality. The reason for the cheap price was that it was found that after the little frost the price did not go up, as far as the producer was concerned, and some of them offered at bargain rates. The price went up in Vancouver all right, and once up is rarely dropped.

GROCERS AT HOME IN MONTREAL.

Progressive Euchre and Ball Pass Away a Few Pleasant Hours.

Montreal, Jan. 18.—Last Thursday evening, January 13th, a representative of The Grocer spent a very enjoyable evening as a guest of the local Retail Grocers' Association. The occasion was their annual ball and euchre, given at the auditorium, Bleury and Berthelet Sts., Montreal.

About nine o'clock the 350 guests sat down at the card tables. Everything was managed in a manner that betokened experience in the proper handling of such affairs. Eight rounds of cards were played, the prizes being both plentiful (some twenty in number) and costly. A silver sugar bowl was the ladies' first prize and so even was the play that six ladies had to draw for it.

After the euchre a light repast was served downstairs. Everyone seemed to be enjoying him or herself immensely and an atmosphere of good fellowship was everywhere. Upstairs again after the distribution of the prizes was the crowning feature of the evening—the dance. A fine orchestra of five pieces and a perfect floor gave impetus to everyone's feet and it was not long before all who could, and some who couldn't, were helping to crowd the dancing space. About 5.30 the programme ended and everyone pronounced it a highly successful and enjoyable affair. Certainly the committees in charge are to be congratulated on the entire management of the affair, which proceeded from start to finish without a hitch to spoil the evening.

It all goes to show that successful grocers can be a success at anything they turn their hands to.

THE EIGHT HOUR DAY BILL.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association are objecting to the Eight Hour Day Bill brought forward by Mr. Verville in the House of Commons, Ottawa. Some of the reasons why objections are taken by the association are as follows:

It would prohibit every employer and every employee who works more than eight hours per day from sharing in Government business.

It would be utterly impracticable for any establishment to work one portion of its staff eight hours a day on Government orders and the rest of its staff ten hours a day on orders for private parties and private corporations.

As a natural consequence competition for Government orders would be less keen; prices would go up, and all work would have to be paid for by the Government at a higher figure.

It would place a discount on ambition. The inherent right of the individual to raise himself above the level of his fellows by extra work or effort would be denied him.

Once we have fully recovered from the present industrial depression there will again be a shortage of help. A reduction in the hours of labor would mean that this shortage would be tremendously accentuated.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Laporte, Martin & Co. Ltd., wholesale grocers and liquor dealers, are announcing a bargain reduction in all their standard lines of dried fruits, and advise prompt orders to shrewd buyers. This bargain sale is due to the necessity of reducing holdings before stock taking. An examination of their list and prices would be wise.

The Hamilton Stamp & Stencil Works have opened an office and warerooms at the corner of Leader Lane and Colborne Street, Toronto, where they have stock to supply their Toronto customers. There Bradley Stencil machines may be seen, for which they are the agents for Canada. All Toronto orders attended to by the Toronto agent, P. B. Barnard.

Nature has solved the problem of distribution. It uses a multitude of agents to effect the distribution of its products.
Nature does not expect every seed to fall upon fallow ground and to take root. But, it achieves a profitable percentage upon its distribution. This is all that an advertiser has to do to reap a profitable harvest on his outlay.

Quality The Master-Builder

Looking over the grocery trade of this country it is a fact that the men who are making most money, the men who stand out as leaders in the business, the men who are building up a permanent business, one with a good-will worth something, are the men who are pushing quality goods. The few exceptions simply prove the rule.

It is the same in the package tea business. When Red Rose Tea first came on this market our competitors good naturedly said we might last a year. That is ten years ago and the growth of the Red Rose Tea business has been the feature of the tea trade during this decade. In those ten years many package teas have come and gone, but the steady increase in sales of Red Rose Tea from year to year has been enormous.

Why ? Because of the quality of the tea. The enormous increase in the sales has been possible only because most of the people who have tried the tea have appreciated its quality and have continued to use it, and the retail merchants generally, convinced of its quality, have backed Red Rose strongly.

Quality has built the Red Rose Tea business. It will help build your business, and that is why it will pay you to recommend

Retail Advertising in Reading Matter Space

A Critic Considers Such Publicity to be Inferior to Displays as a General Rule—Advertisements Showing Antagonistic Feelings Between Two Retailers.

By J. N. Armstrong.

It is sometimes hard for the average small-town grocer to know just what is good advertising and what is not. The following items appeared in two consecutive issues of the Picton, Ont., Gazette, and refer in no complimentary manner to each other:—

Albert Powers' methods of buying and the large amount of goods he disposes of each week is a guarantee that his stock is the freshest and best assorted. He does not tamper with old retail stocks nor say that you must hand out your cash before you can get the goods. Good people pay for what they get. When the market price on any article drops he lowers his prices. Some take advantage of a drop in the market and say they are selling cheaper than opposition. The price of flour and many other articles is lower at present. It only takes columns and time to enumerate. Although the newspaper is full of advertisements with prices, they are no lower than his. He has the good goods that can be sold right.

Some dainty things to eat: Christy's fancy cakes, nice, soft, creamy cheese pure white honey, olives, all kinds of best bottled goods, etc.

Good things to drink: Beautiful flavored green and black tea, special blend 40c coffee, and cocoas

The best brands of cooked and smooked meats. Redpath's sugar always in stock. The best goods in rolled oats, flaked wheat and all kinds of package cereals. Grapes, oranges, lemons and other fruits. The best vegetables, choice celery, etc.

His store is full of everything in the grocery line and he is pleased to fill your orders.

The advertisement of A. Powers' competitor read as follows:

Many years ago we saw the great buying advantage the syndicate Stores had over their competitors, also the advantages of cash over credit retailing, and have always had these advantages back of our business, though some of our competitors falsely contributed our low prices to other reasons.

Now, one of our competitors pays our business the highest compliment by adopting our cash system.

Another competitor gives our business a big puff (in Tuesday's Gazette) by explaining and admitting the superior quality of groceries bought direct from the manufacturer, compared with groceries bought from a middle man or wholesale house, where they may have been allowed to accumulate, get old and perhaps unfit to eat before getting to the consumer.

The larger quantities a grocer buys the cheaper he can get it, also he can get more of his goods direct from the manufacturers.

Some buy a large quantity to get the quantity price, part of which gets very stale before the last of it is sold.

We, with our large retail business in Napanee, Gananoque, Wellington and Picton, which employes 38 sales clerks (as many or more than all other grocery stores in Picton) buy a much larger percentage of groceries fresh, direct from the manufacturers, and sell it out more rapidly than any of our competitors.

It is not necessary to puff our business, but the fact for those wishing comparisons, we have bought over twenty-one car loads (2,107 barrels) of sugar in the past year.

Our import order for raisins and currants given at one time was over ten tons, and 128 boxes of peels.

We sell as much groceries on an average every month as we carry in stock.

This keeps our groceries the freshest in town, gives us the best buying capacity, the biggest outlet for goods, and enables us to sell the best, freshest, groceries in town at the lowest prices.

We meet all our competitors' prices, and have our own special prices besides. THE FAIR.

In the first place, reading matter ads. for the retail grocer is not a satisfactory method of placing his business before the public. People are only too willing to read of a special sale of some line of groceries, if placed where it should be, in the form of a good, regular ad. To depart from this—the accepted method—there must be something entirely out of the ordinary, something which will interest the public as reading matter, pure and simple. In the examples here shown there is nothing of special interest, unless the private bickerings of two retailers in a small town constitute material for more than ordinary attention.

Suppose the same space had been used—and it could undoubtedly have been secured for less money—to put before the reading public in a simple, straightforward display ad. what special bargains they had for the careful housekeeper, it would seem that the results would have been better.

CANNERS' MERGER COMPLETED.

The Canadian Grocer is able to make an authoritative statement this week regarding the amalgamation of canners. Last week it was stated in this paper that the merger was likely to go through and that it would probably be consummated in a week or ten days.

This is the case. The Grocer has been informed on the best of authority that the merger is completed.

The interests handling it have secured control of the Canadian Canners, Limited, as well as the independent concerns, and the merger completed will comprise about 56 factories, including those now in the Canadian Canners consolidation. At the time of going to press, there were only three independents, who were not closed up.

The details of the amalgamation have been concluded and all the canning factories going into it have agreed upon the basis.

A committee meeting was held in Toronto yesterday and is being completed to-day to consider the organization work.

In next week's issue, The Grocer will go more fully into the amalgamation, explaining the reasons why it was advanced and the details of the organization.

Garnet P. Grant, with some Montreal associates, was instrumental in putting it through.

It might be mentioned here that this is the first authoratative statement given out by any publication, as to the completion of the amalgamation.

Has the Cost of Living Increased in Recent Years ?

Present and Past Prices of Grocery Articles Compared — Great Reductions in Sugar, Salt and Tea While Farm Products Advance—Some of the Causes Analyzed—An Invoice 45 Years of Age Gives Some Interesting Information.

At the present time one hears on every side something about the increased cost of living in Canada during the past five, ten, twenty and forty years. While this is admittedly true with some articles, particularly farm products, yet too many get the opinion that it is practically true with everything that is purchased in the grocery store.

From the grocers themselves one hears continuously about the wrongs, disadvantages and hardships constantly besetting the trade and more especially about small profits. There is scarcely one in the business who is not prepared to point out that the grocery trade is not what it used to be and that the chances for making money are less favorable.

In view of these assertions The Canadian Grocer has taken a look in the past to compare prices, conditions and environments with what we have at the present time.

There are some Canadian grocers who have been in business for half a century or more and from one of these The Grocer was able to secure an old invoice dated January 4th, 1865—forty-five years ago. The invoice represents the purchase of a bill of goods from a wholesale grocer on that date and there is also given opposite the wholesale price to the retailer to-day of the same goods.

Why Changes Occurred.

The above figures show that in the matter of imported goods which grocers handle, prices have seldom increased. In many cases they are the same and in a many more they have declined.

The totals are interesting as the bill of goods is a representative one. In 1865 it was bought for a little more than $44. To-day the same bill could be purchased for $26.

In analyzing the invoice more closely it will be seen that probably the greatest decrease affecting the trade has been in sugar. This has, no doubt, benefited the consumer more so that the dealer, as sugar, now-a-days is one of the articles upon which little profit is made and yet it is one of the chief articles sold in a grocery store. The decrease in price is due in a great measure to the greater production. Salt shows a greater per centage of decrease because during the past few years salt has been produced in Canada in large quantities where formerly it had to be imported.

Tea has also declined since then for the reason that in those days the world's market was supplied principally from China and Japan and had scarcely heard of India, Ceylon and other countries which produce so much now.

The cause of the increase in the price of eggs, ham, butter and cheese is well known. The increase in consumption of these farm products in Canada has been wonderful and Canada has such a splendid market for them in the Old Country that they were bound to advance. In short, the great demand and the comparative shortage of supplies explains this situation. Of course, these last mentioned articles figure more conspicuously on the table of the consumer than most of the others.

In future issues, The Canadian Grocer intends going further into this question dealing with prices existing in more recent years and comparing them with the present.

DESCRIPTION OF NEW WAREHOUSE.

John Garvey & Sons, wholesale grocers, London, Ont., are now settled in their fine new warehouse at 199 to 207 King St. The new warehouse has a frontage of 80 feet on King St. and runs back 198 feet, five storeys in height. The building is of brick and stone and is of mill construction and practically fire proof. The front is faced with grey Credit Valley Stone and Red Impervious brick. This is the first time this brick has been used in London. It is manufactured in Cleveland, Ohio, out of iron ore and is absolutely fire proof. The building has light on all sides. The window frames are made of steel, with woven wire glass except the front which have oak frames and plate glass. The building is equipped with two electric elevators, the stairway and elevators being enclosed, in fact the building is constructed so that each flat is entirely separate from the other in case of fire. Stand pipes and hose are provided on each flat at a distance of fifty feet apart. On each flat are lavatories for the employees. The basement is eleven feet high and the floor is of cement. On the west side is the steam boiler which heats the building. In the rear of this flat the Customs and Inland Revenue Bonds are situated. The main floor is used for the shipping department and has a large platform scale and four doors for receiving and shipping goods. The floors on all the flats are constructed of three inches of Georgia pine, and an inch of hard maple. The front part of the second flat is used as a packing room. In the rear of this flat, the currant cleaner, coffee mill and roaster and the tea packers are installed. The offices are on the main floor in front and are all finished in quarter cut oak. On the right is the senior's office, John Garvey, and next to this is the office of the manager, John P. Garvey. Behind these are the general offices and also an office for the traveling salesmen. On the left is the sample room equipped with cabinets, drawers, glass showcases and other conveniences for displaying goods. Here also is a table for drawing tea, with city water, sink and a gas stove. Next is a cloak room and behind this is a double vault with an entrance, on the main floor, and in the basement.

The business of John Garvey & Sons was started by the late Sir Frank Smith in 1854. John Garvey succeeded in 1886. Mr. Garvey has now associated with him, his three sons, John P., Clement, and Leigh.

St. Andrews, N.B., Jan. 12, 1910.

A full-sized package of Holland Rusk (The Dainty Dutch Delicacy) free to every grocer—

To enable the grocery trade of the Dominion to prove to their own satisfaction our claims regarding the unique qualities of Holland Rusk, the Dainty Dutch Delicacy, we will forward on receipt of any grocer's name and address, a full-sized package of Holland Rusk.

Although Holland Rusk is a comparatively new article on the Canadian market, it has jumped right into popularity, and the sales are daily forging ahead.

A general campaign of advertising is now being arranged. Some experts have told us our copy is about the strongest and most attractive they have ever seen. Every grocer should be prepared for the demand which it will create.

First of all, we want every grocer—and every grocer's wife—to taste Holland Rusk. We know you will find it unique and delicious—different from anything you ever tasted before.

Write a post-card—now when you think of it—and a full-sized package, together with prices, will be forwarded immediately.

Canadian Bacon Quoted Lower on English Market

Further Troubles for the Packer—Price of Hogs up in Montreal, But Down in Toronto—Large Receipts of Butter and Prices Will Likely be Lower—Cheese Advances Due to Export Demand.

The bacon market in England is dull and lower. Canadian bacon is quoted at 65s. This would not more than pay for the hog at the present high prices. As a rule England regulates our prices here, but the packers in their stampede after the porkers seem to disregard the English market, and the farmers are throwing up their hats and pounding their knees at the fun and the big 'wads' they are getting out of the race. The consuming public in the meantime is trying to find a substitute for bacon and lard, and whether they succeed or not, the effort to some extent will lessen consumption.

There is so little Canadian butter in England that it receives scarcely a quotation. With the large make of both dairy and creamery and considerable in cold storage, the reasonable conclusion is that butter will be lower. In forming this conclusion we must, however, take into consideration the high price of lard, which will make room for a large quantity of the lower grades of butter for cooking and baking.

Cheese is decidely firmer, and there is a more hopeful outlook for our products, a large quantity of which is still in the hands of the dealers.

The egg market is quiet, but firm. The stock of storage eggs together with the fresh stock coming in, is supposed to meet all requirements and demonstrates the fact that the trade is looking carefully after the interests of the people.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Provisions are still on the upgrade, as far as prices are concerned. Live and dressed hogs are 25c higher here. Hams and bacons are up from ½ to 1 cent, and clear fat backs are $1 higher. This condition, combined with the fact that there is always a lull after the holidays, has caused a decrease in demand, but the market has a healthy tone and dealers prophesy even higher prices in the near future.

CHEESE—Quebec and western cheese are ⅛ cent higher. There are some dealers who prophesy 65s. cheese in England before the new make comes in. Conditions there seem to warrant such a conclusion, as stocks are small compared with previous seasons, high prices are being asked for other lines of food and industrial conditions are greatly improved. At present cheese is selling in England for 58-58s. 6d. C.I.F. and displays great firmness at these prices.

Receipts for the week are 982 boxes, as against 576 same week last year. For the season they are 1,967,452 boxes, as against 1,956,526 boxes same season last year.

PROVISIONS—There is little change in the hog situation this week, although dressed hogs delivered in the city are bought for about 50c a hundred less. Buyers in the country, however, continue to buy at last week's prices, which are from $8.40 to $8.50 live weight, f.o.b. Some claim that cured meats cannot go higher without materially interfering with the consumption. In looking over some old invoices of about 1870, we find that bacon used to sell as low as 6½c a lb. and ham at 9c, and yet there is far more used per capita now than was used then, outside of the farmers, who cured it for themselves. This is owing to the scientific process of curing by our up-to-date packers, who produce a much superior quality of goods.

BUTTER—The receipts of fresh butterter are on the increase, and the market shows weakness. Some of the creameries are hunting for buyers. The prices, however, are still maintained, but if a change takes place it will be downward. There is also the usual undesirable percentage of poor butter, which will come in, but which nobody makes. This usually accumulates, and has to be sold at a loss.

NOT SO DEAR AS REPORTED.

E. S. Kirkpatrick, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Havana, Cuba, reports having received an inquiry from Canada asking the price of eggs there, and enclosing a clipping from a Canadian newspaper which said: "Eggs are now $2 a dozen in Havana, and even at that price you may get more than you bargain for." The commissioner points out that this is erroneous. The last published statistics show that for the fiscal year ending June, 1908, Cuba imported 5,019,138 dozens of eggs valued at $939,000, an average price of something over 18 cents. The retail price of fresh eggs throughout the year ranges from 55 to 60 cents, and they are practically all imported. The native hens are small, and the Cubans know nothing of modern methods of poultry raising. A few Canadians and Yankees, who at the present time are raising poultry in a scientific manner, are enthusiastic over the prospects. They use the best of thoroughbred stock, and in such cases readily sell their eggs for setting purposes only at from $2 to $3 a dozen.

Boarding Mistress—"Is there anything wrong with that egg, Mr. Fourper? I see you are according it a very critical examination."

Mr. Fourper—"Oh, not anything wrong with the egg, Mrs. Skimpen. I was just looking for the wishbone, that's all."

How One of Them Finds a Ma rket for Butter and Eggs and Attracts Extra Trade From the Farmers by Accepting all They Offer—Has Educated the Farmers' Wives to Put up Butter in Uniform Style.

By Walter Kidd.

The other day I was talking to a brother country merchant, and upon my enquiring "how is business?" he said: "Oh! this time of year our trade is not so good as it is in the summertime. We refuse nearly all butter, as we always lose on it and now the farmers take it to market and get their goods there."

What a pity! what a loss! A man's trade falling off when it should be the best; and yet I have no doubt there are many in the same predicament; and others who take the butter wish they did not have to do so as they find it somewhat of a "white elephant" on their hands.

After the factory closes in the autumn, and again in the spring before it starts, farmers make a great deal of butter which must be disposed of, and the merchant who can pay a good price for all that comes along and can "trade it out," certainly has something over the competitor who cannot do so.

To any merchant situated within easy reach of a railway service, where trains are passing through into the larger centres such as Montreal or Toronto, there is a way open. Get acquainted with the brakeman, baggagemen, express messengers, etc., on the trains. Tell them you have good butter at such a price, and fresh eggs at so and so. Put the price down at the start sufficiently low to get them interested; they will buy. These men are employed by the railways who depend on the Canadian people, and hence upon us merchants to a certain extent, for their profits. Therefore, I think we have a perfect right to do business with them so long as we do not ask them to carry produce to others in the distant cities free of charge. They are, of course, not supposed to buy for speculative purposes.

Soon if your article is good, you can get your price and the whole question is solved. You will have daily orders coming in and instead of frowning when a customer comes to the door with butter you can wear your most pleasant smile.

Although I have been in business here only a little over a year, I already have customers in different places who require weekly or monthly large supplies of butter and eggs. This with the local demand enables me to accept all the butter that comes my way. Of course eggs are more easily disposed of, but often a cent or two extra on a dozen can be made in this way, which always counts. Last autumn, besides the eggs I packed myself, I had to buy a number of cases of cold storage eggs, paying 24c and getting 28c, making a profit of 4c a dozen.

Educates the Farmers' Wives.

Again one can educate their country customers to do up their butter in the most attractive style and in such shape that it will ship readily and command the top price.

At first the butter came along in 1 lb. rolls, 1 lb. bricks, 1 lb. round prints, ½ lb. squares, ½ lb. round prints, rolls of any weight, and crocks, with and without butter paper. We told our customers early in the season that we would dock them in price unless the butter was put up in 1 lb. bricks in butter paper. A stock of butter moulds was kept on hand and sold to those who did not have them. This has caused the butter to come in good shape for shipping and it was surprising how readily the customers fell in line.

Almost every day now, farmers drive in, whose trade really belongs to other stores, bringing large supplies of butter and also eggs, and they are quite ready to trade it all out. Instead of trade going behind on account of the butter problem, it is going ahead.

All this requires energy and push, but in these days most merchants are well satisfied as long as the reward is forthcoming.

Cereal Markets Advance and Flour is on the Verge

Chicago and Winnipeg Wheat Markets, However, Show Declines—Demand for Both Flour and Cereals is Good.

There is a good export demand for flour and at better prices than are paid for home consumption. If this continues our prices must advance. In fact they have already done so in Montreal. The prices of wheat are, however, about 4c lower in Chicago, and 2c lower in Winnipeg than last week. The only thing that even the most experienced flour dealers can do in regard to the future price is to make a guess.

Oatmeal and other cereals have been advancing somewhat, owing to a better demand which is always to be expected at this season of the year.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Flours are 10c higher. According to most millers there will be if any further change, a still higher quotation in the near future. Trade continues fairly brisk locally and the general market tone is good.

GROCERS IN MUNICIPAL LIFE.

In addition to the grocers, general merchants and those connected with the manufacture of grocery articles, who were announced in the last two issues to have been elected to fill municipal positions, the following extra have come to hand :

W. L. Innes, of the Simcoe Canning Factory, Simcoe, Ont., was elected a councillor ; in Preston, Ont., E. B. Reist, a grocer, is one of the 1910 aldermen and in Prescott, Ont., Jas. H. Bradley, grocer, is one of the new councillors. In Picton two grocers, Fred Newman and Ernest F. Case were elected to the council, and two general merchants, Louis Gignac and Robert Gendron, Penetanguishene, Ont., are among the 1910 councillors there.

Practically all the Wiarton, Ont., council for 1910 is composed of business men. The general merchants elected were Jas. Symon, T. C. Allan and R. E. Trout.

EARLY CLOSING IN HUNTSVILLE.

Bracebridge Merchant Offers Words of Praise for its Progressiveness.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—The early closing by-law in Huntsville, Ont., is working out satisfactorily. True, a great many kickers at first strongly advocated the turning down of the by-law for the reason that Huntsville, being one of the many summer resorts among the highlands of Ontario, tourists making it their purchasing centre would be handicapped even if the stores closed at seven o'clock excepting Saturdays.

But this idea is gradually dying out and we find that in passing the by-law, the newly elected council for 1910 will find almost every ratepayer in favor of it. Citizens of Huntsville should by all means support this by-law. It will show other places that a progressive town can advance towards the status of a city by adopting progressive measures—and this is one of them. In slow, dead towns we find merchants open late every night waiting for the dollar that never comes. In up-to-date towns, we find the stores closed at six or not later than seven o'clock and everyone looking prosperous.

The early closing will do Huntsville no harm, and every grocer should, I think, work to secure it.

The United States government is said to be proceeding on the theory that selling agreements exist now or have existed among some of the large sugar refineries there whereby they could control prices contrary to the Sherman Anti-Trust law. This does not mean that the government has relaxed its efforts in regard to the weighing frauds, but that alongside of this is going on an investigation to learn whether or not competition has been suppressed by an actual or nominal agreement between some of the largest refiners.

What the Grocer Said to Mrs. Brown

One day, Brother Grocer, last November Mrs. Brown while out on a shopping tour found herself out in the cold, facing a 10 by 20 blizzard of sleet and rain.
Did she run into Jones' store? She did.
Was Jones glad to see her? Tickled sick.
And they had quite a confab.
Maybe, Brother Grocer, you'd like to hear what Jones said.

* * * *

Well, the FIVE ROSES Advertising Department has in preparation a little 16-page booklet in the form of a monologue, or grocer's selling talk.
Just the right size to enclose in an envelope, you know.
Tells what Jones said to Mrs B.
You see, Brother Grocer, it rained so hard outdoors Mrs. Brown couldn't get away—so she listened

* * * *

Printed in three colours with a cover in four—we did ourselves proud this time.
Cover represents the inside of Jones' store, with picture almost big as life of Brother Jones gushing to interested Mrs. B.
Inside the booklet there's a dinkey little bunch of illustrations in colours to explain just what Jones is chirping about.
That artist certainly deserves a bigger salary.

Business Matters to Receive Greater Attention

Toronto Retail Grocers' Association to Consider Matters Affecting the Trade and Causing Drawbacks—Officers for 1910 Elected—Arrangements for At Home and Presentation to Retiring President.

Staff Correspondence.

Toronto, Jan. 19.—Some opinions expressed at the regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association held on Monday night indicate that the members intend to pay a great deal more attention to the ills and drawbraks affecting the trade than they have done in the past. In fact the keynote of the expressions of opinions after the officers were elected and installed, showed that all were keen on making the association of a greater financial benefit to its members, and to the trade in general.

Apart from this there were many interesting features to the meeting. The nomination of officers was concluded; officers were elected and installed; the final arrangements for the At-Home on Wednesday, January 26th, in the Temple Building, were made, and a presentation was made to the retiring president.

D. McLEAN,

The New President of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

The officers for 1910 decided upon are as follows:

President—D. McLean.
Vice-President—W. C. Miller.
Treasurer—Bailey Snow (re-elected).
Secy.—J. C. Beaumont (re-elected).

Executive Committee—J. S. Bond, David Bell, R. W. Davies and C. F. Thorne.

In assuming the reins as president for 1910, D. McLean in his inaugural address, expressed the desire that the association would do more this year from a business standpoint. There were too many petty jealousies in the trade which should be eliminated so that retailers could work together. "It seems strange," he said, "that every year there should be a new co-operative bill crop up and if we only all get together this would not be occurring."

W. C. Miller, the vice-president, stated that he would do all he could in 1910 to further the interests of the association and hoped it would enjoy a year of prosperity.

"I'm not a speech-maker," remarked Bailey Snow on being called on for a speech. "No, you're a candy-maker," interposed one of the members before Mr. Snow could conclude. Other officers and members pledged themselves to assist as far as they could with the advancement of the association.

F. W. Johnston advocated leaving a little snow on the sidewalks in order to protect pedestrians and D. W. Clark submitted that the present system of electing men to look after Toronto's municipal affairs was at fault, claiming that the city's business should be looked after by a paid commission. Mr. Clark also maintained that the association should consider questions of more benefit to its members and the trade in general. He cited the London and Hamilton Retail Grocers' Associations as being more up-to-date in this respect.

J. S. Bond believed, too, that more time should be spent in business. "We are not friendly enough with our neighboring grocers," he said. "As a rule they are not so narrow-minded and jealous as we often think, and if we could all meet more often we could accomplish a great deal more instead of cutting each other's throats by cutting prices. We would do well to unite with other associations to fight this Co-operative Bill now before the House of Commons."

This opinion was concurred in by David Bell, who maintained that union with other associations would generate a great strength that would be felt. C. F. Thorne referred to the low license of the pedlars in Toronto, contending that the association should go after the council at once and have it increased.

Before the close of the meeting Thos. Clarke, the retiring president, was presented by J. S. Bond, on behalf of the association, with a quarter-cut oak rocking chair which he acknowledged briefly.

The association has a substantial balance to its credit in the bank, the finances being in a healthy condition.

PRICE MAINTENANCE.

That moral suasion is better than sworn statements seem to be the idea of the Johnson Educator Cracker Company, of Boston, Mass., which concern some months ago cut off the supply of a large New York jobber on charges of cutting prices. The manufacturing concern now holds that it is wiser to put the handlers of its product on their honor than to require sworn statements that the price will be maintained. The company still insists that it will sell only to those who maintain the selling policies as outlined, but figure that a friendly conference is due befor final action is taken.

TOBACCO GROWING IN B. C.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 19.—The British Columbia Tobacco Company, Ltd., has been organized with a capital of $100,000, with the particular object of acquiring from John Hector Inkster, land owned by him in the Okanagan district, with the personal property now in the possession of Lewis Holman and used by him in the business of raising, curing and manufacturing tobacco. Generally, the company will engage in the tobacco business, and its incorporation forecasts the development of the tobacco industry in the district about Kelsun and Vernon. The next season will see a large increase in the crop. Behind the company are some Vancouver people, Mr. Holman, who has been experimenting in tobacco culture in the Okanagan for some years, being also connected with it.

GREEN FRUITS—The fruit market is quiet and uninteresting. The ever occuring dullness after the holidays is still ruling the market. Apples are in abundance, and at reasonable prices. Oranges are plentiful, but the demand is light. It is easier to buy than to sell.

FISH — There is nothing to grumble about in the fish trade, as was remarked by one of the dealers, yet he admitted that some lines are scarce and that the fish business will be quiet and slow until Lent, which will start in a few weeks (Feb. 9). Frozen trout are nearly sold out, owing to the short supply at the time they go into cold storage. Haddie is also scarce.

A FOURTH BRANCH OPENED.

The opening of a branch at Regina, Sask., by Nicholson & Bain, wholesale commission merchants and brokers is another evidence of the growth of business in Western Canada and of the importance of Regina as a distributing centre. This is the fourth branch this firm has opened, the others being at Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton. The west is growing rapidly these times and Nicholson & Bain are among the firms who are observing the trend of business there and acting accordingly. The establishment of a branch in Regina will enable them to keep better in touch with the trade in that city and district, and also permits them to give a better service than heretofore.

TRADE NOTES.

W. Barr, Hamilton, Ont., has patented an account register, the patent having been issued.

J. H. Todd & Sons, Victoria, B.C., have sold their wholesale grocery department to R. P. Rithet & Co., S. Leiser & Co., and Wilson Bros., which absorb into their own stocks the supplies of the seller.

A. B. Damude has purchased the business of A. Damude & Co., Fonthill, Ont. A. B. Damude was formerly manager for the general store in Ridgetown, Ont., of F. C. Williams, who will do the buying for him as well as for his own store in Ridgeville. They are believers in the co-operative buying plan, as a money saver.

STORMS MAKE FISH SCARCE.

But at Present Prices Fish is a Cheap Food—The Value of Catch for Season of 1908-09.

In referring to the nature of the fish market in Eastern Canada at present, A. H. Brittain, Montreal, states that the severe storms which have prevailed along the Atlantic Coast have affected fishing operations to such an extent that the boats have been unable to get out to the fishing grounds, making supplies of staple lines, such as fresh haddock, cod, etc., extremely scarce. Not only have the fishermen been unable to attend to their business, but a great many of the boats and fishing gear have been destroyed, resulting in severe loss to the fishermen. The demand for Atlantic Sea Fish is increasing every year, the public realizing what an excellent article of diet this food is.

Even with the scarcity and somewhat higher prices this food is considerably cheaper than other foods and it is only a matter of time when the consumption will be greatly increased with the improved methods, larger fishing vessels and capital invested in the fishing industry.

The total catch of fish in our waters by Canadian fishermen for the year 1908-09 is valued at over $25,000,000, the Maritime Provinces contributing over $14,000,000 of this value. The lobster industry during this period was valued at $4,200,000, the cod industry $3,361,000, and the haddock, herring and mackerel industry, $5,523,000.

THE PACIFIC SALMON PACK.

Statistics Giving Comparisons With Other Years—The 1909 Shortage.

By B. E. Walker, President Bank of Commerce.

The salmon pack for the year was 920,000 cases, much larger, as usual, in the quadrennial year on the Fraser, than for 1906, 1907 and 1908, but quite unsatisfactory as compared with the pack of 1,167,000 cases in the quadrennial year 1905, or of 1,200,000 cases in 1904. The shortage was more than accounted for by the loss in the sockeye pack on the Fraser River, which was only 450,000 cases, against 837,000 in 1905. On the Puget Sound the sockeye catch was 962,000 cases, against 1,100,000 in 1905. Doubtless there were less fish actually running than usual, although there were other causes for the smaller pack, taking Fraser River and the Sound together. The fish came so late that at the end of the close season, on the 27th August, there had not been half the usual catch on the Fraser, and many fishermen stopped work at this time, so that the late run was partly lost. Again, on the Canadian side, the close season in each week was increased to 42 hours, and rigidly enforced with other restrictions, while on the United States side, whatever may be the federal regulations nominally, there were really no restrictions.

The weather also favored the Sound, causing the fish to remain there longer than usual, and thus enabling 25 to 30 per cent. of the Puget Sound catch, a much larger percentage than ever before, to be taken by purse seiners using power boats. Our own regulations seem to be both adequate and efficiently enforced, but unless the United States joins us both in making and in enforcing regulations looking to the preservation of salmon fishing in these waters, disastrous results, for which there will be no excuse whatever, must follow.

In salmon fishing in other Canadian waters, the catch was somewhat less than in 1908, and this is also true of halibut fishing, so far as Canadian vessels are concerned. Herring fishing is growing satisfactorily, and promises to be an important feature if properly cared for. Poaching by United States vessels still continues, although the Dominion Government has done something towards the protection of our waters. If foreign vessels are allowed to take immense catches of halibut in our waters, it is only a question of time when there fishing areas will be seriously depleted. We get precisely the same statement as to the facts, whether from Prince Rupert or from Vancouver, and there can be no doubt that we must act with greater vigor and employ a larger number of government cruisers. Elsewhere we give figures showing the enormous money value of the salmon catch of the Pacific Coast waters.

All that we lost in the salmon catch of the Fraser River, Oregon gained in Puget Sound, and the year was the largest on record except 1901. On the Columbia the catch was smaller than in 1908, and in the Alaska rivers it was also slightly less. But prices have been excellent, and although this is the quadrennial year in which part of the canned stock has usually to be carried over, this year's stocks are practically all sold. In order to emphasize the desirability of conserving our own fisheries, it may be well to give the quantities caught this year :

	Cases.
Alaska	2,332,806
Columbia and minor rivers	391,800
Puget Sound	1,561,574
British Columbia	967,920
Total	5,254,100

The value of the total pack is nearly $20,000,000.

To the Fruit Trade:

There is probably no business in the world where the margins are so small and where the risks are so great as in the grocery and fruit trade. Fruit will deteriorate, weather conditions may affect it materially and you know from first to last it is a hazardous line of business.

Every dealer knows that an adequate supply without overcrowding is the best for his trade. Every dealer knows that is when he makes the most money. Reasonable prices and a fair supply always give the jobber and retailer a good market. When the market is overloaded with any product, especially if it is perishable, prices are unsteady, the trade nervous, and there is no margin of profit for any one.

It was with the object of bettering distribution that nearly 5,000 growers of oranges and lemons in California decided to open distributing points in leading cities. They also had in mind the greater advantage in shipping entire fruit trains, thus securing faster time and more sure delivery to eastern points. Results have been such that the jobbing and retail trade have now a fair supply of oranges and lemons at all points at all times, thus enabling them to make a good margin of profit a certainty, which was impossible before the co-operation of the California fruit farmer.

These California farmers call themselves the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, and have distributing points in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg and Calgary to look after Canadian business. Every grower who is a member has an active part in the disposition of his fruit and a lively interest in the jobber and retailer on whom he depends for distribution.

You, as a jobber or retailer, must be ever mindful of your own interest. The California Fruit Growers Exchange, with perishable products to be disposed of to you, must first of all study your best interest, because you must be successful before we can hope to be.

We are advertising in a hundred Canadian papers to induce more people to eat more oranges. We are trying to bring customers into your stores for a fruit product in which there is a good margin, and the buyers of oranges or lemons will certainly need something else; therefore, if we influence them to go to your store for oranges or lemons it must materially assist your general trade.

We are always ready to co-operate with the jobber and retailer in improving our facilities to give them better fruit, thereby giving them a more satisfactory margin.

How to Figure Profit on the Stock Turnover

The Importance of a Right Percentage Basis—Error in Figuring Gain on Cost Instead of Selling Price—Net Profit to the Dealer—Examples Which Prove the Process—A Table Descriptive of Proportions.

By Howard R. Wellington.

A merchant is obliged to do business under a very heavy expense, say 25 per cent., and decides that for the present he cannot add more than 25 per cent. to the net cost of his goods. He is under the impression he will come out all right and can increase his margin from time to time. He is under the impression that he will neither make nor lose on this basis, but will break even. He does not stay in business very long, and the reason why will be found in the following illustration: Supposing the cost of his goods to be $100, he will add 25 per cent. for profit, making his selling price $125. But his expenses are 25 per cent., and as these must always be figured upon selling price, he realizes that from the $125 must be taken $31.25 (or 25 per cent.). The net proceeds of sale are, therefore, $93.75, a loss of $6.25, or 5 per cent of his sale price.

Again, supposing his cost of doing business is only 10 per cent., and that he advances cost of goods 25 per cent. for profit. It will work out this way: Cost, $100; add 25 per cent. for profit, gives $125 selling price; less 10 per cent. of selling price for expenses, $112.50 net proceeds; $12.50. net profit, or 10 per cent of selling price.

Another example, to make the process of calculation still clearer: Cost of doing business, 10 per cent.; advance on cost for profit, 50 per cent; selling price, $150; $15, or 10 per cent. for expenses: net proceeds, $135, less cost, $100, makes profit $35. Selling price divided decimally into profit gives 23½ percentage profit.

The accompanying table may be of value to merchants. The top row of figures represents the cost of doing business, while at the right side is percentage to be added for profits. The horizontal columns show profit percentage on selling price as figured from top and side figures. Take the first example. Say that the cost of doing business is 10 per cent., and that 25 per cent. is added for profit. Selling price $125, less 10 per cent., or $12.50, for cost of doing business, gives $112.50 net proceeds. The selling price divide decimally into the net profit gives percentage of profit, which in this case is 10 per cent.

Goods advanced 25 per cent., and selling at an expense of 25 per cent., show a loss of 5 per cent.

If an article costs $100, and is sold for $150, the cost of doing business being 25 per cent., the result is not a profit of 25 per cent., but 8⅓ per cent.

The process is this: Subtract cost from selling price the difference, of course, being profit. Divide the latter decimally by the selling price and the result will be the true profit. In other words, ascertain what proportion of sale was or would be profit—never try to arrive at percentage of profit by adding to cost a percentage of that cost equal to the amount of profit desired, or, by adding 50 cents to a dollar, assuming that the profit will be 50 per cent. The profit must be reckoned on the selling price.

To effect a given profit on the sales, the percentage to be added to cost is as follows:—

5 per cent. added to cost is 4½ per cent. profit on selling price; 10 per cent. added to cost is 9 per cent profit on selling price; 20 per cent. added to cost is 16 2-3 per cent. profit on selling price; 33 1-3 per cent. added to cost is 25 per cent. profit on selling price.

Any criticisms of the plans suggested will be welcomed.

THE GROCER HELPED HIM OUT.

A little boy bustled into a grocery store one day with a memorandum in his hand.

"Hello, Mr. Smith," he said. "I want thirteen pounds of coffee at thirty-two cents."

"Very good," said the grocer, and he noted down the sale, and put his clerk to packing the coffee. "Anything else, Charlie?"

"Yes. Twenty-seven pounds of sugar at nine cents."

"The loaf, eh? And what else?"

"Seven and a half pounds of bacon at twenty cents."

"That's the Arrow brand. Go on."

"Five pounds of tea at ninety cents; eleven and a half quarts of molasses at eight cents a pint; two eight-pound hams at twenty-one and a quarter cents and five dozen jars of pickled walnuts at twenty-four cents a jar."

The clerk bustled about, and the grocer made out the bill.

"It's a big order," he said. "Did your mother tell you to pay for it, or is it to be charged?"

"My mother," said the boy, as he pocketed the neat, accurate bill, "has nothing to do with this business. It is my arithmetic lesson, and I had to get it done somehow."

A physician, prescribing quinine for a German patient, gave it to him in capsules. In a few days the man returned and handing the doctor the empty capsules, said: "Here are your little bottles, Doctor. I took all the medicine."

WILL IT PAY?

This is the first question that is asked by any merchant when considering the purchase of modern store fixtures. The fundamental question is one of

ECONOMY.

A device is economical if

It adds cleanliness,
It is a convenience,
It makes labor lighter,
It makes labor more efficient,
It reduces the labor item,
It saves time,
It adds safety,
It adds neatness.
It helps the appearance.

IT SAVES MONEY.

Considered from these standpoints the

BOWSER

Self-Measuring Oil System is the greatest economy.

The question is not "Can I afford it?" because it will pay for itself with money that was before wasted. It's simply up to you to investigate. The merchant who tries to see how much he can really get by adopting modern methods is the one who pulls the largest trade.

Opening New Accounts

Your business will not grow unless you do add new customers constantly. The old ones will drop out with surprising regularity and those that remain will not increase their purchases materially.

Have a good live talk about your goods in THE GROCER every week. All the best grocers in Canada will read it, and if what you say is worth while, they'll steadily be influenced in your favor.

You will find THE GROCER the most powerful agent at your disposal in the cultivation of new accounts.

A GROCER'S CO-OPERATION

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes gives a lustre which far outlasts all others under the heat of the stove, and that is why it has so many friends that call for it over the grocery counters the world around. We believe that the real live grocer wants to push the goods that please his customers, and that is why we have the hearty co-operation of thousands upon thousands of grocers everywhere. It pays you to push it.

MORSE BROS., Props. - Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

An exclusive special feature of THE

Elgin National Coffee Mills

is the adjuster by means of which the mill can be regulated, when running, to grind coarsely or finely. Every ELGIN NATIONAL has steel grinders, and is a very attractive piece of furniture (apart from its profitableness) in any store.

EAT MORE CHEESE

MEAT cannot compare in nutritive value with well-made, whole-milk cheese. "Imperial" Cheese is wholesome and nourishing. It sustains and stimulates. It is easily digested and assimilated. It is a perfect food.

Mac Laren's Imperial Cheese

has a rich, appetizing, delicate flavor that satisfies and delights the most exacting taste. It adds a zest to any dish it is served with. There is nothing so good in the way of cheese as Mac Laren's "Imperial" Cheese.

Packed in dainty, sealed opal jars, it is protected from every source of contamination. Always clean, fresh and soft. It spreads like butter. Will not dry, sour or become stale. Good all the way through. Ready to serve at any time, from hasty lunch to finest feast. Your grocer has it from 10c. up.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

"Shell" Soap

Bramwell's Epsom Salts show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package. They are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" "Bramwell's" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

Epsom Salts

Pastacaldi's Peel is prepared from the finest Corsican Citrons and you get what you pay for every time. No excess of sugar, but highest quality selected "Peels" peel—drained. Pastacaldi's name on every box.

FOR

Unequalled PURITY

All-round SATISFACTION

DO YOU KNOW that the Canned Goods you stock have a mighty large influence on the general trade of your store? They can literally make you or break you. Be on the safe side by selling the kind that is of unimpeachable quality and uniform excellence. The freshest of choice fruit and vegetables only employed. All canning done in an up-to-date, sanitary factory by the highest-skilled workmen.

Old Homestead Brand

Our Advertising and Its Relation to You

We want you to be in touch with our plans Mr. Dealer---we want you to know them as intimately as we do ourselves. Co-operation is the only possible way to success for both of us.

Now the sooner you know our plans the sooner you will put in your stock of

Pure Gold Goods

(Trade Mark Registered)

The sooner you put in this stock the sooner you will begin getting your profits on the sale of the goods.

Frankly, we don't care how small your initial order is. In fact, we don't want you to load up on the goods at the start---it's a poor way to prove our case by trying to fill your shelves.

Make your order small---but make your order. What we want is that you be in a position to deliver the goods when they are called for.

We will trust to the quality of the goods, the advertising and your good judgment as to what quantity will constitute an active stock to bring us repeat orders---larger and larger as time goes on.

And this leads up to our original point---write us for sheet illustrating and describing our advertising campaign. Ask us any questions you will about our plans---we will gladly inform you.

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped frem Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

We pave your way to greater profits

Apart from the undoubted excellence of

"E.D.S." Brand Jams and Jellies

you must realize how profitable it is to handle a line of goods backed by regular consumer advertising. This is what we are now doing—creating a demand for you.

Any proposition that brings trade to your store is worth investigating, isn't it? Give "E.D.S." Brand a trial. There's money in it for you.

Money Lost by Methods of Unscientific Grocers

How Two Grocers in One Town Made Different Profits on Their Yearly Tea Sales —The Business of One Decreases While That of the Other Increases, all of Which Depended on the Methods of the Two Men—One Specialized on a 25c and the Other on a 40c Tea—The Result in Dollars and Cents.

Jas. Smith, a retail grocer living in the town of X, has 100 customers representing the same number of households, to whom he sells tea. He is one of the many unscientific grocers so far as tea is concerned.

He tells his customers that his 25-cent tea is a fairly good one. He has a 40-cent tea as well, but he is desirous of garnering in as much of the tea trade in that town as he can and he sells a cheap tea at 25 cents per pound.

Smith's customers purchase on an average half a pound of tea each per week. That makes 50 lbs. of tea altogether during the week.

A simple calculation shows that in 52 weeks, or one year, Smith sells 2,600 lbs. of tea ; at 25 cents per pound he receives for it $650 during the whole year.

A tea that sells for 25 cents costs anywhere from 18½ to 21 cents.

Smith buys his tea at 20 cents per pound ; therefore buys the 2,600 lbs. for $520.

His outlay during the year for tea alone is $520, and he sells it for $650, making a gross margin of $130 ; this is ¼ of his outlay or 25 per cent., without considering the cost of doing business.

While Smith made a profit on his year's sales of tea of $130, he did not do as he expected—get a greater share of the tea trade than he had at the beginning of the year.

The fact was, the quality of the tea he sold did not satisfy many of his 100 customers ; some of them had tasted teas sold by other grocers in the same town and at the end of the year they began purchasing tea from those other merchants.

The good-will of Smith's business was weakened ; he lost custom because many of his customers did not like his tea.

To make it worse, Smith didn't understand anything about how tea should be kept in the store in order that its flavor should not be impaired to any appreciable extent.

He did not know that it readily absorbed the flavors of many articles in the store which spoiled it.

One week he would place it on the shelf next to soap, in fact with soap all around it, because he didn't know any better. The next week his tea display on the shelf would be next to a pile of matches.

Again he would have a quantity of tea piled near a box of lemons, a coal-oil barrel or coffee and spices.

All these things helped to destroy its natural flavor and some customers of Smith—they didn't like to tell him about it—stopped buying his tea.

He had never been educated to the fact that tea deteriorates with age and when he got in a new consignment of tea he used to push the old stock to the back of the shelf and pile up the new arrival in front.

Now and again he used to place a few samples of his tea in the window along with a dozen other articles ; but it never entered his mind to occasionally put in a whole window display of tea in order to attract new business.

In short, Smith's methods of handling tea belonged to the past ; they were unscientific because he was not a scientific grocer and he made little profit on his tea business and gradually lost custom.

In that same town of X., there is another grocer, Henry Hale by name, who does business two blocks away from Jas. Smith. He is one of those up-to-date merchants who applies scientific methods in selling tea.

Hale was desirous of getting as much of the tea trade in his town as possible. He wanted to make a good profit on his investment and decided to specialize on quality.

In order to do this he bought tea to retail at 40 cents per pound ; that is, while he kept in stock some cheaper teas, he decided to advance the sales of the 40 cent tea as much as he could.

Mr. Hale had 100 customers to whom he sold his 40 cent tea. At the beginning of the year each of these customers purchased on an average a ½ pound of tea per week.

Altogether this made 50 lbs. each week or an average of 2,600 lbs. per year.

At 40 cents per pound, Hale received $1,040 for tea from those 100 customers during the year.

Tea that retails at 40 cents costs the retailer 30 cents, more or less.

The outlay for the 2,600 lbs. was $780, since Hale purchased his tea at 30 cents per lb., his gross margin of profit was therefore $260.

Since he did his business on a sound basis it did not cost him as much as it would an unscientific grocer to do business.

His gross profit was one-third of his outlay or 33 1-3 p.c.; it was just twice as much in money as if he had bought a 25 cent tea for 20 cents per lb.

Hale had figured on increasing his tea business by selling a good quality of tea—and he did.

He calculated like this : If I sell a good tea to these 100 customers—a better tea than they have been using—each member of the family will probably use more tea ; they will probably drink two cups where formerly they drank but one. Some of them did.

The result was, Hale gradually increased his sales per customer and at the end of the year he was selling on an average ⅝ of a pound per week to each.

Besides being careful in buying his tea, he took pains to place it in proper places on his shelves and in his warehouse. None was left exposed to the air and never did he allow his salesmen to sell off new stock before all the old was disposed of.

He was careful not to place tea on the shelf near soap, coffee, spices, lemons or any other grocery article, the flavor of which was liable to be absorbed by the tea. By this precaution few of his customers found it necessary to complain about the flavor of the tea.

Combined with this, Hale carried on a systematic advertising campaign in the daily newspaper in his town and occasionally he advertised his tea and its quality.

This, together with tea window-displays at the same time, brought in new business.

At the end of the year Hale had 150 regular customers buying tea from him, and his profits were worth while.

He had handled his tea business scientifically and the results were just what could be expected.

Better Understanding Between Merchant and Farmer

This is Needed if Mail Order Competition is to be Overcome—Opinion of a Deputy Minister of Agriculture — Catalogue Houses a Continual Drain on Wealth of Country Districts.

It is admitted by the merchants in general that the greatest menace to the trade and the growth of our country is the mail order business from the departmental stores in large cities. It is also a well understood fact that the mail order business is not in the best interests of the country.

The remedy to correct this lies in a better understanding of the relation between the buyer and seller. Wherever there is a wrong that affects a community, it will always cure itself in proportion as the people understand the right.

It is for the merchants to take the lead in instituting an educational campaign that will enlighten the public on economical trade conditions. The object, however, must be mutual; any effort which is made to enhance the interests of retail merchants at the expense of the buying public is not sound and could not hope to succeed, but an effort to bring out the fairness, as well as the best advantages of the best system of mercantiling service, will meet with the desired response from the general public.

That the catalogue trade is contrary to the interest of the country is even admitted by those who deal with them, and the only reason is that they think they can save a little on some of their purchases. They do not take into consideration, neither do they understand, how the sending of their money away from home affects them in many other ways. They do know that they must have town stores for their convenience, but they do not know that by every dollar they send away they weaken the power of the local merchants to give them the best service.

The farmers have their institutes, through which they derive invaluable information and help; the merchants have their organization for their benefits, and the laboring people have their meetings for improvement, but the links which connect these different lines of industry have been entirely neglected.

While these institutions did wonders for their own classes, the time has come when the different organizations must work out harmonious relations to each other.

If this is done, then our country will assume its natural growth and instead of the money being sent to the large centres to make land worth four million dollars an acre, it will circulate in their own localities, make both town and farm property more valuable and bring back to them many times over what they are led to believe they make on the goods they buy.

Advice From Deputy Minister.

Speaking with C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture of Ontario, who fully realizes the immense drain on the country through mail-order houses, endorses the idea that it would be well if the merchants would attend the "farmers' institutes" and secure permission to discuss trade matters and perhaps have a speaker who is prepared to go into the details of the relation of the farmer and the merchants. Farmers and the consuming public should sometimes be invited to the meetings of the merchants so that they will learn that their interests are mutual. If this question were fairly understood and the merchants gave the proper service the mail order business would decrease.

Institute meetings are reported by the district newspapers and these will be only too glad to give as much publicity to this phase of the question as possible. Some of them are slow to take the initiative by advocating home buying but will give plenty of space to any address along the lines of keeping trade at home.

In this way those farmers who do not attend the meetings will be given the proper education as well as the townspeople who read the reports.

Three things must be grasped about mail-order houses.

They are continually stretching out their arms for new business;

They employ legal, up-to-date methods which need energetic merchants to overcome;

Unless these methods are overcome the country trade will gradually fall into their hands.

Why not adopt Mr. James' suggestion and meet their competition? If every farmer who attends the institute meetings can be won over—and there is nothing to prevent this becoming the case—there will be a mighty force working for the good of home-trade and against the catalogue competition. This force will increase of its own accord but every year the merchants should be alert to see that they are again represented at the farmers' meetings.

It is the business of the merchants to take the initiative.

PERSONAL NOTES.

R. A. Ross, a London, Ont., retail grocer has recently returned from a pleasure and health trip to British Columbia.

In connection with the Food Congress, which was held in Paris, France, in October last, a beautiful medal, from the design of Daniel Dupuis, has been presented by the White Cross Society of Geneva, to Loudon M. Douglas, of Edinburgh Scotland, who acted as Honorary Secretary to the English speaking section of the Congress.

Things That Shouldn't Be

A Grocer Behind the Counter With His Hat on Serving a Woman.

Wins Christmas Advertising Contest a Second Time

Prize Goes to Forsyth Jr., a Dartmouth, N.S., Grocer—Judges Consider His Ad.-Copy a Model to go by—Several Splendid Runners-up and Others Deserving Special Attention—Increased Interest From a Year Ago.

The winner of the Christmas Advertising Competition of The Canadian Grocer and the five runners-up in their order of merit are:

FORSYTH JR., DARTMOUTH, N.S., written by Jno. Forsyth.

GEO. MABEN, ELORA, ONT., written by Geo. Maben.

THE W. H. STONE CO, WINNIPEG, MAN., written by A. E. White.

T. A. ROWAT & CO., LONDON, ONT., written by R. J. Donaghy.

KIRKUP & WILKIE, FORT WILLIAM, ONT., written by W. H. Thompson.

THE G. W. ROBINSON & CO., HAMILTON, ONT., written by A. P. Rogers.

Jno. Forsyth, of Dartmouth, N.S., evidently knows the fundamental prineiples of advertising. Last year he carried off the prize in the Christmas contest and now he duplicates the performanee. In the contest ending 1907, his ad. was considered among the leaders, although first prize went to R. J. Donaghy with T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ont. The honor this year therefore goes to Nova Scotia, and more particularly to Jno. Forsyth.

The number of advertisements received for the contest this time was beyond all expectations. They came, like the window photographs, from all provinees of Canada.

The pleasing feature of the competition to The Canadian Grocer was the evident increased interest that is being taken in retail store newspaper-advertising. This The Grocer has been advoeating continuously and the results are plainly visible.

The judges, who by the way, are men doing nothing but writing advertisements for some of the most successful firms in business in Canada, and who judged last year's contest, maintain that generally speaking there has been a great improvement in the writing of copy, as well as in the type displays. They found merits in every ad. submitted, and many in some, and outside of the prize winner found difficulties in deciding the runners-up.

An advertiser in writing copy and displaying it, who is desirous of getting good results—and it is to be assumed that every advertiser works to that end—should ask himself the following questions:

Does it attract the attention of the reader?

Will it hold the reader's attention until it is carefully read?

Does it make the reader want to buy the articles advertised?

Unless the reader's mind passes through the three stages indicated above, there is something lacking in the copy or its manner of display. These were the points upon which the judges based their decisions and upon these the prize was awarded to the ad. of Forsyth Jr.

Points About Winning Ad.

On reading this advertisement, which is here reproduced, one is struck with its educative and entertaining nature. You can tell from it that the writer puts his soul into the work, that he is a bright, observant man and that he gets close to his readers.

Take for instanee the heading across the top and particularly the editorial down the left hand side, which begins: "At the first Christmas the grocer doubtless cut . . . . ." This is all interesting, and if Jno. Forsyth writes this kind of copy all the time, one would think that the people of Dartmouth would watch for The Dartmouth Patriot and the ad. with every issue.

Then there is a little talk given before the price of each article is mentioned, which should hold the attention of the reader, and in fact, make her want to buy those articles. He begins with raisins, because raisins seem to have been first in the minds of purchasers of groceries every time they gave their orders for Christmas goods.

Consider the talk on syrups. It reads. "Some people are slow to learn that you can drink one's health just as effectively, more so in fact, in syrup as you can in Mountain Dew. Try it yourself next time." This should create the desired effect upon a reader of this ad. who is kindly disposed to syrup, and who is out of a stock of it.

Nothing in the Christmas goods line seems to have been forgotten—not even the onions for stuffing the goose.

The wind-up in the words: "The man who makes good his ads. even at Christmas time," is convincing and gives the public confidence in the store.

Another good feature about this ad. is its size. The original from the Dartmouth newspaper occupied a full page space.

Sample of a Neat Display.

As an example of an ad. display pleasing to the eye, and with a small space used to the best advantage, the advertisement reproduced from the Elora Express, Elora, Ont., must be carefully considered.

A space 2-column in width and a third of a column in length was utilized. The general appearance, as the judges remarked, is artistic, the cut at the top is appropriate and artistically treated and the talks are good. For instance in speaking of icings it reads: "Our cake

MABEN - The Grocer - ELORA

An Attractive Ad. Written by Geo. Maben, Elora, Ont., and Reduced From Two-Column Space.

icings are absolutely pure and wholesome and cannot be equalled for quality, flavor and satisfaction." The ad. also shows an eagerness on the part of the groced to give good service. While the Maben ad. may be small in comparison to some others it is particularly attractive and well written.

A Western Winner.

The advertisement of The W. H. Stone Co., Winnipeg, Man., is attractively set up. The reading matter is suggestive of Christmas times and conducive to making a person purchase who reads the ad. A feature of this advertisement is the heavy type used in naming the prices. The holly border, emblematic of the season, is good. While the lists of articles mentioned are somewhat crowded, yet the many educative talks and the general appearance of the whole ad. should be sufficient to hold the attention of the reader. The original in the Winnipeg Telegram was 14" in length and 3-column wide.

T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ont., always present splendid advertisements to the public and their Christmas ad. is no departure. It begins with reasonable display type: "It's the good things to eat that your grocer supplies — which helps so much to make the Christmas season the happiest of all the year, etc." The copy is good, the prices are named with black-faced type and the ad. is not over-crowded.

The advertisement of Kirkup & Wilkie, Fort William, Ont., was another well written one, and if it had been better displayed it might have been more effective. The contrast between the heavy black type at the top and the smaller type in the panels was probably a little too great. The catch lines read: "Get these with our Christmas groceries—quality service, satisfaction," with heavy black rules under the last three words. The ad. has a distinctive style and is effective from a selling standpoint once the attention of the reader has been riveted.

There is a unique feature about the ad. of the G. W. Robinson Co., which begins: "Old time Christmas grocery sale Thursday." This has the tendency of awakening an interest in the reader as to what an old time sale is, and induces her to study it more closely. In refering to plum duff, the old-time mother's cake, etc., it adds—that it always tastes better when kept for a while. It is well written and well displayed and according to the writer sold the goods well. It was written more than a month before Christmas, with a view to inducing purchasers to buy early.

Deserving of Special Mention.

Space does not permit going into the merits of the various others sent in for the competition, but special attention was given by the judges to the ads. of the following: Jno. O. Carpenter, Hamilton, Ont., small but well written; Thomas Lawson, Ltd., Kelowna, B.C., written by Geo. S. McKenzie, who sent five good samples of his work; Share & Campbell, Halifax, N.S., who advertised in one of their six advertisements in the competition a unique bon-bon contest; Woodman & McKee, Coaticook, Que.; Robson, Lindsay, Ont.; C. A. Farmer & Son, Perth, Ont.; J. H. Fleury, Lindsay, Ont., who might have featured a new idea to good advantage—bring us your recipe and we will weigh out each ingredient, which will save you the time; Geo. A. McCullough & Co., Stoughton, Sask., which by the way, advertised general store goods more so than groceries; Wm. T. Patterson, Belleville, Ont., and Prentice & Sproule, Collingwood, Ont.

A great improvement over previous years in writing copy was noticeable to the judges, which is a pleasing feature to The Canadian Grocer. It shows an appreciation of the efforts of this paper in its work during the year to give as many modern ideas on retail advertising as possible. This will be continued during the coming year, and it is hoped that the readers of The Grocer will continue to let us have their ideas on the subject and take a greater interest in it than they have done in the past.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

JOHN BULL'S BUSINESS.

The sunshine of prosperity seems to be rising above the horizon in Great Britain, if we can take the figures of its foreign trade for the last calendar year as a criterion.

It is true that there is not a great deal to boast about in these figures. Their importance chiefly lies in the fact that they indicate a recovery in trade.

Both in exports and imports increases are shown, the increase in the former being £1,275,620, and in the latter £31,787,000.

The chief increase in the imports is in raw materials, while in manufactured goods the appreciation is not so marked. In exports, on the other hand, raw materials show a decrease while in manufactured goods there is a slight increase. The chief increase in exports is in articles of food and drink.

The reason there is not much in the figures which permit of boasting is due to the fact that while the foreign trade increased over the previous year it is still a great deal smaller than that of 1907, which was the "top notch" year for the foreign trade of Great Britain, as well as other countries. The imports for 1909 were £21,000,000 less than in 1907, and the exports £47,655,000 less.

The trade of Canada has got back to the figures of 1907, and that of the United States is getting into line. It is to be hoped that during 1910 British trade will also reach the pinnacle of 1907.

There are a good many people in Canada who think that tariff reform would help British trade somewhat, and judging by the elections some of the people in Great Britain are beginning to think so too. What gives the average man the most assurance, however, is the knowledge that when "John Bull" wakes up and decided to do something, he usually does it, no matter what the forces against him may be. He is evidently wide awake to the fact that his prestige in the commercial world has been waning. He now seems to be on the point of deciding that it shall wax, and we may expect to see him ultimately employing the aggressive methods which will bring this about.

If he adopts tariff reform it is to be hoped that he will not forget the still more important factor of judicious advertising.

THE GROCER AND THE FUR COAT.

Some time ago a letter was received by a Toronto gentleman from a friend who runs a grocery store in the country, and the largest portion of the letter was made up in complaining about the unfair competition from catalogue houses. He found a good deal of fault with the people for not supporting the stores at home. The next letter came with a request to find out the prices of certain lines of fur coats. His wife would like to get one, and she thought she could buy it cheaper in Toronto than at home.

This shows inconsistency as well as the unbusiness-like men who call themselves merchants. There is a good deal of talk about the farmers buying from catalogue houses, but if the truth were known, the townspeople and even the merchants would in this respect be great sinners as well.

Unless the retail merchant rises above this smallness, sets an example and shows the buying public that he actually believes it is to his advantage to buy at home, the general public will never be converted.

As is shown in this case, the merchants are to blame for losing business which naturally belongs to them. The country needs larger men, men who can see beyond their own petty selfishness, in order to hold and build up their rights.

It is up to the merchants to decide whether they will do the business, or allow it to go to the large catalogue houses. A merchant has no moral right to be in the retail business unless he takes an interest in the welfare of his own town.

A HAVANA POTATO TRUST.

The shipment of potatoes from the port of St. John, New Brunswick, for the Cuban market, has been the subject of many conflicting statements lately regarding the state of the market in Havana. It is claimed that a trust composed of wealthy Spanish firms has been seeking to control the market and New Brunswick shippers are finding it difficult to secure a foothold there. Some of the dealers assert that owing to the methods of the trust in manipulating the market, they have been forced to sell their shipments practically without profit.

Reports from the island also state that the trust has tried to oppose the importation of New Brunswick tubers, and it is claimed by some that it discriminates in the matter of steamship lines.

However, there seems to be a good market in Havana for potatoes arriving in good condition, and as there are reported to be about 100,000 barrels still available for export, and there are plenty of steamers sailing, the shippers are likely to close the season with good results.

From now until the first week in March there will be eleven sailings and indications are that all will carry full cargoes.

POWER OF THE WINDOW.

The average retail merchant has by this time learned that there are few adjuncts to his business more important than the window display.

There is possibly nothing which exercises such a potent influence in selling goods as the window display. Anything that attracts attention, arrests the eye of the passer or of the prospective purchaser, is of inestimable value to the man who has merchandise to sell. This is true with reference to the man or woman who goes down town Saturday night for the express purpose of purchasing the Sunday dinner. The chances are very much in favor that the shopper will be attracted by the most appetizing display of goods in the market or in the store window, and that they will pass by the dark and unattractive window.

In every store of any importance there is always someone, some employe, if not the proprietor, who is up to date and quick to think and act. This is the man who can be depended upon to think of something new, original and up to date to place in the window, and of some original arrangement to make it effective.

The Weakness of the Combine Bill

The Bill is All Right as Far as it Goes, but it Does Not Go Far Enough---Should Provide for a Permanent Board such as the Railway Commission.

The bill introduced in the House of Commons by Hon. McKenzie King regarding combines, trusts, mergers and monopolies provides that six or more persons who are of the opinion that a combine exists which is detrimental to the public interests, can make an application to a judge of the High Court for an investigation. The judge having been convinced that a prima facie case has been made out reports to the Minister of Labor. The Minister in turn calls upon each party concerned to appoint a member to the board of investigation. The two members thus appointed select a third who must be a judge. The latter becomes chairman.

This board is to have all the powers of a court of record and can compel attendance of witnesses and the production of documents. The decision of this Board is to be published in the Canada Gazette, and in the newspapers. In addition to the publicity given the Bill further provides that the Governor-in-Council may either reduce or remove the duty on the article affected by the combine, trust or merger. A still heavier penalty is the provision which calls for a penalty not exceeding $1,000 and costs for each day that the combine continues to offend. The expense of the investigation is to be born by the government.

Under the old law as it stands to day the aggrieved parties must first of all bring the matter before a judge, who in turn reports to the Government, which may, if it sees fit, order an investigation by a judge. All the costs of the subsequent investigation must be borne by the complainants, whether the case is decided in their favor or not.

That this is a costly undertaking to the parties who are suffering from the effects of the combination is quite obvious. It is a decided obstacle to investigation, no matter how illegal the combination may be. The newspaper publishers who caused the investigation into the paper combine a few years ago know this only too well. They won, but as they had to "foot the bill," it was at great cost.

The essential features therefore, in which the new Bill differs from the present Act is that it first of all simplifies the procedure, puts the cost of investigating on the government instead of on the complainant and in addition to the publicity given and the possibility of the tariff being either reduced or removed altogether, imposes a financial penalty of $1,000 a day should noncompliance with the law continue.

As far as it goes the bill is an improvement over the law which it is designed to supersede, but while that is so, it is to be regretted that the government did not go still further.

Every fair-minded man, every business man and every student of economics recognizes that one of the conditions of modern business methods is the development of mergers and combinations ; in other words of agreements between various classes of mercantile enterprises.

Some combinations are no doubt based on illegitimate grounds. Their sole aim is to bleed the public. But they are not all of this type. On the contrary we believe that the majority of these mergers or agreements are not only based on sound business principles, but on sound moral principles as well. They are merely created with a view to rectifying evils or curtailing cost of doing business.

But as the law now stands the legitimate merger, combination, agreement, or whatever we may choose to call it, is subject to irritating, costly and unjust legal proceedings. This ought not to be, and could easily be obviated if the Government would provide proper safe-guards, and safe-guards which would at the same time protect the public as well as the members of the combinations which were legally and morally sound.

It appears to us that the most simple way of doing this would be for the Government to create a permanent board similar to that of the Railway Commission, which is doing such good work in the interests of the shippers and traveling public of the country. This board could make a tentative examination of any charges made, and if a prima facie case was made out take such steps as would lead to a thorough investigation and the punishment of the parties if found guilty.

No one denies to-day the right of labor to combine for legitimate purposes. No one would probably deny that in theory business men do not enjoy the same right. But in practice they do not enjoy the same right. Wherever and whenever business men combine, merge, or organize in any way the fact is heralded by the daily press as a menace to the public welfare, and the authorities are forced to prosecute and the members at the combination to protect themselves in a costly, and usually long-pending, suit, whether they are innocent or guilty.

A permanent board such as suggested would protect the public, and at the same time prevent pernicious and unjust prosecutions of business men, whose organizations are founded upon equity and justice.

The weakness of the bill now before the House of Commons, is that it does not provide for this much needed machinery.

NEW IDEAS THE LIFE OF TRADE.

The man who "never did business like that" is gradually weeding himself from the mercantile field. When confronted with the problems of the present and having suggested to him certain courses to pursue, he puts up the plea that he has never done business that way, has heretofore been successful and sees no reason why he should modify, change, or add to that which has made him where he is. He keeps on for a while in the way he is going, and although he insists that he is doing good business, he knows that something is wrong, somewhere, but he still sees no reason for adopting newfangled ideas.

If we can't make up our minds to do the things of to-day as the necessities of the day demands and shape our methods according to the particular requirements of the present, we'll sooner or later find that he who has a way of his own of doing things, and persists in doing things that way under any conditions, will get left far behind in the race for business.

A man goes to bed with a clear conscience that he has fixed his business properly for the problems he has contended with during the day, but he wakes up to his business the next morning with some new series or sets of trouble confronting him that demand other treatments.

Ignoring or passing over won't rid his business of the annoyances, and because he didn't have them to contend with 10 or 20 years ago, he fools himself expensively if he attempts to let them go unnoticed and unconquered.

It doesn't make any difference how we did business some other day ; the problems of to-day are the ones that demand our attention to-day, and if we don't know how to handle them, it is up to us to find out immediately.

Bear in mind that no manufacturer wants his goods lying on the retailer's shelves as dead stock. If he can make a live customer out of you by starting the goods, he wants to do it.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Winnipeg Grocer Evolves Profit-Sharing Idea With Customers—Advice on Handling Fish—Huckster Fined in London—A Day's Cash Sales Refunded to Promote Buying for Cash—Mid-week Business Improved by Guessing Device.

Profit-Sharing With Customers.

Winnipeg, Jan. 25.—A. Hendry, Winnipeg, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his retail grocery business career on the New Year by adopting a profit-sharing plan for all his customers. His system is that six articles of daily use will be offered to customers at strictly cost prices, and these, with the prices will be printed on a circular issued each month for that purpose. At the end of each month the articles will revert back to their regular values, and a new reduced list issued.

Mr. Hendry claims that this is not price-cutting, but simply a profit-sharing idea which is a reward for past generous custom, and a means to solicit a larger patronage.

Advice on Handling Fish.

Bracebridge, Ont., Jan. 26.—Now that the fish season is here again some special attention should be given to the care and display of fish in the store. A grocer here believes in keeping the kegs of fish inside the store. He is opposed to the principle of piling up goods of any kind on the outside of the store in order to attract trade. They are left exposed to the sun, wind, rain and snow and often deteriorate in quality.

"Dressy windows are all that's needed," he says, "but, unfortunately, from now on in front of many grocery stores customers will be confronted with the annual barrel of salt herring, and the kegs of salmon and white fish. The way out of all the difficulties is to advertise that you handle all kinds of fish, but keep the fish in the background or else display them neatly and attractively."

Grocers Watch Huckster By-law.

London, Ont., Jan. 26.—The Retail Grocers' Association have the co-operation of the market clerk in trying to put down any infractions of the huckster by-law, and were successful last Friday. A man was fined $2 and $3.35 costs, with the option of a 10-days' sentence, for buying some potatoes on the market and selling them again. The case caused a great deal of interest in police court. The huckster bought four bags of potatoes at 60 cents and resold them to a grocer at 65 cents per bag, thus breaking the law.

One huckster here has a stall in the basement of the market house, for which he pays the "big" sum of $4 per month. He, with others, bother the grocers a great deal by buying market produce one day, which he stores in the stall, and then brings it up for sale off his wagon a day or two later. The magistrate severely criticized this method and likely the fine will have the effect of lessening infractions.

Refunding Full Day's Cash Sales.

Peterboro, Jan. 25.—An unique idea has been adopted by E. F. Mason & Co. to encourage cash payments. He advertises in his regular newspaper space that his customers will be refunded the amount of their cash purchases made on a certain business day in January and that the day will be announced after the first of February.

It will thus be seen that customers paying cash are sure to receive a rebate on some one day's cash purchase during January. All they have to do is present their bill for that day and the money will be refunded—a rather novel way of promoting cash sales.

Special Shelves for Canned Goods.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—Harry McClement, a West Toronto grocer, moves on the 29th inst. into new premises at 1717 Dundas Street. His new store is larger than the old one and fitted up in better shape. A metallic ceiling, newly papered walls and the fresh graining make a favorable impression. On the side wall Mr. McClement has a novel idea in the way of shelving for his canned goods. Shelves two tiers high are supported by brackets fastened to the wall, thus giving more room in the store and making a neater appearance. Mr. McClement has made careful selection in stocking his store.

When Patience Ceases.

Blenheim, Ont., Jan. 25.—Unique methods of "putting it up to" the delinquent debtor are many, but rarely if ever has it been told to that individual with more directness than in a little card recently published in a Blenheim paper by Geo. J. Gibb, a professional man here. Mr. Gibb's appeal reads thus "Patience ceases to be a virtue when it allows people to impose on the patient one. I find myself in that position, and have therefore decided that after Jan. 31, the clerk of the court will be asked to interview all who have been imposing on my patience.—Geo. J. Gibb."

Getting Mid-week Business.

Leamington, Ont., Jan. 25.—S. G. Morse, a Leamington merchant, is giving considerable attention to the problem of getting customers out more in the middle of the week instead of on Saturdays. He has evolved an unique idea to help. In his window he displays a clock and the customer who guesses nearest to the time the clock will stop is awarded a cash prize. The customer second nearest also secures a cash prize. These prizes are given away every Thursday afternoon. The experiment has proven so successful that Mr. Morse intends continuing it.

An Attractive Confectionery Window.

Guelph, Ont., January 26.—Some exceptionally attractive window displays and store decorations were to be seen in Guelph grocery stores during the weeks of Christmas and Yew Year's. One of the prettiest windows in the city was a candy window in Williams' store. The manager of the grocery department there distinguished himself in the display he made. Fancy confections of all kinds, with bonbons and "crackers" taking a prominent part, were shown in such a manner that the attractiveness of the assortment caused much favorable comment.

Have Customers Buy Within Their Means.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—"Do not try to oversell a customer; take for instance, a customer whom you know cannot afford many luxuries," said William Currie, a Montreal retailer. "Many clerks and even store owners will try to sell them, though they realize that financially they are not in a position to buy such things. Sell them only what they really want and as their means increase you can increase your sales. None of us are in business only for a year or two. It will pay to nurse such people along and help, rather than hinder, their financial well-being."

Doubles Sale of Fowl.

Guelph, Ont., Jan.—26. — One of the leading grocers of Guelph has during the past few weeks almost doubled his best records in the dressed fowl business.

"We find," he explained to The Grocer, who was asking how it had been accomplished, "that our customers greatly appreciate it when we draw the fowl they buy free of charge."

The grocer went on to state that they did not sell drawn fowl, but that they weighed and sold them as they were and only cleaned them free as an act of courtesy to the customers. They state that they had no idea when they commenced the practice, how popular it would be with their customers. Many new customers were secured also, as ladies would come in and ask if they were in the habit of cleaning fowl free, and when they replied in the affirmative it nearly always meant a sale..

Lay Plans for Housecleaning Stock in February

Appliances for This Work Will be Required Soon and Stocks Should be Early Laid In—Lenten Fish Trade Needs Attention Next Month—A Good Time to do Some Interior Cleaning Up.

Toward the end of January the careful grocer begins to look forward toward his next month's business and to plan in advance as far as possible what should be done to aid matters along the proper path—the path of increased volume of paying trade.

January has come to be pretty generally recognized as set apart for stock-taking and general inventory work. December is too full of business to allow sufficient time for such a purpose. Thus we see the average grocer approaching February with a pretty complete knowledge of what is in his store.

During the course of a year's business there is necessarily quite a collection of odds and ends of various lines, which have either been handled too freely or become misplaced until too old to be readily saleable. Some are past the selling stage altogether and the wide-awake man should rid his store of such dead stock as soon as possible. February is about the best time for such procedure. Advertise sales of such articles at reduced prices and "get rid" of them. They take up valuable space and only decrease in value the longer they are held. Labels become torn, cans dented, and in a hundred different ways articles left too long on the shelves deteriorate.

Such sales will be found of great assistance in booming general trade after the dull January season. People need a stimulant to rouse them from the reactionary period after New Year's. Cut prices on standard slightly damaged goods will often start general buying, thus working a double benefit for the grocer progressive enough to use them.

Plan for House Cleaning Times.

Spring house cleaning for everyone is not far off and the grocer must see that his stock of brooms, mops, soaps, etc., is complete. It is better to be in the field early than late. Remember that house cleaning is somewhat of a germ disease. One housekeeper decides to start, and either the sound of beaten carpets or some occult influence spreads the disease through an entire community in short order. For this reason it will pay to look ahead and be ready for any emergency.

One of Canada's largest retailers has a series of special orange sales throughout February. He claims it needs just such a sale to bring people back to the idea of buying again. The sale need not be of oranges but a sale of some kind seems necessary, or rather a series of them.

Regarding the store itself in February, not only should it be cleared of dead stock, but it should undergo a thorough housecleaning at the same time. Always somewhat of a dull month, the time can be used to good advantage in this spring trade.

Lent is coming soon. Fish will be in large demand. Do not fail to see that the fish stocks are kept up. If you don't it simply means money lost. As sure as Lent comes around the demand for fish of all kinds increases.

In general February should be made to open up the year's business with a clean store, a clean stock and an increasing trade produced by special sales.

Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, is back from Atlantic City, where he took his family for a holiday of a few weeks.

Tariff Changes Made by French-Canadian Treaty

General Effect is to Have Goods Coming From France Placed on Intermediate Tariff Basis—Peculiar Circumstances Under Which Duty on Shelled Almonds has Been Increased Instead of Being Decreased.

The French-Canadian treaty, which is soon to be enforced, with a view to bettering the trade relationship between Canada and the French Republic, shows some interesting changes in the tariffs on foodstuffs from France.

Among the most important in which the grocery trade is interested are macaroni and vermicelli, dates and figs, fruits in cans or bottles, various nuts, fish preserved in oils, castile soap, canned vegetables such as beans, anchovies, sardines, sprats and other fish and olive oil.

Speaking generally of the new tariff, it places these goods on what is termed the intermediate tariff, instead of on the general tariff. Strictly speaking, the new tariff will be known as the French treaty tariff.

The accompanying table shows the effect it will have on the above-mentioned articles:

		General Tariff.	French Treaty Tariff.
Macaroni and vermicelli	per 100 lbs.	$1.25	$1.00
Dates and figs	per 100 lbs.	.62½	.55
Fruits in air-tight cans or other air-tight packages, the weight of cans, etc., to be included in weight for duty	lb.	.02¼	.02
Almonds, walnuts, shelled peanuts, etc..	lb.	.03	.02
Nuts, shelled, n.o.p.	lb.	.04	.03 1-3
Fish preserved in oil, n.o.p.	Ad. val	35%	30%
Castile soap	lb.	.02	.01
Vegetables, tomatoes excepted, including baked beans, in cans or other air-tight packages, n.o.p.; the weight of the cans or other packages to be included in weigth for duty	lb.	.01½	.01
Anchovies, sardines, sprats and other fish, packed in oil or otherwise, in tin boxes, the weight of the box to be included in weight for duty—when weighing over 8 oz., and not over 12 oz. each	Per box	.03½	.02
Olive oil	Ad val.	20%	15%

Macaroni and vermicelli from France has been coming ino Canada under the general tariff, which is $1.25 per cwt. With the new treaty in force the duty will be $1 per cwt. Dates and figs will not over-rule the old French treaty, and shelled walnuts remained at 2 cents. The French-Canadian treaty places the duty at 3 1-3 cents, which, the broker explained, is an advance rather than a decrease.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firm at increase.
Coffee—Firm.
Cloves and Ginger—Slightly up in primary.
Walnuts—Better grades scarce.

Montreal, Jan. 27th, 1910.

This week has been a somewhat disappointing one to most dealers, after the exceptional sales made in nearly all lines for the previous three or four weeks. It is thought the slump may be partly due to the warmer weather that prevailed this week, which has caused many people to stay indoors rather than wade through water and slush. At any rate, nearly all lines are quiet this week. The market is practically featureless.

Sugar continues firm in spite of the advance which took place only a short time ago.

Roads in and about Montreal are in bad shape and very few people care to drive in under present conditions.

It is hoped that cold weather will come back within a day or so and prophecies are that if it does, trade will be back to its previous standard with a bound.

Sugar—There has been no further change in the sugar situation, though the firm condition of the raw market gives no indication of a weakening in the price of refined.

TORONTO—The canned goods trade is active, especially peas, corn and tomatoes, and all look for an advance. This feeling is not only among the wholesale men, but that the retailers are anticipating this is shown from the fact that they are buying freely and in quantities that have a speculative appearance about it. The market opened low and it is admitted by all that after carrying them for so long, paying storage and insurance, a raise would be justifiable.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Beans—Prices higher.
Sugar—Advance maintained.
Evaporated Apples—Weak.
Dried Fruits—Firm.

The wholesale men report that business is rapidly improving and is quite satisfactory. Orders are up to their expectations and the good things expected after our bountiful harvest are materializing. Prospects are encouraging.

There have been few changes in prices since last week, the high price of beans being one of the features.

Sugar—The recent advance of 10c on sugar is maintained, but the market is easier and no further change is looked for, for some time. Cuban sugar, if the weather remains favorable, will be a big crop.

Beans—It is difficult to secure enough beans to supply the demand. The crop is considered a good one, but the farmers are not in a hurry to sell. If the labor men put their heads together and abstain from eating beans, the farmers might find out that they made a mistake. Prices are about 10c a bushel higher.

FREE DEALS DISCOUNTENANCED.

The question of "free deals" was one of the most important which came before the conference in Chicago last week among the manufacturers, jobbers and retailers of groceries, with a view of correcting abuses in the trade. It is claimed that these "free deals and schemes" of manufacturers are introduced with the result that the retailer is called upon to stock more goods than his legitimate demands require and force a monetary obligation on both retailer and jobber, thereby operating against the best interests of both retailer and jobber, without advantage to the consumer. A resolution was passed, opposing and denouncing what was termed the practice of subsidizing jobbers' salesmen as employed by some manufacturers, because in some States it is contrary to law, tends to demoralize salesmen and influences salesmen to further the sale to the retailer of products for which there may be no demand, causing obligations on both the retailer and jobber.

NO COAL OIL AFTER DARK.

Guelph, Jan. 26.—A Guelph grocery firm have announced to their customers that they have definitely decided not to deliver coal oil after eight o'clock on Saturday nights.

"We have several good reasons for taking this precaution," said the grocer in whose store the notice was displayed. "In the first place it is dangerous to handle coal oil after dark and while the insurance companies do not raise any serious objection to it, if we had a fire caused by that we could not collect any insurance. Then there is the danger of the delivery man setting fire to coal oil in his waggon, while lighting his lantern or striking a match to look at the names on orders. Even if he does not set the oil on fire he is very apt to spill some of it by having the can upset, and in this way we have, on more than one occasion, had the worth of a good many coal oil orders lost in the damage to groceries. And even if there are no upsets, or mishaps of that kind, the driver is apt to soil his gloves while handling coal oil in the dark and consequently he is likely to give the grocery orders he has to handle a disagreeable odor or flavor."

The board of directors of the Canada Brokerage Co. met at the head office, Toronto, on Jan. 17, and declared the following dividends: Preferred stock, 7 per cent.; preference stock bonus, 3 per cent.; common stock, 5 per cent.

Because February 1 will be civic election day in Montreal, and in order that they may take stock, Laporte, Martin & Co. will not open their warehouse and office on the first day of the coming month. As a result of stock-taking they state they will be able to offer some especially attractive bargains to retailers.

"SALADA" is sold only in sealed lead packages, proof against odors and dirt. It can't be contaminated. ∴ ∴

EAST and West—North and South, wherever you may go—you find "SALADA" Tea. It comes to you direct from the tea-gardens of Ceylon—all its garden freshness and native purity perfectly preserved in sealed "SALADA" packets. It reaches you just fifteen weeks after being picked in far off Ceylon—twelve thousand miles away.

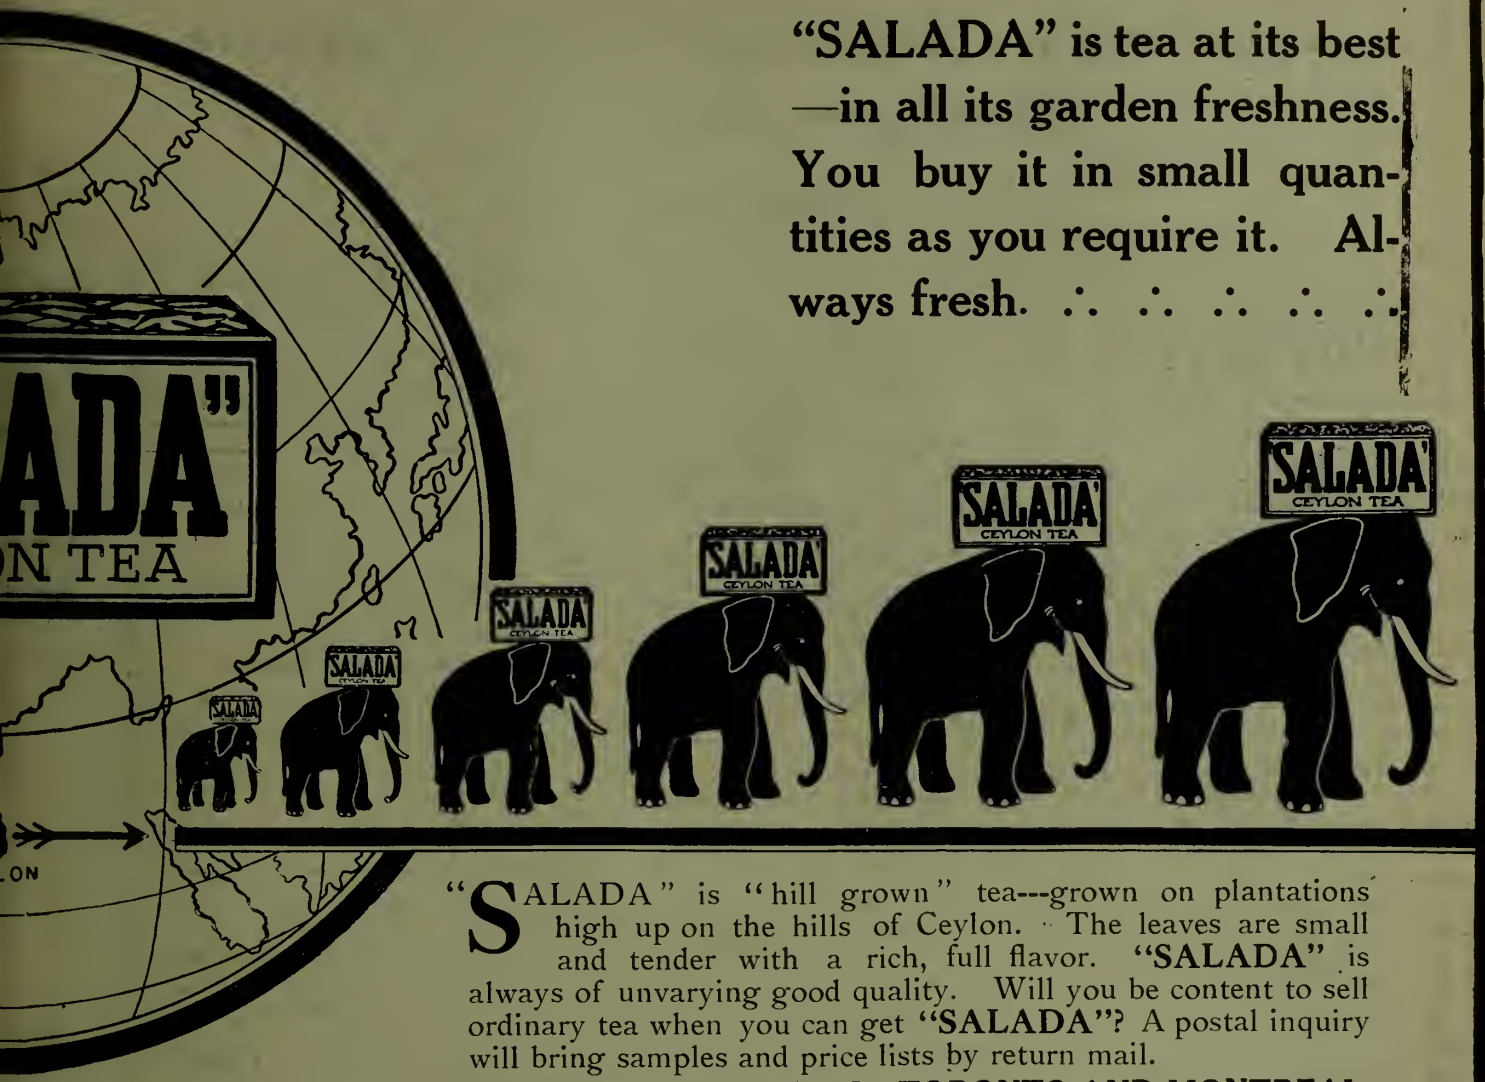
DETERIORATION OF TEA.

In last week's issue of The Canadian Grocer the "Salada" Tea Co. asked the wholesale and retail trade to return any tea they had in stock over six months. A leading retailer called upon Mr. Larkin to ask for further information. He replied :

"Yes, we are losing the freight, which we prepay, and also the return freight; then we have to empty the cases, open the packages, and sell the returns as bulk tea for whatever prices it will fetch, because of the fact that all tea deteriorates in quality at least one cent per pound in six months, and from two to four cents in the first year. Take a very fine tea, for instance, that costs, let us say, 37c. at auction ; this grade, especially in Ceylons, will during the first year lose at least five cents per pound in quality. A tea costing 10d., i.e., 20 cents, will lose about 3 cents in quality, so that by holding tea one not only loses interest, storage and insurance charged, but it can be fairly estimated that the tea loses in value ten per cent. or over during the first year. During the second year it loses still more, probably 15 per cent., during the third year an equal amount ; but after that it does not deteriorate. because, as a rule, it is about as bad as it can be.

"Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed lead packets tea keeps very much better than in bulk, still it does not retain its original flavor. The trouble lies in the fact that the flavor of tea is contained in an essential oil, which deteriorates and probably gets rancid no matter what precautions are taken with it. We consider it profitable, therefore, to have our tea go to the consumers as fresh as it is possible to let them have it."

Mr. Larkin was asked how the "Salada" Tea Company was fixed for stock when the enormous rise in the prices of tea took place three or four months ago. He said : "We were fixed as we usually are. We had enough stock in Toronto to last us about two or three weeks, and the usual quantities on the road between Colombo, London and here. We did not have a stock to carry us over for months without buying, neither would we want to have. The trouble is, that if we had, we would not be serving the consumer well. We would be serving them with tea that was old, and which, therefore, had lost its flavor. If we were positive now that the market was going to advance another five cents per pound, we could not speculate for our wants ; that is for the tea that we put in our packages. It would not pay us. The quality



"SALADA" is tea at its best —in all its garden freshness. You buy it in small quantities as you require it. Always fresh. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

"SALADA" is "hill grown" tea---grown on plantations high up on the hills of Ceylon. The leaves are small and tender with a rich, full flavor. "SALADA" is always of unvarying good quality. Will you be content to sell ordinary tea when you can get "SALADA"? A postal inquiry will bring samples and price lists by return mail.

THE "SALADA" TEA CO., TORONTO AND MONTREAL.

would not be "Salada" quality. There is only one time in the year that we have more than our normal quantity of tea in stock, and that is during the monsoon period, when all the tea coming forward is comparatively poor, but in this case we only provide ourselves with stock sufficient to last us seven or eight weeks. Fresh tea is all important, and, therefore, we cannot afford to speculate and hold.

"Many retail grocers, if they hear that the tea market is likely to advance buy heavily of bulk teas, forgetting all the time that if there is an advance in tea of even three or four cents per pound, in the course of a year their tea has deteriorated in value to fully that extent, besides the loss of interest, insurance, etc. I have known when I was on the road," continued Mr. Larkin, "tea to be in stock with some retailers for six or eight years, when it was positively unfit to send out at all. The moral is, speculate as much as you like in other goods, but buy your tea from hand to mouth, and the clever grocer always does this. He has no tea on hand to last him, at the outside, for more than three months. The grocer in England, as a matter of fact, seldom carries more than three weeks' supply."

AN UNPARALLELED RECORD.

An Extraordinary Increase in the Business of "Salada" and Why.

The "Salada" Tea Company, this city, point with justifiable pride to the steadily increasing trade in "Salada" tea. In 1892, the sales covered 63,290 packets, in 1900 there were 6,103,760 packets sold, in 1908 there were 19,146,505 packets, and in 1909 a total of 20,280,570, or over three times the volume of business done in 1900. Their claim that: "It has won its present position solely on merit," is sustained by the record. And while this is flattering, they believe it would be tremendously increased were consumers to pay greater regard to the flavor of tea and discriminate in favor of the higher grades. There is no doubt that consumption would double, treble and quadruple in a few years were tea distributed on a fair margin of profit, which should apply to service at the fashionable hotels and tea rooms, where 10 to 25 cents is charged for a pot of tea costing the fraction of a cent. Every grocer who deals in superior tea, such as invariably pleases the palate, builds up a very profitable part of his business. Good quality fosters the larger volume of business in tea. A little more enthusiasm, closer study of the leaf, a good but not exorbitant profit, will send a retailer's trade forward by leaps and bounds.

Canners' Merger Arousing Great Deal of Interest

Interview With Garnet P. Grant, the Promoter — His Statements as to Why the Amalgamation was Effected—Some Ambitious Projects of the New Company — Refers to References in Daily Press.

A great deal of interest has centred in the Canners' Merger since the publication in last week's issue of the announcement that it was a reality. Since that time some contradictory statements have been made in the daily press to the effect that the merger had not materialized, but according to Garnet P. Grant, the promoter, the information as given in The Canadian Grocer was correct. The details of the organization are now under way, states Mr. Grant, and he says they will be completed about March 1st.

"A great many different statements are being circulated," he said to The Grocer, "throughout the press but that outside of merely corroborating in a general way the announcement appearing in last week's Grocer, I have no details to the press at all."

Mr. Grant was pressed for a list of all factories joining the merger, but his statements were emphatic in this respect. "It is neither fair to the companies who are joining the merger nor to those who are not, that their names should be made public, until such time as the merger was in active operation, because it would merely serve to disturb the operation of their businesses in the interval. No list of any sort has been given out and any such lists appearing in the public press are unauthorized, and more than that, the lists are all mixed up.

"What effect will this merger have upon prices?" he was asked.

"My best answer to that question is to merely say, what has been the result of high prices in the past? It is not so very long ago that prices were very high, and the result was that the consumption of canned goods dropped off tremendously. The consumer has to have canned goods at a reasonable price and the minute they get above that price other foods take the place of canned goods. I know that the canned goods business is hardly back on its normal basis yet from the effects of high prices.

"What are the real objects of the merger?" was another query.

"The merger has many objects," he replied. "One is to arrange the canning business on such a basis that the output will be marketed on a fair manufacturers' profit basis. Then again to arrange a large number of factories under one control, in order to effect economies in almost every item of operation. One of the plans of the merger is to instal a laboratory under the charge of expert chemists to develop the various processes to as high a degree of efficiency as possible and to devise new methods for bettering the quality of the goods produced.

"Another plan is to have a special department to carefully look after the propagation of seeds, etc., that will improve the quality for packing purposes of the produce from the grower. Many other plans along similar lines are being worked out and the adoption of these will, I maintain, result in the very natural increase in the consumption of canned goods. It will mean a steady improvement, if possible, in the quality of the goods, it will insure to the canning companies a steady and increasing output and will at the same time satisfy both the trade, the consumer and the grower."

Capital Not Yet Known.

When asked regarding the capital, etc., of the new company, Mr. Grant stated that it was impossible to say anything in this respect until all the appraisals were completed, etc. The Canadian American Appraisal Company were now appraising the various factories, and until these appraisals were completed the general financial plan could not be outlined. Mr. Grant said that the necessary financing for the merger will be in the hands of C. Meredith & Co., Ltd., of Montreal.

In conclusion he said that all the necessary details of organization were now being worked out and everything would be gotten into shape in the near future.

RUMOR OF CEREAL MERGER.

Montreal, Jan. 27.—There was some talk during the early part of the week of a merger of cereal manufacturers, but definite information is not yet forthcoming. Among wholesalers, nothing has been heard which would lead them to believe such a step was contemplated by manufacturers selling to them. Representatives of cereal makers did not give out anything in regard to the story.

The annual banquet of the London Retail Grocers' Association will be held on Tuesday evening, February 1st.

The Toronto R.G.A. held their annual "At-Home" on Wednesday evening, January 26th.

Telegraph reports from Florida at the time of the "big freeze" a week ago were rather more serious than told by later reports, according to New York handlers of citrus goods from the southern peninsula. There is no doubt as to the fruit being damaged, say the later reports, but the proportion which is still available is greater than was indicated by first reports.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Corrected by Wire.

Advances—Rolled oats, beans, coffee.

Stronger—Sugar, syrup, honey.

Declines—Foreign dried fruits, evaporated apples.

Winnipeg, Jan. 27, 1910.

Markets suddenly became turbulent this week, owing to the fact that wholesalers are making re-adjustments in keeping with stocks and trade conditions generally. During December the demand for all lines was so great that prices were naturally forced up. Supplies at that time also were short on many lines, which have since come on the market in good quantities. The demand for goods in comparison to last month is light, and several reductions have taken place. Foreign dried fruits are the most interesting in this connection and nearly all prices have been quoted lower. Notwithstanding this, however, the trade is excellent for this season in all lines. Wholesalers were never so busy during January before and they are finding it difficult to take stock systematically and at the same time to look after the orders that are coming in. The traveling staffs are being enlarged, as territory had to be limited. One traveler that formerly worked in Brandon and Portage la Prairie, has been kept several days overtime in the former city and an assistant had to be despatched to Portage.

Wholesale confectioners are likewise busy, and in this department also there are strong indications of an exceptionally heavy trade all season.

Collections keep up fair, and wholesalers are gratified with the way back payments are being made.

Local retailers have noted recently the growing demand for the better and higher-priced goods from the trade. This is characteristic of western custom. People are willing to pay for a good article and merchants are forced to talk quality.

SUGAR—The market is fairly strong this week in all sugars, and quotations are higher than they have been for some time. There are no indications of lower prices in sight in the immediate future.

RICE—The advance of last week to $3.75 per 100 lbs. is maintained, but not so strongly as at the time of the advance. It is expected that cleaners will endeavor to hold the market firmer.

COFFEE—Green Rio is going up. To-day the market is strong at 10½ to 11 cents, an advance of ½-cent over that of one week ago.

EVAPORATED APPLES—According to quality, quotations stand to-day from 8 to 9 cents, being a decline. It is believed that the market cannot go lower at this centre.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, January 27, 1910.

The wholesale grocery trade is in a satisfactory condition, and there are good prospects for the spring trade. Some slight changes are noted in the price list. Sugars have been advanced 10 cents per hundred pounds all round, and rolled oats are up 25 cents, being now quoted at $5.25 to $5.40. Navel oranges are firmer and are now quoted at $3.50. This is an advance of 50 cents over the last quotation. Collections are better than they were at the same time last year.

Potatoes are in good demand, and the quality of the stock now being marketed is better than that offered for sale earlier in the season. Several cargoes arrived here this week from Prince Edward Island and they found ready purchasers.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 27, 1910.

The upward tendency of prices is still noted. Eastern butter in tubs, dairy, is now quoted at 25 cents, while choice eastern comes to the retailer at 30 cents.

There is talk of an increase in the price of sugar, following the advance in the east, but is has not yet been announced. Sugar now sells at $5.60, and the proposed increase is to $5.75. In the meantime, sugar imported from Scotland enables the retailer to meet complaints of customers, for this still jobs at $5.25.

Eastern eggs, which jumped to 35c, are back to 33c. Local dealers are fairly heavily stocked, and they cannot stand the higher figure if clearances are to be made before warm weather sets in, for a spring spell may come at any time now, and bring in larger quantities of locals.

SELL TO GENERAL PUBLIC.

Nova Scotia Wholesalers Accused of Doing This—Mail Order Competition to be Watched.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 25.—The Retail Merchants' Association of Nova Scotia have the same grievance against the wholesalers as many individual grocers in various parts of Canada, viz., selling to the consuming public.

The association held its first annual meeting last week in Halifax. It has now a membership of over one hundred, which is likely to be doubled during the coming year.

The grievance against certain wholesalers and jobbers who sell to the general public as they do to the retailers was discussed at length. One of the main objects in forming the society was to bring about better relations between the wholesaler and retailer, and if the offending wholesalers persist in continuing their present course, the members of the association talk of purchasing their goods from wholesalers who sell to the trade only. It is not the intention of the society to antagonize the wholesalers, but to get together for the benefit of all.

Another important matter dealt with was the rapidly increasing trade of Upper Canadian mail order houses. Definite action will be taken in this matter in the near future.

A proposal was received from the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, that the Nova Scotia association affiliate with them and referred particularly to the obtaining of legislation against the Co-operative Bill.

The officers elected were:

President—C. H. Clement, Port Medway.

Vice-president—A. S. Burgess, Canning.

Secretary-Treasurer—Isaac McDonald, Halifax.

Executive—R. M. Lamont, Kings Co.; F. E. Bentley, Annapolis Co.; L. Shatford, Halifax Co.; F. A. Carter, C. Layton, Colchester Co.; A. W. Shatford, Halifax Co.; G. W. Silver, Lunenburg Co.; A. A. Morris, Richmond Co.; F. A. Carter, Guysboro Co.; H. J. Smith, Cumberland Co.; A. D. McIsaac, Inverness Co.; A. B. Deane, Pictou Co.

CHANGES FROM CREDIT TO CASH.

Method of Doing This Was by Circular —Pleased With the Outcome.

Toronto, Jan. 26.—J. S. Adamson, 1914 Dundas Street, has decided to run his business on a strictly cash basis and as the outcome of this decision, the following was the circular in part sent to all his patrons.

"We trust you have received entire satisfaction at our hands in all your dealings with us, our one aim having been to please you, both as to the quality of our goods and the price you have paid for same.

"During the year we have been greatly handicapped in having to pay strictly cash for nearly all of our goods, and we have decided, commencing on January 1st to do a strictly cash business. This new policy ought not to work as a hardship to our customers, but will prove a benefit to them, as we will be able to sell even more reasonable than ever before.

"Hoping we will receive your patronage in the future, we remain, etc."

The scheme has now been on trial for nearly a month and so far Mr. Adamson is perfectly satisfied with it. He has, of course, lost some customers, and among these some of his good customers, but the quicker returns and the elimination of worry over uncollected accounts, fully recompenses him for his loss in this way, he states.

The Meat Trust is oppressive, help to break it up by selling "Meat of Wheat," a more wholesome and nourishing food. —Adv.

TRADE NOTES.

W. J. Lappin, grocer, of High Park Avenue, Toronto, has assigned to N. L. Martin.

William Galbraith, of William Galbraith & Co., Montreal, was in Sherbrooke last week.

Walter J. Johnson has been appointed secretary to John A. Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., Montreal, taking the place of H. R. Gray, who has gone to Toronto.

The first annual banquet of the Hamilton District Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association was held last week in Hamilton, Ont. Among the speakers were E. D. Smith and W. Waggstaffe.

Longeway & Christian have purchased the store formerly occupied by H. G. Smith, corner Fairmount and St. Urbain Streets, Montreal. They expect to equip it as a high grade retail grocery store.

Bullis & Co, Chatham, Ont., have purchased the grocery business of Wesley E. Parrott. P. B. McQueen, formerly manager for the Chatham branch of Bradley & Son., will manage the business.

Judgment for $1,138.93 was given by Justice Britton in favor of F. J. Castle Co., Ltd., Ottawa, wholesale grocers, against R. Baird, retail grocer. Baird disputed the claim, alleging that he had sold out to W. A. Neelin, but his Lordship held that both Baird and Neelin were liable.

Harper R. Gray, who has until recently been secretary to John A. Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., Montreal, has been promoted to the post of local manager of Gunns' Ltd., Toronto. He will be in charge of the all city distribution. Mr. Gray has been in Montreal for the past four years.

H. Donkin & Co., of Vancouver, have opened a branch at Calgary, Alta. This branch office is in charge of Mr. Tait. The firm is considering having another office in Edmonton, but have not yet finally decided about this. Donkin & Co. have now offices in Vancouver, Victoria and Calgary.

After February 1, the wholesale produce firm of Geo. W. Prout, & Co., of Winnipeg, will be known as Prout, Simpson & Co., with branches at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. The change results from the entry of Kenneth R. Simpson into the company, who for the past few years has been with Gunns Limited, Toronto.

John W. Goddard, agent in St. John for McCormick's biscuits and confectionery, was burned out on Sunday last. About $2,000 worth of stock was destroyed, against which there is $1.000 insurance. The St. John Mercantile Co., wholesale grocers, suffered about $1,000 damage to stock from water, but their loss is covered by insurance.

Timmins & Mitchell have opened a grocery store on Cordova Street, Vancouver, B.C. Mr. Timmins is known to many in British Columbia as an insurance man. Harry Mitchell has been connected with the grocery trade in that province for twenty-five years. He was formerly a traveling salesman for the Brakman-Ker Milling Co., and has also held positions with Kelly Bros., Oppenheimer Bros., and with W. Templeman.

A joint meeting of Brantford and Hamilton retail merchants was held last Thursday night in Hamilton, for the purpose of discussing the co-operative bill that will be dealt with by the House at Ottawa. A resolution was passed that the bill granted special privileges to co-operative societies and should not be passed. Owing to lack of space a full report could not be made this week.

An order has been granted by Judge McLeod, St. John, N.B., of the Supreme court, winding up the Phillips & White Company, who have carried on a manufacturing confectionery business on Dock Street there. The application to place the company in liquidation was made by Ganong Bros., St. Stephen. W. S. Clowson has been appointed temporary liquidator. Liabilities are placed at $18,000.

CALENDARS FOR 1910.

A pretty ocean scene is the illustration on the 1910 calendar of the T. Upton Co., Hamilton, Ont. It is attractively printed in colors and mounted on white cardboard making a calendar that will be a handsome wall picture in any home.

A full-sized package of Holland Rusk (The Dainty Dutch Delicacy) free to every grocer—

Read what a Newfoundland firm has to say about HOLLAND RUSK, the Dainty Dutch Delicacy:—

"We beg to inform you that the first shipment of HOLLAND RUSK, which we have introduced on this market, has met with an exceptionally brilliant sale for a new article of its kind.

"Repeat orders are now rapidly coming in, and we venture to predict that in a very short time HOLLAND RUSK, aided by a little judicious advertising, will be the only Rusk sold on this market. Being a superior article at a very reasonable price, it appeals to every purchaser of table necessities."

A general campaign of advertising is now being arranged. Some experts have told us our copy is about the strongest and most attractive they have ever seen. Every grocer should be prepared for the demand which it will create.

First of all, we want every grocer—and every grocer's wife—to taste Holland Rusk. We know you will find it unique and delicious—different from anything you ever tasted before.

Write a post-card—now when you think of it—and a full-sized package, together with prices, will be forwarded immediately.

700 stores in Toronto alone are handling—and pushing—Holland Rusk. Toronto people are delighted with "The Dainty Dutch Delicacy."

Who is Making the Money out of the Hog Industry?

Farmers Getting Between $8 and $9 Live Weight and More Than $12 Dressed—Toronto Labor Men Talk of Boycotting Meat to Force Down Prices—Lay Blame to the Packers—The Butter and Egg Situation.

There is little Canadian bacon on the English market and as there is always some demand for our goods, it is expected that prices will go up to 68 or 70 shillings in the near future. But still at these prices there is nothing tempting to our packers when hogs are $8.50 live weight at country points.

The anti-meat agitators are not considered seriously by the packers. When they think they can lower the prices of cured meats without lowering the prices of hogs they are entirely mistaken.

The margin now, for the packers, is so small that nothing can be cut out at that end, and the retail trade is not getting rich in profits. The plain reason for the high price of hogs is the fact that the production of hogs is not sufficient to meet the demand, and consequently the farmers can command the unusually high prices. This is not only the case in Canada, but particularly so in the United States, where comparisons show a remarkable decline from last year.

The butter market in England has no inducements to offer to us. Australia seems to be the ruling power in the butter situation there.

Cheese, on the other hand, is firm and in good demand at slight advances. There is, however, as far as can be ascertained, nothing that bears heavily on the holders.

Butter—Owing to the recent mild and unseasonable weather, there has been little activity in the butter market. Stocks are in small compass and there is a feeling that between now and April 1st there may be a pinch. Last year at this time stocks were reported larger, and a big break took place. This year, with reverse conditions, it is thought the market will continue upward. Receipts for the week are 1,780 packages, as against 1,215 same week 1909. For the season they are 394,941 packages, against 414,915 packages same season last year.

Cheese—Export cheese is active just at present, and dealers all agree that the end of this season will be a good one. An examination of recent sailing lists shows that many large exporters have gone to England to look the field over. Receipts for the week are 837 boxes, as against 165 same week 1909. For the season they are 1,968,437 boxes, as against 195,669 boxes same season last year.

Eggs—There is little or no surplus stock reported in Montreal, and dealers claim that next week will see the supplies of stored and pickled eggs exhausted, and in view of further winter weather prices should go higher. New laids are coming forward more freely, but still not nearly sufficient for the demand. Receipts for the week are 506 cases, as against 35 cases same week last year. For the season they are 194,458 cases, as against 196,648 cases same season last year.

Provisions—Receipts of hogs are fair this week and the prices are well maintained. In referring to the report in a local paper that the labor men were pledging themselves to abstain from eating meat in order to force lower prices, a packer stated that it would be a good thing for the industry. It would give a a chance to get some stock in hand, and the retailers might be able to get some of the money for the meat that is already eaten and not paid for. To say, however, that the farmer is not getting a decent price for his animals, is ridiculous. Hogs at country points f.o.b. live weight are $8.40 to $8.50 per 100 lbs., and dressed, delivered in the city for $12.25 to $12.50. The demand for cured meats is brisk and at full prices.

Eggs—While new laid eggs are easier to buy, they are, however, not in sufficient quantities to affect the prices of stored eggs, which are firm at last week's prices. The prices of eggs will depend entirely on what the weather will be during the next few weeks. A severe cold February would naturally stiffen the prices, but if the weather continues mild the receipts will likely increase.

SEIZURES BY HEALTH OFFICER.

Dr. A. J. Douglas, health commissioner, of Winnipeg, reported recently the following seizures under the pure food by-laws, covering a period of three weeks: Beef, 1,880 pounds; figs, 900 pounds; fruit, 840 pounds; vegetables, 450 pounds; pork, 170 pounds; veal, 158 pounds; candy, 85 pounds; poultry, 18 pounds; sausage, 4 pounds. Total, 4,505. There were also five prosecutions for keeping unsanitary premises and convictions obtained in each case.

It was also reported that some dealers were selling "pound pots" of butter that do not weigh sixteen ounces, and the health committee are taking steps to remedy the situation.

A TRAVELER AGAIN.

J. T. Poulin is again covering the Eastern Townships for Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal. Mr. Poulin, for eight years travelled over that district for the Montreal wholesalers. He was for some time engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Sherbrooke, but gave it up and is now on the ground over which he has travelled in all, for 18 years.

Grocers Have to Sell the Bacon Without a Profit

Situation in England Not at all Encouraging — Comparisons of Prices During Past Two Years—Decrease in the Bacon Going Into England From the Great Hog-producing Countries.

The position of bacon is a matter of gravest concern to all distributors, both wholesale and retail, and we are guilty of no exaggeration in stating that a very large proportion of retailers are selling the article without profit, and many at an actual loss, says the London, England, Grocer's Gazette. How seriously prices have advanced can only be appreciated by a comparison of the figures, and appended are the prices ruling in comparison with those of the previous year:

	1909.		1908.
Irish lean	67.0	72.0	54.0	58.0
Irish, stout and heavy	64.0	71.0	52.0	58.0
Continental, sizable	64.0	70.0	52.0	58.0
Continental, 6-sided	65.0	69.0	51.0	57.0
Canadian Sides .	64.0	68.0	47.0	58.0
U. S., Cumberland cut	63.0	65.0	42.0	48.0

The reason for this advance in prices is, as is well known, a decreased production all over the world, combined with an increased consumption, particularly in Canada and the United States, from which centres the Old Country has been accustomed to draw large supplies, but from which it now receives comparatively insignificant quantities. The Old Country has also produced less pigs, as will be seen by the following statistics, extracted from an article in the Journal of the Board of Agriculture, of the pig population in Great Britain for the past three years, viz.:—

	1909.	1908.	1907.
England	2,046,284	2,439,087	2,257,136
Wales	204,784	240,611	232,996
Scotland	129,819	143,784	146,634
Gt. Brit.	2,380,887	2,823,482	2,636,766

100,000 Less Hogs.

According to the agricultural statisties returns for Ireland, the total number of pigs in Ireland in 1907 was 1,317,-068, and in 1908, 1,217,840, a falling off of over 100,000. The total exports for the period from January 1 to November 20 of last year was 256,268, while the total for the corresponding period in 1908 was 318,905, a falling off in 1909 of 62,637. In 1907 the swine exported from Ireland numbered 481,907; in 1908 the number was 387,476, a falling off of 94,431.

The figures of the British imports of bacon for the last eleven months, compared with the same period of the two previous years, will enable our readers to thoroughly grasp the situation, and these are as follows:

	1909. Cwt.	1908. Cwt.	1907. Cwt.
Denmark	1,657,129	1,875,423	1,663,083
U. S. ..	2,005,598	2,618,555	2,446,602
Canada	405,720	633,549	801,061
Other C.	160,201	83,270	86,416
	4,228,648	5,210,797	4,997,162

The great reduction in the quantity of bacon sent from Canada in 1909 compared with that in 1907 demands attention. There were practically 400 cwt. less, showing that Canada is gradually losing her market for bacon in the Old Country.

What is the cause of this? It is the great reduction in the supply of hogs in Canada, the increased consumption in this country, and the high prices of the raw material, which scarcely allow the packers a profit at the present prices on the English market.

Canada's bacon is among the best produced in the world, and it is a pity that our connection with the best market in the world should be fading away, all because the production in a natural agricultural and hog-raising country is not competent.

Flour Situation Firm with Probable Advance

Wheat Goes up 1½ Cents Per Bushel — Market More Settled Than Usual—Cereals Creating Good Demand in Small Quantities.

In our report last week we intimated that the flour market showed signs of an upward movement, and this week we can report a substantial raise of 1½ cents per bushel on wheat, with a firm market. This is more than a bid in options, but the actual wheat changed hands.

The market has now a more settled appearance, and dealers are more confident that prices will hold their own, if not gradually go higher. There is nothing now in sight that will cause any excitement in the flour market until about June, when farmers will be done sowing and the balance left on their hands and the new crop will be the principal features to be considered.

MONTREAL.

USE MORE PRINTER'S INK.

It is observed in the Galt, Ont., Reporter, that if the local grocers would let the people know about the prices of their goods through printer's ink, as the traveling grocers and foreign merchants do by flooding the country with price lists, catalogues, etc., there would not be so many duped farmers or complaining merchants. The advertisers, who put their goods before the people and keep them there are the ones who sell their goods. They say when too late. "I should have duplicated that bill of goods," but they should have let the farmer who sent away and bought advertised goods of a foreign merchant, know it before he bought. That's the business of it. The Galt Reporter is correct. If the merchants of any place want to keep trade at home in the face of the mail-order catalogue they have to keep busy and advertising is one of the most important aids at their command. The house that advertises carefully and consistently is the house that gets the business.

UPROOTING CURRANT VINES.

Writing from Patras, Greece, on the currant situation, W. Meyer & Co. refers to a new feature now tending to strengthen the feelings of the market outside of the statistical position, which shows a shortage of some 7,000 tons in comparison to last season. The Chartered Company, which holds the currants of the growers against cash advances, decided to increase their capital by 12,000,000 francs. This has been subscribed in full and principally for the purpose of doing away with the over-production by rooting out the vines.

Other matters are in progress, which, Mr. Meyer states, would safeguard the existence of the Chartered Company for a long time and would no doubt have an immediate stimulating effect on the market.

It will be remembered that some time ago The Canadian Grocer referred to the matter of uprooting the currant vines with a view to curtailing production and raising prices, which were considered too low, and evidently this will occur.

W. J. Dack, Toronto, representing the Maple Tree Producers' Association, visited the Montreal office of the concern on Monday.

PLEASE, Brother Grocer, let me relate to you what happened to yours truly once upon a time both sad and dreary. I put a hundred of the "hard earned" into the bank and got me a cheque book, so that I might draw it out as I wanted and wax important the while. ¶ How happy was I then with a fountain pen to liquidate at a scratch all my liabilities. ¶ Alas, one day, to me a cheque came back with this legend on it—No funds. ¶ And now, Brother Grocer, every day of your business life YOU are drawing something out of the Bank of Public Confidence. Just so certain as you keep drawing out of your bank without making fresh deposits, something is bound to happen, you know. ¶ Then, where would YOU be, Brother Grocer?

FIVE ROSES FLOUR

We want YOU to handle FIVE ROSES flour—to sell satisfaction. Every sale means your currency, Brother Grocer, fresh deposits in the bank of your customers' confidence. ¶ We don't want you to overdraw that account—to hear the fatal words, No Funds. Then think that when you join the clan who handle FIVE ROSES, you benefit by the efforts of all those countless others who are praising the good stuff, those unpaid salesmen —the consumers. ¶ All are increasing daily the FIVE ROSES deposits in the Bank of Confidence and Goodwill. ¶ You cannot overdraw that account, Brother Grocer. Go the limit in selling enthusiasm, yet you'll never hear the phrase, No Funds. ¶ So sell FIVE ROSES soon.

The Saving of Your Wages Produces No Sacrifice

President of a Large Company Advises His Employes to Put By Twenty Per cent. of Their Salaries — Advance Usually Comes to the Thrifty Man—The Wastes That Count.

By Edward D. Easton in N. Y. Commer cial.

"Why don't you take a slip of paper now and write down something like this: 'Beginning to-day I'm going to put by twenty per cent. of my salary—that settles it!'"

In these words did the president of the Columbia Phonograph Company open a broadside upon his employes, recently, in the excellent and neatly gotten up little periodical called "The Columbia Salesman," issued by this company.

Mr. Easton, be it known, has taken this means of advertising his company to his own employes; and of preparing his employes to advertise their thrift and stability to the company,—a novel form of advertising that has been productive of remarkable results in this organization. Mr. Easton continues:

Try Writing it Down.

"I have noticed that it often makes a good decision ten times as good to get it down on paper. You try it.

"If you had done that three or four years ago, twenty per cent. wouldn't look like a hardship now—and you could have done it, you know you could.

"When you have stuck to it through the first straight year, that saving plan becomes an easy habit. You don't feel as if you had been denying yourself after all, when your savings have begun to accumulate.

"And you find you don't want some of those things that you would think you wanted if it were not for that bank book that stiffens your inside pocket. It makes you think twice to spend once, and the chances are you find yourself astonished to realize how many things you must have on first thought and wouldn't give a snap for on the second thought. But do your saving on a plan. Make it regular. Form the habit.

The Little Wastes That Count.

"It's the little wastes that count. Things like this have been said so often that they usually hit the extravagant man on a sore spot. Yet it is true the first time it was said, it's true now, and it will still be true later on when you are figuring how much you own, instead of how much you earn. You may say this is your private affair, not the company's affair; yes, but it is the company's concern, too.

"Every good manager of a corporation is sure to first demonstrate his fitness by a good management of his own affairs, and he cannot safely be trusted with the larger until he can master the smaller proposition. The same principles and the same methods are used in the successful management of a ten million dollar corporation as are employed in the right handling of a ten dollar salary.

"Our company is advancing men all the time, and is keenly anxious to advance others. All other things being equal, the man who is able to conserve his own affairs must always be the one chosen to handle the company's affairs. The thrifty man, whose savings are regular, and whose employers know him to be steady in habits and never in debt, is sure to get ahead of the man of brilliance who cannot live within his income.

Extravagance Decried.

"This is true everywhere—and, perhaps, especially true in this company. There is hardly any one thing more distasteful to the heads of this enterprise than extravagance and thriftlessness. Our head men have reached the top on a rigid plan of keeping expenses inside of income—even from the first week's salary of a very few dollars.

"The future success of the company depends on the men now growing up in the service. Those who are wasteful, extravagant, living up to their utmost cent, will surely fail to do valuable work and the company cannot long continue to employ them.

"Those who are not only efficient but careful and economical will be advanced and share with the company in that prosperity which is thus assured; and this applies to everyone—from the stock boy just starting, all the way up to the most responsible manager."

STILL ANOTHER BRANCH.

Fort William, Ont., Jan. 24.—Nicholson & Bain, wholesale commission merchants and brokers, are again branching out; this time it is Fort William. E. Nicholson has been here and states that definite arrangements have been made to locate and that work would be begun in the near future on the erection of a warehouse. He was much impressed with Fort William as an important business centre. This makes the fifth branch opened by this firm.

In connection with the Co-operative Bill being presented to the House of Commons, states the Ottawa correspondent, the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association are not as yet taking any active part in opposition thereto, but have signified their willingness to lend all possible aid should the other associations desire their assistance.

Investigation Into Changes in Grocery Prices

An Invoice of Goods Which Shows Little Change From 1890—Sugar Much Lower and Farm Products Generally Higher — Is the Retail Grocer to Blame for Any Increase in Cost of Foodstuffs?

At the conclusion of the article in last week's issue in which prices to the retail trade of 1865 were compared with those of the present day, it was stated that The Canadian Grocer intended going further into the question by taking a more recent date. This week prices existing in 1890, just 20 years ago, have been considered.

Since the article appeared last week, several merchants have referred to it, and some are desirous of sending in invoices of recent times and comparing them with present prices. These The Canadian Grocer will be pleased to receive, especially if there has also been given opposite, the prices which the grocers pay for the same articles now. In this way a comparison can easily be made which will prove profitable as well as interesting.

The Grocer during the week secured an old invoice, dated 1890, and from it the following prices were taken:

	1890	1910
Sago, per lb.	$ .04½	$ .04½
Rolled oats, per bag	2.50	2.25
Cheese, per lb.	.10	.12½
Val. raisins, per lb.	.08	.05½
Beans, per lb.	.02½	.03
Rice, per lb.	.03⅝	.03⅛
Rolled wheat, per cwt.	2.40	3.15
Honey, per lb.	.09	.11
Butter, per lb.	.15	.26
Gran. sugar, cwt.	7.12½	4.85
Ham, per lb.	.14	.15
Bacon, per lb.	.13½	.18
Nutmeg, per lb.	.78	.25
Malt vinegar, per gal.	.35	.35
Cider vinegar, per gal.	.25	.23
XXX vinegar, per gal.	.22	.23
XX vinegar, per gal.	.17	.19
Seed tapioca, per lb.	.05⅝	.04¾
Blue, per gross	1.75	1.75
Shelled almonds, per lb.	.30	.33
Whole white pepper, lb.	.24	.22
Almonds, per lb.	.13½	.12
Walnuts, per lb.	.16	.14½
Filberts, per lb.	.08	.09½
Pearl tapioca, per lb.	.05 1-3	.04¼
Whole black pepper, lb.	.19	.18
Cloves, per lb.	.20½	.25
Macaroni, per lb.	.11	.09
Cream of tartar, per lb.	.30	.28
Potatoes, per bag	.75	.65
Canned corn, per doz.	.95	.87½
Canned peas, per doz.	1.06	1.05
Canned tomatoes, doz.	1.00	.87½
Ceylon tea, per lb.	.45	.30
Assam tea, per lb.	.21	.20
Totals	$22.60	$20.19

Greatest Decline in Sugar.

It will be seen from the above figures that an invoice of goods mentioned would cost a little less to-day than in 1890. The difference would be only $2.41, and outside of the sugar would be practically the same. Sugar has certainly become much cheaper than it was some years ago. Still more recent invoices, however will show the difference to be much less.

Rolled wheat, butter, ham and bacon show that prices have advanced since twenty years ago; these are all farm products and everyone knows that the retail trade has nothing to do with advances in them. They are the result of increased demand from both at home and abroad, overbalancing a heavier production, with the probable exception of ham and bacon.

With regard to imported articles, few changes of any importance have occurred. The prices of these are regulated from year to year according to the supply and demand.

As far as the present investigations have proceeded, there is nothing to indicate that the retail grocer is responsible for any increase in the cost of living.

An important factor to a merchant's success is a clean, bright, attractive window, which points to the stranger or customer that the interior is also clean and inviting.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits — Marmalade oranges (Messina bitters) are now on the market, and appear to be of good grade. Prices are somewhat easier in some lines, and general market conditions show weakness. Trade is dull at present, though it is hoped by Feb. 1st, that there will be a decided improvement.

Fish.—Market in general is active and prices in every line have a tendency to stiffen. The scarcity of frozen haddock and green cod has made the trade anxious, and inquiries are pouring out from dealers trying to locate stock. Haddies, on account of a scarcity of fresh fish, are in large demand. Western markets are depleted and trying to replenish again. Oyster trade is quiet, but steady, particularly in bulk. Shell oysters are quiet. Lent being so near at hand quite a busy time is expected.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits—The market is gradually moving out of its after-holiday dullness and is assuming its regular active conditions. Apples are plentiful, and are easier to buy than to sell. They are sold from $1.50 to $4, but very good apples can be bought at $2.50 to $3. Farmers bringing in loads have some difficulty in selling them. Oranges are slow, with a good many damaged by frost, and some have also suffered from too much rain before they were picked, which causes them to be puffy and lacking in flavor. Marmalade oranges have arrived and are in cases of about 500 at $5 per case.

Vegetables.—The market is well supplied with all kinds of vegetables. California celery seems to take the lead in importance. New potatoes at $8.50 a barrel, when common potatoes are only 60c a bag, do not appeal to the ordinary buyer, but that is just the reason why some will buy them. Cabbage is also plentiful and is bringing $1.35 a barrel, which is 10c higher than last week. Fresh lettuce, onions, radishes, cucumbers, carrots, beets, etc., are all on the market.

Fish.—Toronto is, by no means, a fish-eating city, and yet it takes about a carload to supply the daily requirements. So far as prices are concerned, they seldom vary. Whether this is owing to the nature of the business or otherwise is not quite clear.

TRADE NOTES.

Jno. McCarthy, a grocer of St. John, Newfoundland, died recently.

G. Norman Willit, Brantford, Ont., has purchased the general store business of T. M. McEwan, of St. George.

The stock of A. L. Garland, general merchant, St. Thomas, Ont., is advertised for sale, an assignment having been made last November.

Roy Croft has opened a general store in Lindsay, Ont. He intends selling for cash only, believing that the goods are more valuable to him in his store than in credit on his books.

A. Allard, of Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, is the liberal nominee for the Ottawa by-election, caused by the resignation of the seat by the Premier who will sit for his old Quebec constituency.

White & Co., wholesale fruit, produce and fish dealers, Toronto, are back in their old quarters, at the corner of Front and Church Streets. Their building has been entirely renovated and greatly improved, and presents a spic and span appearance. Only thirty-six days intervened since their fire.

DEBT COLLECTOR IN UNIFORM.

Ottawa R. G. A. Now Take up Question of Establishing Collection System.

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—The matter of preventing the contracting of, and of collecting bad debts was the subject of an interesting discussion at the last regular meeting of the local Retail Grocers' Association. Many of the grocers have on their books accounts, the value of which are questionable, and in several instances these accounts are common to two or more grocers. This is, of course, caused by these poor-pay people running a credit with several grocers as long as the game can be worked and when the creditor ceases to accord credit, why they hie themselves to pastures new.

To overcome these impositions, for such they really are, a novel and apparently effective method was proposed. The scheme provides for the collector to be dressed in a very conspicuous uniform—something at once distinctive and demonstrative, and to have him call on these people who endeavor to exist on someone else's expense. The plan, which was suggested by a local collection agency, is said to have worked satisfactorily in other cities. Definite action has not as yet been taken, but it is the intention to arrange with the agency on a flat rate for the collection of all such accounts.

There are some 240 grocers in Ottawa, and thus it is an easy matter for a person so inclined to run a bill in one store and when pressed for payment transfer their patronage to some other unsuspecting merchant.

The credit system at best is a bad one in the estimation of many Ottawa grocers, and the day that business on a cash basis proves to be the motto of all merchants the better will be the general affairs of the country.

WANT RESIDENT COMMISSIONER.

The British Columbia Salmon Canners' Association has petitioned the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Ottawa to appoint a resident Fisheries Commissioner in Vancouver. The reason gievn for the request is the great distance separating this coast and the Federal Capital, on account of which it is impossible to secure quick response on matters needing immediate attention. The Minister is also reminded of the fact and asked to right the injustice of a weekly close season on the Fraser river of 42 hours, while south of the line the weekly prohibited period is only 36 hours. Another request is that the sockeye fishing season north of the 50th parallel open on June 15th, instead of on July 1st, as the fish appear earlier in the north than on the Fraser river.

CODFISH PRICES HIGHER.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 26.—The stocks of bank codfish in the hands of fishermen are about cleaned up, the last sales being at $5.25 ex vessel. Holders of codfish are now expecting to realize good prices for the stocks that they have on hand. The prices now quoted are about one dollar higher than they were four weeks ago. The stocks on the foreign markets are reported to be small, and the shipments at the present are light from this port. Newfoundland is exporting large quantities of fish to the Brazils. The market for pickled fish is looking up, particularly mackerel, for which the demandl is good. Dealers report some improvement in the market for butter and eggs.

WINNIPEG GROCERS ON THE WATCH.

Emma and Panaro, restaurant proprietors, of Winnipeg, were convicted of selling food to be eaten off the premises after 6 p.m., and had to pay the costs of the court. Mr. Emma stated that he was not aware that the sale of cooked foods in a restaurant was against the law. The complaint originated with the butchers and grocers, who stated that they were not allowed to sell foods after six o'clock and the restaurants did, and on this account they claimed that they lost a great deal of trade. The court deemed the argument a just one, and warned the firm not to infringe again.

Bananas bound for the Vancouver market have quite a time en route, says the Vancouver correspondent. They are grown in the revolution belt, and the people who grow them are liable to be shot up and their haciendas burned. Even after the shotgun quarantine is passed, their troubles are not ended, S. K. LaRose, of New Orleans, who landed a large shipment in Vancouver last week, reports that the Northern Pacific ran them out of Billings, Montana, into a four-days' blizzard, and after the oil for the heaters ran out, he had quite a time taking care of his charges.

CALIFORNIA

THE HOME OF THE

SEEDLESS ORANGE

When the seedless orange was discovered it was mediocre, frail and undeveloped. In California, it found the climate, the soil and the husbandman that developed its latent qualities, until to-day it ranks as the choicest fruit of the citric-growing area of the world, Handsome in appearance, seedless and tasty, it has brought to the Golden West the reputation such a magnificent fruit must bring to its natural home.

The public do not appreciate the food and medicinal value of California oranges, because these qualities have not been called to their attention. The 5,000 orange farmers of California, who distribute their products under the name of the California Fruit Growers Exchange, developed the navel orange to its present high standard. Now they have decided to acquaint the public with the virtues of California oranges and lemons, to tell the millions that California oranges and lemons have a great food value, and medicinal value that they should learn about.

When these California orange farmers determined to acquaint the public with the value of their products, they decided to call the best grades of these fruits the "Sunkist," that the public might know when calling for the best fruit that they could get it by asking for "Sunkist" brand. The retailer and jobber can also identify the best product of the best fruit farms of California by the "Sunkist" wrappers on every piece of fruit.

"Sunkist" brand costs you no more than ordinary fruit. The advertising we are doing to educate the public to a greater use of oranges and lemons will bring customers to your store. Fruit buyers are also purchasers of other goods. You get your good margin on "SUNKIST" fruits and also the margin on other goods purchased. It is to your advantage to keep "Sunkist" brands in stock —to display them where the public can see that you are a "SUNKIST" dealer. You can derive great benefit from our advertising by letting the public know you sell "SUNKIST" oranges and lemons.

A Wholesale Grocer's Views on Prices and Profits

Thinks Every Member of the Trade Should be Free to Buy and Sell Independently—Moral Wrong for Any Business Man to Sell at Less Than it Costs to do Business—What Education on Co-operation Has Done.

By F. W. Hannahs, Pres. N.Y. Wholesale Grocers' Association.

We are engaged in the most important line of merchandising, the distribution of food supplies. There can be no more vital members of the commercial family than those who furnish the nation's food. The standing of our great branch of commerce must be equalled by the thought and energy we bring to its management. We must not proceed on narrow lines nor employ wornout shortsighted methods of merchandising.

The scope and importance of the country's food trade requires the same high grade of executive ability, breadth of view and business sagacity that we find at the head of our railways and industrial corporations. We are not unimportant factors in the business community, to be ignored, or to be used as the tool of any manufacturer, or to be ground between manufacturers and retailers. We are not just to ourselves nor to our business when we submit to perform the service of distributing any staple or other article at a loss or even inadequate compensation.

Every individual member should, irrespective of the action of his competitor, have the courage, independence and pride on the one hand to demand of producers and manufacturers a fair, honest margin of profit for the service performed, and on the other, to decline to sell any article to anyone at a loss. In this matter every wholesale grocer must act independently and decide for himself how he shall conduct his business.

But in righting the illegal practices in the trade and long-standing abuses, our association has been and can be of the greatest help to all wholesalers, members and non-members, if we will put aside our minor differences and freely give our loyal support and unselfish efforts to the good of all. I hold that organizations of wholesale grocers, like our own, can be engaged in no better nor more profitable service to their members individually than by co-operating to correct wrongs that have crept in during the past years.

What Association Work Means.

In the words of a prominent retail grocer,, in speaking of his own association work: "I find in the first place that the association did not attempt to regulate or fix prices. It was doing many things to alieviate the ordinary difficulties of the grocer's business, which were of more value to the trade than anything it could hope to do in the matter of prices. It was endeavoring to educate the grocers in the proper business methods and to protect them and secure favorable, and combat offensive legislation. The association was requesting and insisting upon fair and equitable treatment from manufacturers and wholesalers for all its members in their relations with them."

This, to my mind, exemplifies the correct idea of association work. I have endeavored to conduct the deliberation of this association in that spirit. To convince ourselves of the vast field for the legitimate endeavors of our association one has but to read thoughtfully our declaration of principles. Let me read you Article II of our Constitution, the objects of our endeavor:

"First: To foster and promote a feeling of fellowship and good-will among its members and on broad and equitable lines to advance the welfare of the wholesale grocery trade in the State of New York and vicinity.

"Second: to eliminate or minimize abuses, methods and practices inimical to the proper conduct of business.

"Third: To establish harmonious relations between manufacturer, jobber and retailer to the end that the jobber be universally recognized as the best channel through which the manufacturer should distribute his products to the retailer.

"Fourth: To assist in the enactment and enforcement of pure food laws, which in their operation shall deal justly and equitably with the interests of the consumer, retailer, jobber and manufacturer.

"Fifth: To have business conducted on legitimate lines; discourage 'deals,' 'schemes,' and subsidizing of jobbers' employes by manufacturers.

"Provided, that in the efforts of the association to accomplish these objects, no action shall be taken which will tend in any manner whatsoever to fix or to regulate prices, or in any way to co-operate in restraint of trade."

We can accomplish the greatest good to ourselves and to the entire trade and become an increasing power in our field only by continuing the strictest adherence to our objects and especially the final declaration of principles that we shall never take any action "which will tend in any manner whatsoever to fix or to regulate prices, or in any way to operate in restraint of trade."

Every wholesale grocer, every manufacturer and every retailer ought, under a perfect system of trade, to be free to buy and to sell, and to carry on his business independently, guided only by the rule of fairness to his competitors and customers alike.

Is a Moral Wrong.

It has always seemed to me personally that for any merchant to sell a large per cent of his output at less than it costs him to do business is morally wrong and therefore not worthy the attention of the self-respecting merchant. This is a question you must each decide for yourself.

Most of the workers of our association have been ready to meet in committee meeting, or as a whole whenever called, and the attendance of meetings called has indicated much more interest in the year just past than for many previous years. My observation has been that, so far as the manufacturers are concerned, many of them have found that a fair and equitable sales policy was not only just and necessary in the interest of jobber and retailer, but was in the long run most profitable for themselves. This is the result of purely educational work and the outcome of associated co-operation along broad and fair lines, and not to the interest of any one distributer or manufacturer as against the other.

In other words, actual experience has vindicated us, has absolutely proven to many a manufacturer that, whatever may be the effect upon the jobber, it is for that very manufacturer's selfish, personal interest to adopt our princip'e of distribution.

Honesty as a business asset is fully recognized. If we would succeed in business we cannot afford to sell a man something he does not want. Neither can we afford to disappoint him in quality any more than in count. Other things being equal, the merchant who has the most friends will make the most money. The cutter, be he wholesaler or retailer, is a marked individual, and my word for it the time is not very far distant when the retail trade will make the acquaintance of the fact, that the merchant selling a large proportion of his output for less than the cost of doing business, will be avoided, and if they consult their own best interests his salesmen will be turned away.

Among the Canadian patents granted recently by the Canadian Patent Office of interest to the trade, is one to J. E. Cochran, Elkhart, Ind., U.S.A., for a weighing scale.

The LATEST "Enterprise" Electric Mill

New ideas applied to rapid grinding of coffee by electric power make these new "Enterprise" Pedestal Mills by far the best on the market to-day. They are Direct Connected. They lose no power in transmission. The grinders are on the motor shaft. The double Mill shown here, No. 0852, is for alternating current; can also be furnished for direct current. One Mill is fitted with tooth grinders which cut the coffee, the other mill fitted with ribbed grinders for pulverizing. Each hopper holds six pounds. The Mill will granulate 3 pounds of coffee per minute, and pulverize ½ pound per minute. The cans or receivers are enclosed as a protection against dust. The Mill is self-cleaning. This compact, graceful 1 H.P. Mill is already in great demand. We invite correspondence and will send facts, illustrations and prices of our 45 sizes and styles of Rapid Grinding and Pulverizing Mills on request.

We supply grocers also with Meat and Food Choppers, Self-Measuring Pumps and Faucets, Smoked Beef Shavers and other "Enterprise" Specialties. You should have our latest catalogue. If you haven't it, write.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and it is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

Wanted Live Men

We need hustlers—men of energy.

Men who want to be No. 1, who wish to increase their earning capacity.

Who are too ambitious to drag along day after day in inferior positions.

This is the class of men we want as representatives of the Busy Man's Magazine.

Busy Man's is a high-grade publication, read by the most progressive people of this country.

To those capable of meeting this class of people, and who "make good," we will give entire charge of our dozen publications.

If you are of the above calibre—even if you can devote only part of your time to our work, write us. Our proposition will make it well worth your while.

One representative in Calgary sent us 28 subscriptions, which he secured in a few hours of his spare time . . . .

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

Berkel's Improved Slicing Machine

BERKEL'S Latest Improvement Patent Knife Guard to protect operators from accidents by thoughtlessly getting their hands against the circular knife. The only slicing machine in the world that has this protection.

BERKEL'S is the machine with the Patent Automatic Sharpener, by means of which the keen cutting edge on the knife is constantly maintained. The only machine with an automatic sharpening device. Simply press the Carborundum wheel shown in the cut above the knife downward and it strikes the knife edge at just the proper angle, a few turns of the wheel and your knife has an edge like a razor.

Will Slice Boiled Ham and Bacon Down to the Last Ounce

We call attention to the photographic production of two plates of boiled ham, there is just one pound of ham on each plate, it was all cut from the same piece, the eight slices on the right hand plate were cut with an ordinary knife, while the twenty uniform slices on the left hand plate were sliced on a slicing machine. This is an average result. The difference can be more or less marked according to the skill and time given the hand cutting, however the machine never can vary, the customer is always protected by dealing where there is a BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine. Dried Beef can be sliced thinner, quicker and better on BERKEL'S than any other made. The BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine is now used by Grocers, Butchers, Department Stores, Delicatessens, Hotels, Restaurants, Hospitals, Educational Institutions, Steamship and Railway Companies, Charitable Institutions, Penal Institutions, the Army and Navy, Soldiers' Homes, etc. BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine can be set to cut automatically (14) different thicknesses, from 1-40 of an inch up to ¾ of an inch, "it cuts bread or meat equally well," requires no skill to operate and will slice perfectly more meat or bread in twelve minutes than the most expert cutter can slice by hand in an hour. While it is a hand machine, for several years many packers, as well as grocers and marketmen who do a large sliced meat business, have been running their BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machines by mechanical power. Enough pieces of bacon can be put on this machine to cut 300 slices a minute. This should be of interest to those who put up bacon in boxes, glass or tin cans.

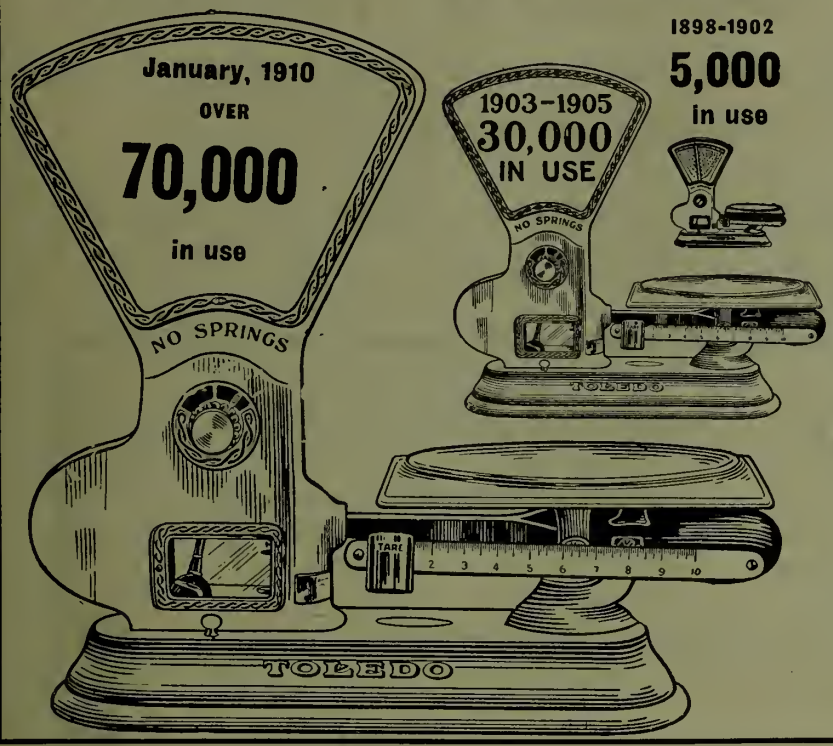
GROWTH—AN INDEX OF MERIT



The first springless, automatic, computing scale ever made was invented and built in Toledo in 1898. That scale, though most crude as compared with the improved 1910 models of Toledo scales, marked the greatest advance in scale building and retail store weighing methods in the history of civilization.

It Solved the Problem of Accurate Weight

It provided the merchant with the first practical, reliable device for measuring and determining the money value of his merchandise. Due to the superiority of its springless, automatic principle, the popularity of Toledo scales has grown world wide. Now England, Canada, Australia, Europe, New Zealand, South America and Mexico use these scales.

102 styles and sizes of Toledo Scales: adapted to all classes of stores. Price $40.00 to $175. We guarantee to furnish a better automatic computing scale for less money than you can get from any other source.

Fresh Tea Is All Important

—it is the life of your trade. Any tea kept in stock six months loses one cent per pound in value, after one year two cents, after two years it is positively unfit for sale.

Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed metal packages, it keeps very much better than in bulk, still it loses flavor. We do our utmost to have "SALADA" reach the consumer in all its garden freshness and fine flavor, and ask the co-operation of every retailer in our efforts to serve the public with FRESH tea. Our advice is to buy not more than three months' supply at a time. Eighteen years' experience proves to us that this is vitally important.

If any retailer—anywhere—at any time, has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, ship it back to us (freight collect) and we will refund the full purchase price. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of FRESH tea by this sweeping guarantee.

New Business in Selling Butter Scientifically

The Grocer Who Did Some Solid Thinking Made $208 Profit More than a Competitor Who Was Careless in His Methods—He Also Increased His Business Because He Did Business on the Modern Plan — What Selling Poor Butter Will do to a Merchant's Trade.

That careless and unscientific methods in selling butter react against the entire business is shown by the experience of a one-time influential grocer in a large Canadian town.

This town was located in the midst of a good farming district, but as usual with farming communities the farmers' wives did not all make the same quality of butter.

It even happened that on some occasions the same farmer's wife made poorer butter than at other times.

The grocer, however, did not discriminate in buying butter ; he had one price each Wednesday and Saturday for every pound of butter that was offered him.

In order, as he figured, to secure as much of the country trade as he could he took all the butter off the hands of the farmers and their wives. For this butter he paid on an average during a whole year of 21 cents.

A hundred customers purchased butter from him, each one representing a household averaging five persons.

To each customer he sold an average of 4 lbs. of butter per week ; that made 400 lbs. altogether during each week.

In the year of 52 weeks 20,800 lbs. of butter went to the 100 customers.

At 21 cents per pound, the butter cost the grocer $4,368.

The average selling price of this butter during the year was 24 cents ; therefore the grocer received $4,992.

This left a gross margin of profit of $624, which is a little more than 14 p.c. of the total cost.

It cost him about 12 p.c. to do business in that town, so that his net profit was pretty small.

Apart from the cost and profit on the butter sold, this grocer had considerable difficulty in retaining the interest of the 100 customers in his store.

Each week he invariably got several pounds of poor butter from the country as well as some of better quality.

The result was some of his best customers were sold inferior butter—butter which the family disliked and wouldn't use it on the table.

Housewives became disgusted, used the butter for baking purposes, and "spoke" to the grocer for sending it.

He promised to do better in future—to give them better butter—but again in a few weeks' time, the same customers would receive another lot of a poor quality, tainted and not fit for table use.

No more dependence was placed on this unscientific grocer ; several of the hundred customers refused to buy butter from him and a number of others left his store altogether.

He forgot that consumers wanted good butter—more particularly probably than anything else they used—and that they would not hesitate to pay 4 or 5 cents extra if they were positive that good quality was being secured.

Discussing the butter problem at afternoon teas and evening social functions, women told of the poor butter they had received once or twice from that grocer. This had the effect of ensuring the butter trade of the others present for his competitors.

Butter can be sold at a fairly good profit and also have a tendency to attract new business if the grocer exercises sufficient care in buying and selling ; in other words scientific methods in handling butter are money makers.

This was exemplified by another grocer in that same town—he gave his butter trade attention and satisfied his customers because he did business on the scientific plan.

His own family always wanted butter of good quality and refused to eat any other kind.

This caused him to treat his customers in the same manner, so he made it a point to see that they were sold good butter only—butter that he could safely recommend.

As this was a town surrounded by a good farming district, he had several customers from the country ; these occasionally brought him butter.

He judiciously pointed out to them that he would pay a good price for real good dairy butter, but that he couldn't take tainted butter on account of the poor demand for it.

What he accepted was not nearly enough to supply his customers, 100 of whom bought butter from him ; he secured the remainder from the wholesale provision houses, purchasing a good creamery brand.

Each of his customers represented an average household of five members and bought on an average of 4 pounds per week at the beginning of the year.

This made 400 lbs. per week or 20,800 lbs. during the year.

For the butter he bought, he paid an average of 24 cents per lb., making a total of $4,992 for the year, which was what the other grocer received.

Because he kept nothing but good butter on hand at all times, he was able to sell it at a good price—he received an average of 28 cents per pound.

That made a total of $5,824—a gross profit of $832, or about 17 p.c. on the cost.

But this did not represent all his profits. Because he sold first-class butter at all times, many of the families to whom he sold it began to eat more and towards the end of the year he was selling an average of 4¼ lbs. per week to each customer.

As all grocers know, the women of the households discuss the merits of the food they buy and tell each other where they get it.

The grocer observed this and made sure that when any of his customers talked about butter his store would be favorably mentioned.

The result was while he lost one or two customers from the country because he would not accept all their butter, he secured many new town customers through having the good quality.

He kept a fine refrigerator in his store and in placing his butter in it he made sure that no other foodstuffs were there that would tend to taint it—he knew that butter readily absorbed other flavors.

Because he exercised care in buying, handling, and selling butter, he not only made a fair profit, but brought new business to his store.

He made in money at least $208 more out of butter during the year than the other grocer.

Why the Co-operative Bill Should Not Be Passed

Hamilton and Brantford Retail Grocers' Associations Hold Joint Meeting to Hear Address Against the Bill—How it Will Give Special Privileges to a Few—Resolution Against it.

Hamilton, Feb. 1.—That a strong feeling in opposition to the bill about to be presented to the House of Commons in favor of Co-operative Societies of Great Britain, has grown up in Ontario, was shown by the meeting held in Hamilton recently, called by the retail grocers, mention of which was made in last week's issue. It was largely attended by them and other retail merchants. There was also present a large deputation from Brantford, the home city of Lloyd Harris, M.P., one of the chief promoters of the measure. Among the Brantford merchants present were Mr. Millan, president of Brantford Grocers' and Butchers' Association, Jas. Burns, F. C. Harp, R. L. Foulds, and others.

J. A. McIntosh, president of the Hamilton Grocers' Association acted as chairman, and introduced E. M. Trowern of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association. Mr. Trowern thoroughly convinced his audience that timely action should be taken to prevent the Bill getting through. Taking up clause by clause, he pointed out in each what objections the retailers had to it, showing that it was a bit of class legislation that no democratic people should stand for. That the present Joint Stock Companies Act provided sufficient safeguards for those desiring to go into legitimate business was shown, and also that there was no reason why special privileges should be granted to any. The passing of the Co-operative Bill would give the promoters freedom from personal liability, and afford them an opportunity to solicit stock from farmers and workingmen not conversant with the details of a retail business.

He declared that the proposed company which sought legislation was practically the International Co-operative Co., of Great Britain, of which our Governor-General is a director, and accused him of taking an active interest in the promotion of the Monk Bill, which was defeated in the Senate last session, and went so far as to say that he had sent him a letter saying that if he did not desist the matter would be referred to the King and his recall demanded.

Apparently Not Dangerous.

The bill he considered was very smooth, and to the lay mind did not appear dangerous. But going carefully into it, he maintained that its very smoothness contained the element of danger to the community, it being a voluminous affair covering about nineteen pages of closely printed matter. One of the features objected to was that it gave the privilege to six or seven men of forming themselves into a Co-operative Society, by sending their names to the Secretary of State for registration, and then to go ahead and do business as a "limited" company, without one dollar of expense. Then they were in a position to go out and solicit their sale of stock to farmers and others with the promise of dividends on their money, as well as fancy dividends on their purchases. Another feature was the selection of an auditor from among themselves—instead of a chartered accountant, as required by law. If the company disbanded with an excess of liabilities, the members of it could go their ways, unmolested, and there was no one responsible for the unpaid accounts.

Mr. Trowern next stated that in the Old Country, where Co-operative Societies claimed to benefit the workingmen, their own employes received starvation wages, while the laboring classes supplied the capital on which the concerns were operated. He produced figures showing that last year in the Old Country they did a business of over ninety-eight millions of dollars, twenty-one millions of which was the turnover in groceries alone.

Every retail as well as every wholesale merchant in Canada is urged to see the member from the constituency in which he resides, and explain the facts to him.

The Honorable
The Members of the Senate and House of Commons, Ottawa, Ont.

Hon. Sirs,—

We, the undersigned retail merchants, residents and electors of the Municipality of Hamilton, Ont., have learned with alarm that a Bill known as Bill No. 50 has again been introduced into the House of Commons to grant special privileges to Co-operative Societies, by allowing them to purchase goods as a Society, and escape personal liability, and thus evade not only the payments of the fees that are now paid under the Joint Stock Companies Act, but also the regulations governing the Act.

The object of these Societies, wherever they are established, is to allure the buying public to place money into them by offering an inducement in the form of a dividend on their purchases to be returned at a given time. These dividends act the same as a bribe, and while the public are not served as well, the system does great harm to skilled retail merchants whose profits are so small that they could not afford to make these deceptive offers, even if they felt disposed to do so. The system, therefore, injures legitimate retail merchandising by lessening the value of the business property of cities and towns, and by destroying the value of the great army of employes dependent upon the proper handling and distributing of merchandise, and it introduces into Canada by Government consent a fallacious and unsound system of doing business.

We, therefore, ask you to not grant the passage of this Bill and thus prevent the promoters of this Bill from having the privileges they desire, as it will injure the merchants, manufacturers and farmers of Canada and deceive the consumers.

Resolution Against the Bill.

Speeches were made by Brantford and Hamilton merchants, after which the following resolution was unanimously carried, moved by John O. Carpenter, seconded by Mr. Millan, that:

> "Having gone fully into the detail of the Co-operative Bill, we find that the bill grants special privileges to Co-operative Societies, and that its purpose is to give those who are not familiar with the retail trade an opportunity of securing subscriptions from the public, and that the result will be a great loss to subscribers and an injury to the retail merchants and consumers, and we recommend that the bill be not passed."

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the Brantford merchants for their attendance and also to Mr. Trowern for his address.

A public meeting will be called shortly in Brantford, when Lloyd Harris will be invited to give his opinion on the bill to Brantford merchants.

The Howard Mfg Co. has purchased an extra piece of property in the nature of a three-storey house, which has been annexed to their factory in Dartmouth, N.S. This firm has quietly occupied an up-to-date factory, in which modern machinery for the manufacture of numerous grocery sundries will be undertaken. One department of note will be a special chemical laboratory wherein experimental work will be conducted.

Window Card Sold Hundreds of Pounds Raw Sugar

Peterboro Grocer Tells of Value of the Display Card in the Window—Got Other Grocers Interested and Sold to Them—Had to Replenish His Stock.

Grocers are apt sometimes to overlook the value of the window card. To test a display card's value, the proper article should be shown at the proper time. While it often occurs that no apparent results have been obtained, yet on special occasions when direct results are to be expected, the show-card seldom fails. This must be taken as conclusive evidence that it performs its selling work—if proper attention is given it—the same as the window itself or an advertisement in the daily newspaper.

A Simple Window Show Card Which Brought New Business to a Grocer.

A good example of the value of the window card is given by J. M. Donovan, a Peterboro, Ont., grocer, who closely follows the store hints given in The Canadian Grocer.

Just before Christmas he tested the show card idea by using a small card as shown by the accompanying cut. The card was 10 x 9 inches in dimensions, not an elaborate one, but just a simple card that had been sent Mr. Donovan with some blue that he had purchased.

In referring to the card, Mr. Donovan writes:

"It has proved its value, and done it well too. Owing to the good results it produced, and having taken the suggestions of its make up from The Grocer, is why I am sending it as its possession will tell you more than I could put on two sheets of paper.

"I had it set into a split peg and then driven down out of sight in the centre of a neatly papered candy drum, heaped up nicely with raw sugar, the card standing nicely on top of the pyramid. Its magnetic powers was simply marvelous. I sold a lot of the raw sugar before Christmas. I was surprised that so few knew what raw sugar was, and so many that never used it before, have since remarked that they would never make their Christmas cake again without it. I have always made it a point to keep a little around Christmas time.

"Many of my customers told neighbors about it, who do not deal with me. The latter wanted some and told their grocers who did not have it, that they could get it from Mr. Donovan. As a result many grocers called me up by phone to know if I could spare them from 2 to 5 lbs. of raw sugar—a hundred pounds went in a few days, and I had to replenish my stock. The card did its work; and thanks to The Grocer for giving me the idea.

"The card was a —— blue adv. I cut off the top and scralled it a little to give it a finish.

"I had two other drums also nicely papered with blue paper and filled with raisins and currants. Many said it was a neat arrangement. I have the same drums filled now with different bulk cereals, which also look neat and catchy."

THE GROCERS IN SOCIETY.

Pleasant Social Function Under Direction of Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—The name 'at home' suggests something that most people want to attend. It usually means pleasing music, implies the 'tripping of the light fantastic,' a quiet game of cards and a dainty luncheon. All these were realized at the 30th annual at home of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, held on the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 26th, in the Temple Building. There, a few pleasant hours were passed away.

The dancing hall presented a handsome appearance. Brilliantly lighted and with the quiet decorations of some pretty ferns, it attracted a good many times the grocers and their friends—and the dances went merrily on. Music was supplied by an eight-piece orchestra, noted for its liberality. The several card tables received considerable attention by many who didn't indulge in the dance and by others who interspersed their dances with a game at cards.

There were some 120 couples in attendance, among whom were many representatives from the wholesale houses. D. McLean, the new president, received the guests, and during the evening Controller Church and Ald. Heyd and Ald. McGuire were in attendance.

The committee of grocers in charge of the function was: R. B. Snow, D. Bell, C. F. Thorne, T. Clark, J. S. Bond, R. Van Loan, W. F. Johnson, W. C. Miller, R. Davies, D. McLean and J. C. Beaumont, secretary.

DEATH OF SIR GEO. A. DRUMMOND.

Sir Geo. A. Drummond, Montreal, president of the Canada Sugar Refining Co., died on Wednesday morning after a lengthy illness. He was known in Canada as a prominent financier and many interests will be affected by his death.

Let His Nephew Fail to Teach Him Lesson in Buying

Story of How an Italian Learned by Experience the Value of Careful Buying—Had Told it to Nephew, But Latter Thought He Knew Better and Failed—No Money to Make Money.

Commerce is a science and some men have an inborn talent for it.

It asserts itself in unexpected quarters, just as we often hear of a child over in a poor district with an inherent talent for music or drawing.

Here is a story told by a man from the credit department of one of the hardware jobbing houses, and which illustrates the point:

"We had extended a rather liberal line of credit to a young man who had opened a retail hardware store in one of the cities further west. He had always bought in large lots, taking advantage of the quantity prices. As time went on he became further and further apart in his settlements, and finally began giving notes. We were not particularly concerned, for our traveler in that territory learned that he was backed by an uncle, a large real estate owner in that city. But failing to meet one of his notes, I thought it time to act, jumped on a train and went out there.

"I found a frank, ambitious young fellow with large ideas, and also a large stock that he had failed to move. He made a clear statement of his condition, that he had urged his uncle to advance the cash to tide him over, but had met with steady refusal, and finally suggested that I see the uncle in his behalf."

"I found the uncle a native born Italian—a little, stocky man, kindly, but unexpressive of emotion.

"I explained my mission.

"'No!' was the only word of response, and I never remembered of hearing a more decisive 'No,' and he made it still more effective by a long silence, which followed under the glare of his steady black eyes. He finally broke silence with these words and a defiant little nod between each:

"'Let him fail.'

"'I tried to make clear to him the frightful cost of bankruptcy, but at the end of each of my statements came the same words, like a minor keyed refrain:

"'Let him fail.'

"Then there was another long silence. I was convinced the nephew was honest—likewise the uncle, and I couldn't quite see his move. The Italian caught the puzzled expression, smiled, dropped his head, fixed his eyes in one spot on the floor, and in a voice with a peculiar lowering inflection at the end of each sentence, which was almost dirge-like in its effect, he explained by telling this story:

"'When I land in New York I have just five dollar. I buy a basket, some fruit, I peddle the fruit, I make little money. I keep this up 'til I have money to buy me little stand. I sell more fruit, I make more money. Then I buy me peanut roaster and a sack of peanuts. I buy 'em for two dollar a sack. I sell 'em so I make dollar on every sack—I sell sack every week.

"'One day a feller he come along, and he say: "Tony, you sell lot of peanuts, let me sell 'em to you—I sell 'em cheaper. The feller where you buy 'em, he buy 'em from me—I ship 'em up from the South, I sell 'em to you for dollar and a half a sack, but you can't buy just one sack, you got to buy 50 sack at a time.'

"'Alright,' I say, 'I got the money.' I get the 50 sack and put 'em in my house—I make 50 cent a sack more. Then I have two, three bad day—I don't sell any fruit—it spoil. I have to go to the man where I buy my fruit and ask him for credit. I don't get as good fruit as when I pay cash. I pay up, I sell all the peanut. ButI don't make as much money as when I pay two dollar a sack for my peanut. I think about that. The feller he come around for another order for 50 sack, but I don't buy any more that way—I get 'em one sack at a time.'

"At this point the Italian looked up. He felt that I understood.

"'Have you told your nephew that story?' I asked.

"'Yes, but he think he know it all—let him fail. He don't buy just ten keg of nail—he buy whole carloads. He don't have any money to make money—he can't pay his bills.

"'Let him fail, it cost money to have him fail, but he won't learn any other way—it worth all it cost. After he fail, I start him up again.'"

A YEAR OF PROGRESS.

Toronto, Feb. 2.—At the annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society held on Saturday afternoon, the annual report for 1909 was presented by the retiring president, S, R. Wickett, who showed that $43,000 had been paid out for death claims during the year, the insurance in force being $2,015,000. The lapses showed a pleasing falling off, being $72,000, as against $111,000 in 1908, whilst the membership had materially increased. The officers for 1910 are: President, ex-Mayor Oliver; vice-president, Robert Maxwell; Treasurer, H. Goodman; Secretary, E. M. Rowley; superintendent of agencies, Richard Ivens; trustees, John Burns, John Gibson, S. M. Sterling, E. S. Parsons, S. R. Wickett, A. J. Tipping, R. G. Hector, Robert Forbes and W. S. B. Lawrie.

STILL GATHERING THEM IN.

D. Williams, the special subscription commissioner, who is now touring the West Indies on behalf of MacLean's trade newspapers and magazines, has sent in his second lot of orders. They show that he is maintaining the good average of his first week in Bermuda. If he maintains in other parts of the West Indies the good average he has struck in the Bermudas it certainly looks as if a fresh supply of subscription blanks will have to be forwarded to him before long.

STRONG CANNED PEA MARKET.

The situation in canned peas is strong. Although we are five or six months away from the new crop, stocks are already getting into small compass. There is already a keen demand, and although this demand is no doubt to some extent speculative, it does not alter the fact that it is based largely on the condition of the market.

Some of the wholesalers, and particularly those whose stocks are on the light side, are picking up lots here and there, which are netting the sellers extremely good profits. We hear of some transactions in which retailers are selling to wholesalers at prices which are netting much better profits than some of them would be likely to obtain if they sold the goods over their own counter.

Both wholesalers and retailers stand to make money out of the canned peas they have in stock.

While the situation in canned corn and canned tomatoes is not as strong as in peas the market is by no means weak. On the contrary, it is strong, and the fact that the merger of the independent canners and the Canners Limited is now practically consummated, certainly adds strength to the situation.

While there may still be a factory here and there which has not yet fallen into line, the merger is likely, for some time at any rate, to be able to control the situation. If this is so we are scarcely likely to see any disposition on the part of the packers to cut prices. Competition will not be strong enough to induce them to do this.

SOAP PRICES RISING.

From all appearances the retail trade will soon be requested to pay more for the soap they purchase.

Prices of raw material have advanced so materially that this will apparently be the ultimate result—if higher prices have not already been quoted by the jobber.

The most important advance has been in cocoanut oil, which, manufacturers state, has gone up about 50 per cent. during the past eight months.

Both tallow and resin have advanced about 25 per cent. and, generally speaking, all ingredients are much stronger in price than they recently were.

The moral is plain.

A SILLY THEORY.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington has made an extraordinary discovery. It declares without mental reservation of any kind that the cause of the high price of food products is the excessive number of retailers, and suggests that if there were fewer stores there would be lower prices.

As an investigation has been started by the Government at Washington the extraordinary discovery of the Department of Agriculture and the advice which it gives, will no doubt be carefully considered by the commission. That is, of course, provided that the commission is composed of men of the same mental calibre as the economists in the Department of Agriculture, who propounded the fallacy.

It is to be hoped, however, that before the enquiry is closed it will have been discovered that what was given out as the opinion of the Agricultural Department will be found to be a joke on the part of the office boy. In the meantime, however, those who know anything of business affairs are likely to think there is a screw loose in the mental makeup of the department.

According to latest advices, there is no indication of an epidemic among retailers to increase competition among themselves in order that larger profits may be obtained.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT.

A Toronto department store showed the other day that it recognizes the psychological moment when it arrives for taking advantage of business-getting opportunities.

As everybody knows, the decision arrived at by the working men in the United States to abstain from the use of meat until the prices are reduced, is being imitated to some extent by their confreres in the leading Canadian cities.

Taking advantage of this the Toronto department store in question came out a few days ago in the daily papers with a well displayed advertisement, intimating that while the price of meat was so high elsewhere in this particular store such was not the case. In proof of this attractive prices were quoted. That the advertisement was effective was evidenced by the interest it created.

It is quite evident that the department store not only knew the psychological moment to take advantage of the prevailing conditions, but they knew how to do so. To have merely fixed attractive prices for their meats would not have been very effective in itself. They knew that they must advertise if the good news of attractive prices was to reach the people.

It is a wise business man who is ever on the alert for the psychological moment to take advantage of which will bring grist to his mill.

ILLEGITIMATE SALESMANSHIP.

In spite of the rigorous provisions of the Secret Commissions Act, which prohibits the giving of secret rebates and commissions, there are still some salesmen who in their desire to get business are resorting to practices which are forbidden by the Act.

Our attention is frequently drawn to flagrant breaches of the Act and one of the most common practices in this regard appears to be the passing from the pocket of the salesman to the palm of the customer a sum of money sufficient to induce the latter to place an order for goods on which there is a fixed selling price.

Aside altogether from the moral aspect of such practices they are proofs of poor rather than good salesmanship. When a salesman resorts to secret rebates and other dishonest practices in order to secure business it is an acknowledgement of his own inefficiency to sell goods in the ordinary way.

The true salesman is he who relies upon the merits of his goods, plus his own personality, to effect sales; not he who is so unwise as to run the risk of incurring severe legal penalties in order to accomplish that which he cannot do by legitimate means.

One thing that perhaps can be said in favor of the salesman who is ready to break the law in order to effect a sale is that he is at least courageous in view of the fact that he is running the risk of a maximum penalty of a $2,500 fine or two years' imprisonment.

Those who have to substitute crookedness for efficiency should either learn the secret of true salesmanship or embark in some vocation in which dishonesty rules all actions.

Some day somebody will be caught, when there will be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

REVISING PARTNERSHIP STATUTE

Two bills respecting partnerships will be introduced during the present session of the Ontario Legislature by the Attorney-General. They are not new bills, but revisions of old statutes.

Every ten years a commission of judges sits and revises existing statutes, and as well incorporates into one volume all the new acts passed during the previous decade. The commission is at present revising the statistics of 1897 for the volume of 1907. Instead of waiting until the completion of their work for the bringing down of the statistics, each bill as revised is introduced and passed separately.

The revisions in the present bills, Nos. 142 and 143, have simplified the forms only, no radical changes coming into effect. No. 142 (R.S.O. 1897, c. 152) is an "act respecting the registration of partnerships."

It provides that persons in a partnership for trading, manufacturing or mining purposes shall file within six months with the registrar a declaration signed by all the members of the partnership, containing the name of the partnership, and when a change takes place in the partnership a new declaration shall be filed within the same space of time under penalty of $100 being levied on each member of the partnership. An exception is made for the manufacture of cheese and butter, the act not applying to them.

No. 143 is an act respecting limited partnerships (R.S.O. 1897, c. 151). It provides for a limited partnership for the transaction of mercantile, manufacturing or other business (excepting banking, construction and operation of railways, and insurance) being formed of two or more persons. General partners shall be jointly and severally responsible for debts of the partnership, but special partners shall not be liable beyond the amounts contributed by them to the capital, though if their names are used in the title of the firm they shall become thereby general partners. The general partners only, however, may transact business.

All the persons forming such a partnership shall also sign a certificate before a notary public of the business, the duration of the partnership, amount of capital, name of firm, place of business, etc., and this certificate shall be filed with the clerk of the county court. Until this is done no partnership shall be deemed to exist. Every renewal shall also be certified to and filed. Every alteration in the partnership name or in the nature of the business shall be deemed a dissolution of the partnership. In case of insolvency or bankruptcy, a special partner shall not be allowed to rank as a creditor until all other creditors are satisfied, and there can be no dissolution until a notice is filed with the county court clerk that such is contemplated.

A NARROW-MINDED PROPHET.

The Canadian Farm quotes a paragraph from this paper and calls the writer of it a "miserable burglar," says he is "ignorant of the true situation," calls it "lamentable bungling," etc. It referred to the hog situation.

One can readily overlook such brilliant language on account of the youth and inexperience of the paper and therefore attach no significance to it, whatever, but we would like to help the editor of the Canadian Farm to see things from a broader standpoint and then common sense would not appear quite so much of a "bungle" to him.

He is evidently laboring under the impression that the farmers are a class of people who must be guided by some "great mind," and that fair discussion from different viewpoints must be kept away from them. If the Canadian Farm, instead of trying to put a fence around the farmers, and make them suspicious of everybody who is not a farmer, would show them that the consumers engaged in other occupations must also be considered and create a more trustful spirit, he would find that he could do something for the farmers which they would appreciate.

The Canadian Grocer is a commercial paper, but it is not small enough to advocate anything in the interests of trade, unless it is fair to the producer and consumer as well. Instead of stirring up antagonism The Canadian Grocer is constantly trying to bring about a better understanding of the true industrial relations of all clauses. Ignorance is a mischief maker and in order to bring about the best results for all classes the people need a better knowledge of the conditions which govern trade and commerce.

Canadian Farm admits that the packers are at their limit, and are working without a margin. The Canadian Grocer claimed that the prices of cured meats were dangerously high. That we were right in our contention has been since demonstrated by the people who pay only to a certain limit for their goods, and who are now rebelling against the high prices of meat. We foresaw this and in order to assist in avoiding it, we did suggest that it would be in the interests of the farmers to take a little less for their hogs than to interfere with and check the consumption.

If the packers have no margin and the meat is too high for consumption, it is plain to be seen that the hogs are above their value, and surely the farmers ought to be reasonable and intelligent enough to understand this without any danger of being discouraged from raising hogs.

With our own rapidly increasing population, and the smaller exports from the United States to England, farmers should know themselves that they can depend on good prices for their hogs for years to come even if such a prophetic mind as possessed by the editor of Canadian Farm has a belief to the contrary.

LET THE BUSINESS MEN KNOW.

There are bills which come up from time to time in the Dominion Parliament and in the various provincial parliaments which need the expert attention of the business men of the country. Yet these men never see or hear of these bills until they come before the house and then only through meagre newspaper reports.

How simple it would be for the governments to have a list of the boards of trade in Canada and in the respective provinces on file and each time a bill is drawn up to send a copy to each.

Boards of trade are composed of the best business men in the country; they are therefore the most competent men to judge whether a bill is in the best interests of trade or not; they are in a position to suggest changes, omissions, or additions which often make a bill really effective.

A good example of this is to be found in the Secret Commissions Act. If that bill had not fallen into the hands of a business man who understood what it was intended to do, we never would have had the last clause which makes the party knowingly privy to any offence of the act liable to the same penalties as the giver of the secret rebate.

The boards of trade which represent the manufacturing and all business interests of a community should therefore be in touch with the government and should be made acquainted with what is going on in parliament.

A copy of each bill respecting business should be sent to the president or secretary of each board of trade just as soon as it is in type in order to give the business men an opportunity of studying it and offering their opinions.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Displaying Dried Fruits in St. John—Plans for Increasing Olive Sales—Toronto Grocer After Cash Trade Without Losing Any Customers—Apprenticing Clerks Discussed by Montreal Merchants—Business Expert to Visit the Trade.

Putting Forward Dried Fruits.

St. John, N.B., February 2.—Now that the stores of home-made preserves and jams are getting low, the grocer should prominently display dried fruits, canned goods and jams. In several of the windows in the stores in St. John displays of dried fruits are being made with price cards attached. One merchant has been utilizing one of his big windows for this purpose only. Two large mounds, one of evaporated peaches and the other of evaporated apricots are shown with a large card announcing two pounds for 25 cents. Prunes might also he given prominent place now. Sales of canned goods and jams have been heavier lately.

Sold Out Window Three Times.

Toronto, February 2.—That the window is a good asset in the grocery business has been proved by H. Tolchard, Yonge St., Toronto. Recently he placed in a breakfast food window which sold itself three or four times over. It was a new breakfast food recently put on the market and Mr. Tolchard displayed it in its various forms, placing a few window cards and price tickets among the boxes and individual packages. Speaking of the results, Mr. Tolchard's son said: "It sold itself three times and after each we filled it up again—the window created a splendid demand." And that was a week or more before the display was taken out.

Protest Against 'Phone Rates.

St. John, N.B., February 2.—Practically all the grocers in one section of St. John have decided to take drastic measures to show the New Brunswick Telephone Company that they will not submit to the increased telephone rates. For some days an agreement has been circulated for signature among the grocers, pledging the signers to remove their telephones if the advanced rates are pressed. Two grocers, whose contracts have expired, have declined to sign at the advanced charge and have allowed their phones to be removed. Others say they will discard their instruments as soon as their present term expires. W. J. Hamm, grocer on Ludlow street, said the agreement among them had been signed by practically all the grocers and many who had house 'phones were also entering into the compact, "It looks," he said, "like a clean sweep of the telephones on the west side."

He added that his own telephone had been taken out and one other grocer whose term had expired had also given up his instrument.

How to Sell More Olives.

Lindsay, February 2.—The demand for stuffed and unstuffed olives appears to he increasing each winter and large supplies are kept by Lindsay grocers. They are in vogue at afternoon teas, at card parties, and also at the daily meal, and Lindsay people have certainly "acquired that taste." A number of the grocers make special displays of olives and report good returns.

It would be a splendid idea to advertise olives in the regular newspaper advertisement space with a view to selling them for afternoon teas, etc. This makes a good talking point and should attract the feminine eyes.

Cash Trade Without Losing Customers.

Toronto, February 2.—In last week's issue there was an item respecting the change from the credit to cash system of J. S. Adamson, West Toronto. A. L. Anderson, another West Toronto grocer, has also some special ideas on this much talked of question. This man bas watched Mr. Adamson's experiment with a great deal of interest and he has formulated a scheme of his own, which he may try in the near future. Mr. Anderson's whim is to do business on a cash basis and still hold all his customers.

In a railway town like West Toronto the monthly payment is the most common form of settlement, states Mr. Anderson, and it is on this basis that he has done his figuring. He believes that if the public can be induced to buy coupons at the first of the month, paying cash, that a grocer could afford to give a liberal discount, probably about 3 per cent. as an inducement. He figures that a customer with a standing, monthly account of $25 will buy $25 worth of coupons for next month's business. At the same time that customer is asked to clean up bis old account by paying small instalments.

In this way Mr. Anderson thinks he will be able to transfer his business to a cash basis and at the same time lose none of the accounts on his books, nor any of his customers.

Are Worth More Money.

Montreal, February 2.—The apprentice system of training retail salesmen is much admired by Mr. Davidson, manager for Fraser, Viger & Co. He himself was apprenticed in the Old Country for four years and his course bad given him tbe knowledge of the grocery business which had secured him his present position. Furthermore it had given him so many ideas on store economy that any man making use of such ideas would soon save his salary to tbe firm he was employed by. College was to a great extent the same to the average man as the apprentice system was to the future grocer. No one expects to go to college and be paid for it. Yet an apprentice is paid, though only very moderately. He considered it would be a fine thing for the grocery trade generally, though probably impossible to start in this country, owing to the general idea prevalent among young men here, that they must begin at once somewhere away from the bottom of the ladder. Personally he would rather pay a graduate of the system $5 a week more than one who had simply served as a clerk for the same time, owing to the better general economy of the man, and his knowledge of stocks and methods.

Graham and Robertson, two retailers here, corroborated these statements and said they found their best clerks were Old Country boys who had served an apprenticeship. They were worth more money to them and received it.

Advocates a Business Expert.

Toronto, February 2.—J. F. Holloway, 1265 King St., West, has a definite opinion on the education of the retail grocer to better business methods.

"Don't you think," he asked, "tbat there is need for an expert in the grocery trade in every city and town? I mean a man one could employ for a week or so to come into the store and just tell the grocer where be is doing business in the wrong way. We find a small, inexperienced merchant working day and night but we do not get at tbe methods the larger and more sensible men are adopting.

"I noticed in a recent issue of The Grocer an article on the 2 for a quarter system. I do not know anyone more to blame than tbe grocers themselves. A merchant should decide upon his price and stand by it. I know only too well that it is hard to do this but it can be accomplished. There are plenty of women who make it a point to go from store to store and tell merchants they can get certain articles for 2 or 3 for a quarter, etc., from a neighbor. Lacking backbone these merchants say: "Oh, if he is doing it, so will I." This is a byphrase with many. I have had women ask me when I quoted 8 cents per pound if I will make it '3 for a quarter.'"

Outlines Window Display Plans on Paper First

Methods of a Montreal Window Dresser — Changes Displays Every Other Day and Oftener if Possible—An Advertisement That is Worth the Trouble—Every Grocer Can Utilize it.

Montreal, Feb. 2.—As a sample of what may be accomplished at this time of year with fruits and vegetables used as a window display the accompanying cut deserves attention.

A central stand of apples, surrounded at the base by pineapples, cabbages, etc., is the most prominent feature of the display. A circle of celery heads gives a most pleasing effect to the observer. The outside arrangement of fruits and vegetables is in squares, lending variety to the central circular section.

Good things to eat are always popular, particularly when there is some difficulty in obtaining them, and it pays to be the grocer who has the initiative to buy the goods which are somewhat out of season and yet not too expensive for the average consumer. Display these goods. It will be found to draw custom when hardly anything else will, as customers think: "Well, he has the newest things on the market, everything else in the store must be fresh." At least, it has that general effect on their minds. At any rate, judicious window display of materials in his store for a good window display," said Mr. La Rue. "All it needs is a little ingenuity, persistency and brain work, to produce the effective results."

A Vegetable and Fruit Window Dressed by Armand La Rue, a Montreal Groce r Who Plans Before He Begins.

This window was dressed by Armand La Rue, with the Stanford Market, St. Catherine Street, Montreal. Mr. La Rue, in commenting on his window display ideas, said that it is an easy matter to dress a window attractively of a man has the plan outlined on paper before he puts it in the window. So many grocers dress windows in a haphazard way that it is hard to attain results pleasing to the general public, even if one has the necessary materials for a first-class display.

"Have some definite plan in your mind at least, when you set out to dress a window," said Mr. La Rue. "Remember that the people you wish to attract are like yourself in most ways—that is, average people. If your display pleases yourself and your associates in the store it must be about all right. It needs imagination and planning to get satisfactory results."

A judicious display of seasonable goods is one of the best ads. a grocer can have. seasonable goods will produce the most satisfactory kind of results.

As to how often displays should be changed, Mr. La Rue gave it as his opinion that the oftener the better. He changed his at least every other day, and oftener if there was time.

"Every grocer, however small, has the BIG WORK FOR LITTLE MONEY.

A. H. Lawson, Stouffville, Ont., in paying his subscription to The Canadian Grocer, writes: "You are no doubt doing a wonderful bit of good for very little money. In reference to the value and help we receive from week to week by reading The Canadian Grocer, am sure that the half has not been told. Grocer or traveler cannot afford to be without it.

GROCERS' CLERKS' BALL.

The evening of January 26th was the occasion for an enjoyable euchre and dance at Auditorium Hall, Montreal. The promotors were the associated clerks of local grocers. About four hundred were present, some for the cards only, some for the dancing, and some for both.

Beautiful prizes were provided for the euchre players, in all about fourteen. and the competition for them waxed very keen.

A luncheon was served about midnight and the dance kept up until nearly daylight. Everything went off in a manner which did credit to the gentlemen in charge.

GOOD TRADE WITH THE INDIES.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 3.—Trade between Canada and the West Indies is evidently on the increase. All the steamers leaving Halifax so far this season for the West Indian Ports have been filled to the hatches with Canadian goods, and they have not been able to carry all the cargo offering. The quantity of freight offering is so heavy that Pickford & Black have been obliged to put on another steamer for an extra trip. The steamer Harlaw was fitted up this week, and it is expected that she will get away early next week with a full cargo. The steamers are also bringing large cargoes on their return trips, principally fruit and sugar. One of the boats recently landed here over four thousand bags of sugar which was sent forward to Montreal. The demand for Canadian products this season is good all round.

Symposium of Opinions on Variety of Assessments

Some Believers in Single Tax Method— The Present Business Assessment in Ontario Finds Opposition—The Method Prevailing in Edmonton, Alta.

IMPROVEMENTS NOT TAXED.

By F. M. C. Crosskill, Edmonton.

The impression seems to have got about that we use the Single Tax System in Edmonton, but it is not so. The system that we use differs from the Single Tax in that we tax business and incomes as well as land. For the last five years we have not been taxing improvements on property. Our method is to assess the land for its full value, that is for what it would likely bring if put up for sale at any time, and not boom prices. A lot with a forty thousand dollar building on it would not be assessed for more than a vacant lot similarly situated. This method of assessing has proved very satisfactory here.

In regard to our business tax, we assess on floor space, so much per square foot at a different rate for different kinds of businesses according to the space required to carry on the business. For instance, businesses carrying bulky goods would not be assessed at as high a rate as a business carrying a more compact kind of goods, and banks and financial offices we assess at a higher rate still. The number of square feet is multiplied by the classification rate and placed on the assessment roll and the same rate applied as for land, income, etc. This manner of assessing businesses appears to be satisfactory to most of our business men. We have amended the rate per foot from year to year until we have a very fair classification of rates.

For incomes, we assess all amounts over one thousand dollars.

WANTS TAX ON LAND VALUES.

By J. T. Petrie, St. Catharines, Ont.

I think the business tax an improvement over the old system in that each business pays its quota. Under the old system, some merchants carrying large stocks and doing a large business, claimed and could show that thay had little interest in the stock. They therefore, escaped taxation as also did the wholesale houses that were interested.

I believe that a tax on land values would be a great boom to St. Catharines and no doubt it would be to other places as well. It would make holders of vacant city lots either build or sell. Again it would be an incentive for owners of houses to improve, such as new verandahs, painting, etc., whereas under the present system, many will not make any improvements, fearing the assessors will raise their values as soon as any improvements are made.

A certain amount must be raised yearly by taxes, that is certain, and I would say, "Tax land values and encourage improvements."

ACCORDING TO BUSINESS DONE.

By Joseph Walsh, Stratford, Ont.

I do not think that the business tax as it stands to-day is a fair way of assessing retail business. I am a large holder of land as well as shop buildings so am not prejudiced on account of having the one only. It appears to me that a person doing business in premises that are up to date, well-equipped and a credit to the municipality in which they are situated should not be subjected to a greater tax than adjoining buildings, which, although of a ram-shackled nature, are still in such a condition that it is possible to do business in.

I think that the fair way of assessing any business is to assess it according to the quantity of business done, that is, if it is necessary to make an assessment for business tax only. If not, I thoroughly believe in the principle that all frontages within the same area should be taxed at the same rate.

I am very pleased to see that you are taking this matter up and can assure you that to the best of my knowledge it will have the support of everyone connected with the trade.

PROPOSES TAX ON FLOOR SPACE.

By J. P. Eagen, St. Thomas, Ont.

The present method of business assessment is very unfair. The old act was bad but the present system is worse. As as example I know of a merchant paying taxes on an assessment of $1,350. Another doing an equal amount pays on $210. As a further illustration there is a jewelry store here paying on $750 with a stock worth possibly $50,000. A Chinese laundry near by pays on $750, each paying about $15 annually.

I would suggest that the assessment for business tax be levied on the actual floor space occupied by the business. The area of a store 20 x 100 feet would be 2,000 square feet. Now take say 60 per cent. of that and the amount of the assessment would be $1,200 and if the rate were 20 mills on the dollar the grocer would pay $24 business taxes.

I believe in assessing the land occupied by the building for its full value plus the revenue derived therefrom annually. The rich are not assessed for their capital invested but for the interest on the principal. Why should the poor man be made to pay on his capital invested in his home, and if he improves it to make him pay more.

Let the government appoint business men on the assessment committee and probably they may get up a fairer basis of assessment and one not quite so ridiculous as the last.

FAVORS A TAX ON LAND.

By J. F. Holloway, Toronto.

I am fully convinced that the land tax is the only fair way of taxation. Land values is one thing that cannot be hidden and to place taxation on land is the only just way to return to the people the values they create. And as population is the only thing that makes land valuable, I think most people outside of land owners would agree that the people should have the values they create.

When buildings are taxed, labor is taxed. Labor builds houses but labor cannot make land—that is a gift to the people, but alas, few of us get it. I think the English people see this. What good would a tariff do them? Tax imports and factories would open up; wages would go up and just as soon as wages advance the landlords will raise the rent.

Who gets the real benefit of the tariff?

PRESENT BUSINESS TAX UNDESIRABLE.

By Jas. Vair, Barrie, Ont.

I do not consider a business tax a desirable way to raise money to carry on municipal affairs. Overtaxing industries and merchants—both employers of labor—tends to hinder progress and enterprise, and influences the owners of land to hold same for speculation. A petition from many towns and cities is sent to the Legislature asking for the optional right of municipalities to tax the land at one rate and the improvement and buildings at another rate. If the rate were 20 mills on the dollar, on an assessment of three millions, make the rate on land 30 mills, and the rate on improvement 15 mills.

The assessment in 90 per cent of our towns is not equal. On three millions assessment it is usually two millions on improvements and one million on land; it should be the reverse, and when this is not so, and very little chance of it being carried out, the two rates on which to collect taxes will overcome the difficulty and will reduce the business tax, as it is governed by the improvements and value of the buildings one occupies.

Sugar Dug Out by Crowbar by Old Time Grocer

Obstacles That Merchants Had to Overcome a Half Century Ago—Currants Came in Barrels and Had all to be Washed Before Being Sold—Small Salaries for Clerks — Some Differences Between Then and To-day.

The article in a recent issue of The Canadian Grocer showing the difference in the cost of goods forty-five years ago and at the present time, caused considerable interest and comment from readers. It is a natural thing, meeting with our difficulties as we do from day to day, to forget that others who preceded us had the same troubles and in many cases far greater difficulties to contend with than we have now.

To be reminded of these facts therefore as they existed years ago ought to have an encouraging effect, and instead of grumbling about things in general, we will find that we have every reason to be grateful.

The purpose of this article is to show the customs, habits, work and salaries of 50 yegrs ago.

Let us begin with the boy who entered upon his apprenticeship for a term of three years at $50 for the first, $80 for the second, and $100 for the third year, and his board. The store had to be opened in the morning at 6 o'clock in the summer and at daylight in the winter, while closing time averaged about 9 o'clock all the year round. The first thing that had to be done in the morning in the winter time, was to light the fire. There was nothing but wood heating in those days. The fire was always out in the morning and the store was freezing cold. Package goods were almost entirely unknown. Wrapping paper was all in sheets of different sizes and weights, to be used as the nature of the goods required. Bags if used at all, were made by the clerks when time permitted. No bags were bought ready made. Currants used to come in barrels, packed so tightly that they had to be broken with the axe, and the lumps loosened and cleaned by hand. Currants were not cleaned by machinery in those days as they are now. Raisins also required a great deal of time in cleaning.

Crowbar Had to be Used.

Sugar came in hogsheads of about a ton in weight. This often had to be dug out with a crowbar and shovel. In many cases the top was as hard as stone and the bottom in the shape of molasses. This all had to be taken up, mixed and worked through a sugar grinder to get it into a salable condition.

Flour and all cereals were bought by the barrel or bag and sold by the pound. No butter was done up in one pound prints, but all had to be cut from large rolls or dug out of tubs.

Eggs came in boxes, barrels, etc., packed in chaff or straw. Sometimes when they arrived, they were in one end of the barrel and the chaff in the other. This usually was a fine piece of work to assort, wash and count for the junior clerks. With all this heavy work, old grocers state that the profits were no better than they are to-day, and yet some of those merchants made money and are in splendid circumstances to-day.

The principal difference between now and then, is in the expense of doing business. Rents and help were much cheaper, but in having a great many of the goods done up in packages and having other conveniences, one clerk now should easily do fully double the amount of selling one did in those days. Another great advantage is the telephone. Instead of having every customer call at the store to order goods and all whom had to be waited on promptly, a great many orders come in by phone which can be done up when waiting customers are not pressing.

Opportunities To-day.

On the whole, comparing everything, it would appear that the chances of doing a successful grocery business now are fully as promising as in the past.

The only disadvantage one can see is the fact that too many undertake to do business without serving the necessary apprenticeship, and therefore lack the training necessary to do a successful business.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPAEDIA.

The Manufacture of Peanut Oil and Its Uses—Compared With Other Oils.

Although the majority of people recognize the peanut only as it appears for sale in the shell, hulled and salted, as peanut candy, or in the form of peanut butter, many new lines of consumption have been found for it in the past few years, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. In addition to these uses, it is an ingredient of peanut and vegetable meats, peanut meal and salad oils.

In the preparation of vegetarian meats a portion of the oil is pressed from the ground peanuts, other ingredients, including vegetable substances, are added and the whole is crushed and pressed into tins ready for use. Peanut meal, made from finely ground blanched peanuts, is used in confections, such as almond macaroons and small cakes, to which it imparts the desired almond flavor. Peanut oil is used in the same manner as olive oil; also for mixing with cotton seed oil in order to improve the quality of the seed oil for salad purposes.

Peanut oil is of somewhat lower value than first-class olive oil, and is sometimes mixed with it for the production of an oil that can be sold at a lower price than pure olive oil. On the other hand, it is of a higher grade than cotton seed oil.

With a coming shortage of cotton seed from which to manufacture oil in this country, there is a great possibility of building up a peanut oil industry throughout the cotton belt that will keep the oil mills flourishing.

A bushel of first-class peanuts, weighing 28 pounds, will produce about one gallon of oil, worth 45c, and 20 pounds of oil cake and hulls, which, when ground and mixed together, is worth approximately 25c. Such peanuts must be obtainable at prices not exceeding 40c a bushel to make the oil industry profitable.

By-products of the peanut are used in the manufacture of feeds for farm stock and dairy cows, and the plant is being largely utilized as forage and as a soil renovator. In large cleaning factories the shells are generally used for fuel, and the ash resulting therefrom is valuable as a fertilizer. The thin brown covering of the peas or nuts has a feeding value almost equal to that of wheat bran.

Says High Cost of Living Due to Gold

Declaring that the public clamor for reduced prices of meat is being made without the support of facts, Professor Joseph French Johnson, of New York University, in a recent address, asserted that beef is cheaper to-day than it was ten years ago.

"The trouble is not that the price of meat has advanced outrageously," Professor Johnson said. "It is simply that money has declined in its purchasing power. Instead of attempting to regulate the price of beef by Government investigation, there should be a regulation of the output of gold.

"Twenty-five years ago the gold output was $125,000,000. Last year it was $450,000,000. It is coined into money. The surplus is loaned and wheat is boomed, cotton is boomed by speculators, and the price goes up. Yet the value of money continues to diminish. It is inevitable that the price of commodities will continue to advance for the next ten years. But this continued advance must bring with it increased wages. While the general advance of prices in the last twelve years has been forty per cent., meat has advanced only twenty per cent. Yet the value of money has not advanced and the purchasing power of the money received as wages is appreciably less."

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, Feb. 3, 1910.

The past week has been one of the quietest for some months past. Trade in all lines has slumped, with the exception of sugar and molasses. There are a few small exceptions to this statement, but they are hardly sufficient to temper it. Fruit men in particular are complaining, but they are seconded by men in nearly every other line. It is thought carnival week, this present week, will have a strengthening influence on most lines, owing to the visitors in the city and the general increase of trade due to any celebration week.

Undoubtedly the changeable weather of the past ten days has had considerable to do with the slump in buying. From present indications cold weather is here now for a more permanent visit, and trade should pick up as a result.

Sugar—Sugar is firm, with a rising tone in the raw market. No immediate drop in the refined article is looked for. Sales are quite heavy, small individually, but collectively the showing is good.

TORONTO—Canned goods in many lines will advance probably 2½c per dozen. This is not as a result of the merger so it is claimed by jobbers but as a usual thing to happen at this time of the year to cover cost of carrying them. The trouble is, 2½c per dozen would mean so little on a single tin that the retailer is apt to pay the difference without raising his selling price. Canned corn is liable to be short as the pack was not extra large. Salmon, particularly the good grades, are splendid holdings as prices are likely to rule firm.

ONTARIO MARKETS

Toronto, February 3, 1910.

The wholesale trade is fairly active here and while payments are a little behind, it is nothing unusual for the month of January. Owing to the feeling of good times more money was spent during the holidays than the people could afford and in consequence the grocers were unable to make the collections to meet their bills.

Sugar—The sugar market has taken a decidedly firm turn this week, which however is the result of speculation, more than any condition of the supply. The general feeling is that sugars will rule higher than for some time, although an immediate raise is not looked for.

Tea—Every tea merchant talks about the strong feeling in the tea market, and yet prices remain about the same. The advance is however noticeable in the lower grades, and this may lead to a larger consumption of better tea, which would be to the advantage of seller and buyer.

Coffee—The coffee trade is no doubt suffering to some extent through the more extensive advertising of tea. With so many firms handling nothing but tea, and with all their forces behind it, coffee must lose some ground.

Evaporated Apples — Dealers in evaporated apples have to take a back seat, but green apples are plentiful and cheap. The unsatisfactory returns from England for green apples have stopped shipments and the local market is more than supplied. This affects the sale of evaporated fruit.

Beans—Beans are now about 40c a bushel higher than when the new crop came in. Whether this is owing to the greater demand for them, or to the fact that farmers are forcing the price to their liking is not quite clear, but it is safe to say that both have something to do with it. However, beans are a strong, nourishing food and perhaps not much too high after all.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Corrected by Wire.

Advances—Walnuts, tapioca, beans, peas.

Weaker—Rolled oats.

Stronger—Canned goods, syrup, coffee, brooms.

Winnipeg, February 3, 1910.

The general trade has taken on its usual briskness after a few weeks of specialty orders following the heavy holiday trade. Merchants have completed their stocktaking and are ordering on their short lines. The continued prospect of advanced markets in many lines has influenced many merchants to buy heavily and as a consequence wholesalers are pressing manufacturers and commission men for large shipments.

At present there are many merchants coming into the city from outside points studying the market conditions in the wholesale houses and laying plans for their spring and summer trade. It is noticeable that only the better class of goods are asked for irrespective of prices and as a result there is destined to be an overstock of some foreign goods which owing to peculiar climatic conditions are not of No. 1 quality. In the future all who are interested in the trade of western Canada will generally find it to their interest to send quality goods, and not worry about prices. The consumer wants them and will have them at any cost. The monetary condition is good and the number of bad debts are rapidly diminishing. Last December, however, some merchants burdened themselves with extreme orders for gift goods and the public spent money freely for goods other than table necessities and as a consequence there is a slight laxity in collections. The condition of the trade, however, warrants the conviction that things will rapidly right themselves in this connection.

Sugar—The advances of the past two weeks have cut off all superflous buying. Smaller orders are coming in and it seems as if grocers were expecting a decline soon. There is nothing to warrant this, however, and although the Canadian market is getting more independent of the United States market, yet much depend upon the New York

Coffee—The arrival of new goods has not tended to lower prices in the least. Green Rios are wholesaleing at 10 to 10½ cents. An advance of about 1 cent next week would not be a surprise.

Evaporated Apples—We are forced to hold these at 8½ to 9½ cents per 50-lb. box this week. Last week they were ½c lower.

Canned Goods—The recent merger is stated to have already affected the western market and higher prices are confidently expected. No two houses have the same quotations just now, but a comprehensive figure will be quoted soon.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 3, 1910.

No material changes have taken place in the market prices since last week. Business has been rather dull on account of the unusually mild weather but it is expected to pick up with the advent of cold weather again. Meat and produce prices still remain high, beef offering at 9 and 10 cents, wholesale. Oranges are plentiful, Valencias selling at $3 to $3.50; California navels, $3 to $3.50; Bahamas, $2.50 to $3, and Floridas, $2.50 to $3, per box. Lemons are quoted at $3, and Almeria grapes, $5 to $6 per keg.

Wholesale dealers say that the weather for the past week or more has been bad for business and coupled with the loss of the snow, will doubtless curtail the consumption of groceries. Sugar remains unchanged in price since the last advance, but outside markets are showing considerable strength and the advice of the best informed sugar people is not to go short on this article, as further advances are likely to be recorded at any time. The drop of 37½c. on pork per bbl. and of ½ cent per lb. on lard, are the most important price changes this week, both these articles having been so high for months that customers have been watching anxiously for their return to reasonable figures.

One of our principal wholesalers, with a twinkle in his eye, stated that some of the lumbering firms have been feeding their crews on turkeys, because at present prices, they were found to be cheaper than pork.

Holders of stocks of beans in Ontario are asking full prices now, and when the present stocks are exhausted in the Maritime Provinces, it is evident that higher prices will be asked.

Dry codfish is quoted at $6 per qtl., and is scarce and difficult to obtain even at that price.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 3, 1910.

Last week saw a plentiful supply of eggs, which will keep the prices down. A couple of weeks ago the wholesalers and commission men were preparing to quote a 35-cent price by February 1st, but their plans did not materialize. The reason is a large supply of ranch eggs is coming in, not only from around Vancouver and the lower mainland, but also from Vancouver Island. It is earlier than usual, but the retailer welcomes them nevertheless, for people are shy of buying when the price is five or six cents each. Choice eastern selected are quoted at 32 and 33 cents, while the fresh ranch are from 40 to 45 cents. Many of the dealers cling to the eastern selected, as they generally know just what they are selling, and can assure the customer on the point, that while the eggs may not be the best, they certainly are not the worst. Few chances are being run. Not so with "fresh ranch eggs." More than one dealer has bought them on the assurance that they were strictly fresh, but later it was found out when a customer complained that some of the eggs were weeks old. Local dealers have fairly heavy stocks of eggs on hand, and commission men would have pulled down good profits had the price gone to 35 cents. As it is, an effort is being made to clear, and a rebate is offered if several cases are taken.

Ashcroft potatoes are quoted at $35, which is a high figure, while other qualities are $25.

Early tomatoes from California show signs of frost, but those from Florida have come through untouched. Cucumbers are here from Illinois and California. Generally, Victoria cucumbers are among the first to arrive, but the hot houses of the capital are late this year.

NO FORMALITIES THERE.

Guelph Merchants Mean Business—President to Outline His Platform.

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 1.—The new officers of the Guelph Retail Merchants' Association elected at the annual meeting last week were:

President—H. Occomore.

1st Vice-President — W. H. Fielding (grocer).

2nd Vice-President—J. C. Kelener.

Secretary—Chas. Reid.

Treasurer—L. E. Rowen.

Executive Committee—G. A. Richardson, Alex. Stewart, G. D. Pringle and R. E. Nelson.

There were no formalities indulged in by the members, even if it were their annual meeting. They did not call upon the retiring officers for remarks, nor did any of the new officers take up any of the time of the meeting by replying to any congratulatory resolutions that might have been passed. H. Occomore, the president-elect, merely thanked his colleagues for the honor conferred upon him in his election to the presidency, and stated that at the next meeting of the association he would outline his policy for the coming year.

Retiring President Nelson, in congratulating his successor, spoke briefly of the work done by the association during the past year, and asked that the members be more regular in their attendance this year than they were last year.

The question of the appointment of an official collector to succeed D. A. Scroggie, who has moved to the west, was discussed. The members present at the meeting felt that while the Guelph association was the father of the official collector scheme, other cities and towns that had since taken it up had perfected their systems to a greater degree. Consequently, it was thought that they should get their system perfected and put on a really first-class business basis. This will be attended to at future meetings.

TRADE NOTES.

H. Hamstra, of H. Hamstra & Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., was in Toronto recently.

The annual dinner of the staff of the Canadian Salt Co., was held at Windsor recently.

W. C. Cross, manager of Hall & Fairweather, wholesale grocers, St. John, N.B., left last week for Montreal and Toronto.

H. W. Wright, of Welland, Ont., has sold his New York restaurant, and will open a new grocery store at Welland in connection with the other grocery stores in Ontario which he controls.

A. Allard, wholesale grocer, Ottawa, was elected by a majority of over 650 to the House of Commons last Saturday. This was to fill the vacancy caused by Sir Wilfrid Laurier's decision to sit for his Quebec constituency.

The Grocer saw an interesting document the other day, in the form of a notification, by the late Queen Victoria, of J. A. Simmers, as German consul at Toronto. It was dated Sept. 14, 1871, and bore the signature "Victoria Regina" as well as the royal seal.

Bovril Ltd., Montreal, have been granted an injunction restraining Metrakos Bros., Montreal, from any further substitution of other fluid beef for Bovril, when the latter was demanded. Metrakos Bros. were also ordered to pay damages to Bovril Ltd., and all of the costs of a judgment against this confectionery firm, as a result of their substituting other products.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

When the "Salada" Tea Co. opened their mail Monday morning, they found orders for six carloads (over seventy thousand pounds) of tea from their United States branches.

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., have received a shipment of English Stilton cheese from the best dairies in England. They are matured and in perfect condition. It will interest the best trade to get particulars. The same company receive regular shipments from France, of the finest Camembert cheese. Stocks always in perfect condition and can be shipped promptly. If you want anything in the line of olives from a ten cent bottle to a hogshead, the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. have attractive prices.

To enable the grocery trade of Canada to try for themselves the "Dainty Dutch Delicacy," the Holland Rusk Co. are offering to send to every dealer a full-sized package of Holland Rusk entirely free of charge. This is a prelude to a general campaign of advertising now being prepared. The idea is that when this advertising commences and the dealers' customers ask for the "Dainty Dutch Delicacy," that has become so popular in Toronto and many other places, he will already have decided to stock at least enough to meet the initial demand.

It is good storekeeping to sell only goods which you know to be reliable and to keep only such goods on your shelves.

All grocers should carry a full stock of Royal Baking Powder.

It gives the greatest satisfaction to customers and pays the grocer a greater profit, pound for pound, than any other baking powder he sells

THE ADULTERATION OF FOODS.

Steps Leading up to Decision to Have Food Standards and Progress of The Work.

In answer to the inquiry of a reader of The Canadian Grocer, the following facts regarding the adulteration of food and the proposed food standards are given which will prove of value to all subscribers :

Canada has been looking after the adulteration of food for at least a third of a century. This duty has been allotted to the Inland Revenue Department and especially to its laboratory branch. The head of this branch is a chief analyst with a staff of assistants at Ottawa. There is also a number of official district analysts. Inspectors from time to time visit the towns and villages of their districts, and collect samples of such articles as may be deemed desirable by the department at Ottawa.

The laboratory of the Inland Revenue issues bulletins at frequent intervals showing the result obtained in their examination of the food stuffs. This, of course, acts as a check on the producers of impure or adulterated goods. At times, also, for gross adulteration punishment is meted out. Such has been the case lately in the case of maple sugar and syrup and butter where heavy fines have been inflicted for the manufacture and sale of adulterated goods. One difficulty has been the lack of standards of purity for many items. Recently it has been decided to make out a set of standards. An advisory board has been appointed consisting of A. McGill, Chief Analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, Dr. W. H. Ellis, School of Practical Science, Toronto, and Dr. J. T. Donald, Montreal. All of these have had large experience in dealing with food products.

The chairman of the board, Mr. McGill, has drafted proposed standards which are to some extent based on the standards of the United States. These proposed standards have been submitted by the Inland Revenue Department direct, and also through the medium of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, to the various manufacturers in the Dominion. These manufacturers have been invited to criticize the proposed standards and to suggest amendments or alterations. The idea of the proposed standards is to produce standards that will protect the consumer and at the same time be fair and just to the manufacturer. The board is engaged on this work of studying the amendments, etc., and gathering further information. It hopes to be able to submit some definite proposal before long, which may form the basis of parliamentary enactment.

BUTTER DECLINE IN NEW YORK.

President of Mercantile Exchange Again Advocates Lessening of Duty on Canadian Butter, Eggs and Cheese.

During the past two weeks the price of butter has dropped some 3 cents per pound on the Mercantile Exchange, New York. This is said to be caused partly by the agitation of the high cost of food products. Heavy shipments from interior points and the inroads which butter substitutes have made are also given as causes for the decline.

"While I do not handle butterine and my trade does not want it, I am willing to admit that the high price for butter has increased the sale of the substitute," said Julius D. Mahr, president of the New York Mercantile Exchange, in an interview. "Prices have undoubtedly advanced beyond normal and the consuming public have either cut down their purchases or taken the substitute.

"In my inaugural address as the incoming president of the Exchange, I called particular attention to the fact that this locality is calling loudly for butter, eggs and cheese which might be supplied from Canada at prices much less than are current now in case the existing tariff duty is removed.

"There are plenty of dairy products knocking at our door on the Canadian border and under present conditions it looks as though there should be a modification of our tariff laws which will allow them to come here without being compelled to pay what is practically a prohibitive duty."

TO SELL EGGS BY WEIGHT.

And Other Goods as Well—Toledo Merchants Begin New System.

Beginning last Monday the grocers and butchers of Toledo, O., U.S.A., inaugurated a new selling system whereby the measure has been laid by in favor of the scale. They declare that the system of selling by measure has been outgrown by modern business conditions. Fair and equitable dealing in bulk commodities, they say, can be insured only through selling by weight. After several years of discussion and investigation, they have put their sales on a weight basis, and leave it to the fairmindedness of the public to approve of the system. The principal articles heretofore sold by measure, and which will be hereafter sold by weight, are oysters, nuts, beans, apples, berries, potatoes and other fruits and vegetables whose bulk and quality, they claim have lent themselves to dishonest practices.

Eggs will also be sold by weight. Eggs at 40 cents per dozen, the grocers say, is equivalent to 28 cents per pound, as one dozen eggs of marketable size weigh about 1½ pounds. To show the comparison between the measure and weight system, the dealers point out that two pounds of oysters will equal one quart, one pound of sauer kraut will make two quarts, while beans at 7 cents a pound will equal 10 cents a quart. A pound is a pound the world over, they argue, and the grocer knows what he is selling and the housewife knows that she is getting just what she pays for.

If you have a line of goods that is not moving, consult the people from whom you bought them. They have helped others to make their goods sell, and they can help you.

WANTS RECOGNIZED MARKET DAY

Editor Canadian Grocer,—It has often occurred to the writer that the time has come for the wholesale provision and produce merchants and the jobbers of Front Street to have a stipulated market day. I believe this would work for the mutual benefit of the wholesale and retail trade. As most people know, this is done in several of the large centres in England, and as Toronto has grown to be so large a city and is considered the principal centre of distribution for Ontario, I think it would be a great idea to take the lead in this matter.

A good idea would be to arrange for Wednesday, this being a half-holiday in the summer time for the retailers, when they could slip down, say for a couple of hours, and do all they had to do, picking out their own butter, cheese, etc., and also, calling in on the jobbers' salesmen would, no doubt, see several lines that would interest them that a traveler cannot conveniently carry. Then, having seen the goods and bought them, the retailer would have only himself to blame if they did not turn out satisfactorily.

To carry out this idea there is no need to have a market building. The wholesalers could simply keep their city salesmen about the warehouse on the market day to see their retail friends as they walk around Front Street. Then, as the idea grew, the flour and feed men would, no doubt, like to be in the same run, also several of the manufacturers connected with the trade would be glad to display their products. Therefore, what is to hinder their arranging to take the north side of the St. Lawrence market, where during mid-week there is nothing done, and no doubt arrangements could be made to have tables, etc., for displaying their goods. Of course, this is only a suggestion and I should be pleased to hear from some of our friends in the trade in regard to the matter.

W. H. WILSON.

BUSINESS LEGAL DECISION.

A legal action of much interest to business men as showing the importance of registering new companies and partnerships was the case of Croysdill vs. The Crescent Turkish Bath Co., Montreal, heard before the Superior Court of Quebec, sitting at Montreal. The plaintiff acting as well in his own name as in the name of His Majesty the King sues the defendant company and claims from them the penalty of $400 provided for in Article 4750 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec. The charge against the defendants is that they have failed to register their name and business as they were bound to do under the law. In dismissing the case the judge said that the company failed soon after being incorporated, but that had the defendants been sued or action entered after the 60 days allowed to register and before the time of failure the decision might have been different. The company was incorporated in November, 1906, and failed in January, 1907. The present action was not taken until October, 1908.

Declines in Both Live and Dressed Hogs this Week

More on the Market Than Usual — Packers Still Have Difficulty in Getting Enough—Egg Market Shows Weakness — Comparatively Mild Weather Increases Receipts of New Laids —Butter Situation Losing Strength.

The provision trade on the whole from our view point is in a fairly healthy condition. There is evidently no surplus of any large quantities of any line on the hands of dealers. Cured meats find a ready sale in our own markets, at prices above the English quotations.

Cheese is in good demand, and holders are expecting an advance. Butter is overly plentiful, but the stocks which are held are not heavy to carry, and are expected to be all wanted before the spring butter comes in.

Eggs are in good shape and are likely to measure out all right at the end of the winter season to make room for the incoming stocks.

The drop in butter on the United States markets has no effect on our prices here. Prices of butter in England are irregular. Danish butter is offered at a reduction, in order to meet the strong competition from Australia and new Zealand. Canadian butter is practically off the market in England at present, and must depend on our home market for its demand.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Live and dressed hogs are down, the former to $8.50 to $8.75, and the latter to $12.75. A large influx of hogs is the cause of the drop. No changes have taken place in other lines but may in the near future if conditions do not change.

Honey.—There seems to be an increase in the demand for white clover comb, and as a result prices are up 2 cents for first grade goods. Extracted buckwheat is slightly easier. Demand for all lines is steady, and very good for this time of year.

Provisions.—The difficulty still remains even in spite of the effort to abstain from eating meat, to get the supplies to meet the demand. Formerly it took the best men to sell the goods but now it takes the best men to get the stuff. The price of hogs however this week is from 10c to 15c., live weight and from 50c to 75c per 100 lbs. dressed, lower than last week. Lard is ½c a lb. lower, but all the other lines remain unchanged.

Butter.—The butter receipts are increasing from week to week and the supply of fresh made butter is exceeding the demand. In consequence of this the market is weakening, and to keep it from accumulating, lower prices are accepted. On the whole, dairy butter may be quoted say 2c a lb. lower this week.

Cheese.—The cheese market is in a healthy condition. The stocks are not heavy, and sales are easily made at a slight advance. There is no danger of having to carry a surplus over the year. In consequence of the high price of meat grocers have still a good talking point in pushing the sale of cheese. It is still below its value compared with other foods.

Cheese, new, large	0 12½ 0 12¾

Eggs.—The continuous mild weather will certainly have its effect on the egg market. New laid eggs are coming in more freely, but with them are still mixed stock, that has been held by farmers, and which are not equal to cold storage eggs. There is some chance of an excuse when stale eggs come in, in the summer time, but when old eggs come in with what are sold as new laid eggs at this time of the year it is a down-right fraud, and farmers who are guilty should be severely punished.

PERSONAL NOTES.

John Arendshorst, of the Holland Rusk Co., Holland, Mich., called at the Toronto office of The Grocer during the week.

Jas. H. Lockhart, a man familiar with the grocery trade in Toronto for many years, died suddenly during the week. For a long time he was with Michie & Co., and later with the Robt. Simpson Company.

Kenneth K. Simpson, for 4 years manager of Gunns Limited, commission house, Front Street, Toronto, and for 9 years in the employ of the company has gone to Winnipeg to enter business in partnership with G. W. Prout. Before leaving he was tendered a banquet by his former associates and was the recipient of a number of gifts. He is succeded by Harper R. Gray, formerly with Gunn & Langlois, Montreal.

An English Idea of the Canadian Bacon Situation

Provision Dealer in Bradford, England, Understands that Canada Exports to the United States—Advises Canada to Take the Place Vacated by the United States in Supplying the English Demand.

James Isitt, of Geo. Isitt & Sons, provision dealers, Bradford, England, has a few wrong ideas with regard to the hog and bacon situation in Canada. He writes as follows to "Canada" :

"It occurs to me that the following information with regard to the bacon supply in England, might interest your Canadian readers, and might also be the means of my gaining some idea of the prospects of the supply from Canada for the coming year.

"You will, no doubt, be aware that there has been practically a famine in pigs in this country, during last year, and prices have ruled higher than they have done for the last forty years. This has been caused, not only by a great shortage of pigs on this side, but more especially by the short supply from the United States, owing to the high price of feeding stuff, maize, etc., and to the fact that the increased population in the United States consumes more bacon. We are given to understand that there will never be the plentiful supply of bacon from the United States that there has been in former years.

"This means that, if we are to have cheaper bacon, we must look for another source of supply to take the United States place and, to my mind it all points to Canada. But this year they have failed us badly ; instead of increasing their exports they have actually shipped less, and in fact I know of one or two curing houses that have shut down and stopped supplies altogether. So that for the last six months there has been little or no Canadian bacon on the English market.

"We are given to understand that one reason for this is that they have been sending it over to the United States instead of to England. Is this so ?

"There is no doubt whatever, that if Canadians would only turn their attention to pig raising they could take the place of United States in the supply for this country, especially if they would adopt the United States lines of cutting the bacon up into : square cut, shoulders, Yorkshire cut, Cumberland cut, sides, ribless bellies, short, and long cut hams.

"The question is, are they alive to the advantages, and will they follow it up on a large scale, for as I have said the prospect is most promising. We can never hope to produce anything like the quantity wanted in this country and the trade is fast passing into the hands of Denmark and Sweden as the butter trade has done."

No Bacon Goes to U. S.

From Mr. Isitt's letter it will be observed that he is not familiar with the situation on this side of the Atlantic.

No doubt there is a great shortage in the supply of hogs in the Old Country and in the United States, but the same applies to Canada. There does not appear to be much consolation in looking to Canada to replace the United States on the English market. The supply of hogs in Canada is not adequate. The result is, the prices to farmers have gone up so greatly during the last year or two, that packers cannot afford to purchase them and compete with the prices of Danish bacon in England. And again they cannot get the hogs because the Canadian farmers are not raising them. These are the reasons why Canada shipped less bacon to the English market in 1909 than she did in 1908 or 1907, as was shown by figures in last week's issue of The Grocer.

The reason given that it is because Canada is sending her bacon to the United States is without foundation. Canada scarcely exports a pound to the United States, while on the other hand government statistics show that a great deal of United States hog products come to Canada—not so much last year as in 1908, however.

Exporters of Canadian bacon to the Old Country do make the cuts referred to in the above letter.

The whole question now rests with the producers. If more hogs are raised, Canada will be in a better position to supply the demand referred to by Mr. Isitt.

Likelihood of Cereal Prices Making an Advance

Millers Busy on Small Margins—Flour Prices Firm With no Immediate Chance of a Decline — Wheat Being Purchased More Freely.

The millers are busy and begin to feel that the state of the markets warrant a higher price for flour. They had the idea that wheat would decline and with this expectation they worked on a narrow margin. Now, since they have abandoned the notion of lower wheat prices, they think they are entitled to better profits.

The situation on the whole has a wholesome outlook from a miller's standpoint. It is a settled matter that the exports from Argentine will be con- in export, so millers feel well satisfied a firmer feeling in the markets of the world.

With nothing to look for that can in any way seriously affect the prices until next summer, it is supposed that the market will move smoothly without much change for some time.

A partnership has been formed in Montreal, between W. E. Forbes and J. A. Nadeau, who will do business as Forbes & Nadeau, brokers and commission merchants. Mr. Forbes has for several years past been manufacturing Bee Brand grocery specialties, and has been doing a commission business for several large manufacturers in Canada and abroad. Mr. Nadeau was on the staff of Watt, Scott & Goodacre during three years past, latterly as their special representative in Montreal City and Quebec. Before that time he was for nine years with Hudon & Orsali, wholesale grocers, leaving them when he had attained the position of a buyer. It is the intention of the new firm to continue manufacturing, as well as to do a general brokerage and commission business. Their office headuarters will be at 449 St. Paul Street.

BETWEEN you and me and the bedpost, Brother Grocer, who really was the Wiseheimer that said: "Nothing great was ever done without Enthusiasm?" ¶ Introduce me. I want to shake hands. ¶ I've been thinking about it pretty hard these days and re-discovered that self-same fact anew. ¶ But bide a wee, who is it makes most sales in YOUR shop? Isn't it the fellow who's so chuck full of Enthusiasm that it fairly oozes out of his hide? ¶ Enthusiasm, you know, is just real Faith, Belief in what you sell. Then it's so contagious, Brother Grocer. ¶ Customers don't get away from Thomas until he's through with his spiel, and when he's through so is the desire to buy elsewhere. ¶ But take away his faith in your goods, what's left, Brother Grocer? Just Thomas, plain Thomas, and a glum-looking Thomas is he. Just an "ornery" every-day order-taker, NOT a salesman, goodness no.

FIVE ROSES FLOUR

Plus Quality, what does Thomas find in FIVE ROSES flour? Red hot Enthusiasm—Faith, Belief. ¶ He'll make twice as many sales. With less labor and time lost. ¶ For, Brother Grocer, every new convert on her return trip gives him new talking points, new success hints. He's forearmed, re-stocked with fresh "ginger" to tackle Mrs. Next One. ¶ Don't let his enthusiasm grow cold—feed it with good flour—keep it at blood-heat. ¶ For Bigger Business, Brother Grocer, here's a tested recipe: FIVE ROSES flour first of all, of course; a live salesman not too fresh, salary to suit, add a pinch of the aforesaid Enthusiasm, stir gently, set in a warm place to increase sales. When desired volume is attained, pocket the profits and invite your enemy's customers. ¶ Why, Brother Grocer, it's an insult to your intelligence to point the moral.

MAKERS OF FIVE ROSES

The Relation of Advertising to the Traveler

Gives Him a Vantage Ground and Arms Him With Convincing Arguments—Its Operation on the Mind of the Merchant—Advertising Co-operation makes Work of the Traveler Lighter.

By J. Walter Thompson, President of J. Walter Thompson Company, New York.

The easiest way in which to realize the relationship of advertising to the work of the commercial traveler is mentally to eliminate the advertising and decide whether the traveler is a gainer or a loser thereby.

At one stride we go back to the days of the bagman and the bellman; the bagman driving his gig from town to town, and the bellman lugubriously reading at street corner and market cross the announcement of some local merchant.

It is only when we suggest the elimination of advertising that we realize to how great an extent advertising is news, that it is full of human interest, a running record of human progress, a chronicle of the ramifications of civilization. So essential is advertising to the comfort, welfare and progress of the people at large that were it possible that all magazines and periodicals should unite to discontinue the printing of advertisements, it would become absolutely necessary to print magazines that were all advertising, and such magazines would be even more eagerly bought by the general public than the periodicals devoted to pure literature.

It is because people read advertisements and are influenced by them that they bear an important relation to the work of the commercial traveler. The purpose of advertising is to create a demand for the wares advertised. The work of the salesman is to supply the merchant with the wares to meet the demand created. In as far as advertising accomplishes its purpose and creates a demand for advertised articles, in so far will the work of the salesman be anticipated, and his orders increased.

General advertising introduces an article to the public, familiarizes people with its qualities, explains its merits and gradually educates the consumer to a desire for the article advertised. Without this preliminary work the merchant handling the goods would have to do the educating, and as he himself would have to be taught, the work of salesmanship would be vastly increased and the amount of sales greatly lessened.

These conditions are so well understood that many merchants prepare a prospectus of their advertising campaign, have proof-sheets made of the series of advertisements which they intend to use, showing size of space, style of type, character of argument, etc. With this in hand the commercial traveler calls on the retailer and finds it easy to convince him that he can afford to buy a good bill of the goods, which are so effectively advertised in magazines and periodicals that are read by his customers in common with the rest of the reading population.

Take a concrete example of the dependence of salesmanship upon advertising: The Prudential Insurance Company of America has by advertising so familiarized the entire population of the United States with its strength and reliability that it would be practically impossible to name life insurance without thinking of the Prudential. Suppose all this advertising were withdrawn; suppose that all the influence of past advertising could be wiped out; what would be the effect on the business of the Company's salesmen or agents? It would practically put them out of business. It would close the offices of all the more important agents. It would necessitate a new beginning on an entirely new basis for company and salesmen alike.

In all cases advertising is just as much an essential factor in salesmanship as in the case cited. The relationship may not be so strikingly apparent, but it exists, and the mere discontinuance of advertising in the present, without losing the benefit of the advertising momentum of the past, would be soon apparent in a rapid falling off of sales, no matter how skilled and successful the salesmen employed to push the goods.

There is another phase of this relation of advertising to the commercial traveler—it protects him from what may be termed piratical competition. The advertising of a trade-marked article makes it impossible that a salesman with a similar article, unadvertised, can make a sale for that article on any ordinary plea of quality or price. If he could prove his article to be "just as good," it would be minus the advertising, minus the popularized trademark, and therefore minus the patronage already created for the advertised article.

Advertising creates public confidence. Your advertiser has a local habitation and a name, he nails his colors to the mast, you know who he is and where to find him. The American public generally appreciates that big money can't be spent on advertising to catch one sucker to make one sale. Advertising to pay must make partisans, it must make steadfast customers, and to do that the goods advertised must be in quality and quantity all they are represented or even more than that. This fact roots in the retailer's mind also. He is bound to reflect the mental attitude of the consumer, and that mental attitude recognizes that the man who sells well advertised goods has a claim on his time and attention that does not belong to the salesman who offers goods unadvertised, and leaves the burden of distribution entirely with the merchant who buys the goods.

The relation of advertising to the work of the commercial traveler is therefore most intimate and valuable. It gives him a vantage ground, it arms him with convincing arguments, it operates beforehand on the mind of the merchant which he must influence and convince before he can hope to sell a bill of goods. Without this assistance his work must be increased, and his sales would be inevitably lighter and fewer than they are with advertising co-operation.

Trouble Over Auctioning Apples in Montreal

Retailers Losing Trade—Many Apples on the Toronto Market —New Vegetables Coming on the Market—Firm Fish Prices, With Good Lenten Demand in Sight.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—A large shipment of Messina bitter oranges has arrived, and they show first-class quality. As to apples, dealers say some change will have to be made in the present auction rules. Lots of one to five barrels can be bought, and are bought, direct by consumers, thus cutting off many sales from the dealers. The remedy suggested was increasing the minimum quantity purchasable until it is more than a consumer cares to take. In general the market is dull.

Vegetables—Changeable weather has had a lot to do with the present dull state of the market. Dealers admit it is much worse in this respect than last year. Stocks are being allowed to run low. Prices are unchanged, but show signs of weakness.

Fish—Trade is active and prices are advancing. The prospect of a movement in sympathy with the United States anti-beef eaters has stimulated the market and put fish in the public eye as a food necessity more than ever. When some lines of good fish can be sold wholesale at 2c and 3c per lb., it is no wonder that the demand should increase considerably. Lent is close at hand, so the market must show substantial advances in all lines. The first car of Newfoundland herring is on the market, and show 55 lbs. per 100 fish. If the weather remains cold Tommy cods will come down from spawning and lower prices in this line will result. There is the usual demand for salt fish at this season, at firm but unchanged prices.

TORONTO.

Green Fruit—On account of the mild weather and good roads the farmers are driving in long distances with produce of all kinds, and scarcely one arrives without several barrels of apples. Vegetables—The vegetable market is quiet. Although almost everything in the vegetable line is representative, there is no special rush in anything. Potatoes have stood at the same mark for some time, with nothing to move them in sight. California celery is plentiful. Hot-house rhubarb looks summer-like. New potatoes at $8.50 a barrel have the appearance of having made a mistake in coming here at this season of the year to compete with ours at 65c a bag.

BIG SALMON CONSUMERS.

British Market Takes a Lot From Western Coast of North America—Imports in Recent Years.

Henry W. Peabody & Co., London, Eng., in their annual report of the salmon market iu Great Britain for the year 1909, give some interesting information. The year opened with a carry-over of about 80,000 cases of ½-lb. flats and with a light stock of 1-lb. flats and 1-lb. talls.

A clause in the report reads:—British Columbia packers seem to have lost sight of the fact that if they refused to sell they were in danger of allowing the Puget Sound packers to unload a large quantity of their salmon on this market, and it certainly was unfortunate for British Columbia that, when sales were being made fairly freely at $5.75 for talls, $6 for flats, and $7.35 for ½ flats, the Puget Sound packers should offer a large quantity of their output at prices considerably below the English equivalent to the British Columbia prices. In some cases these prices were not actually lower in currency, but the Puget Sound packers figured on a discount of 1½ per cent., and a commission of 5 per cent., together with a draw-

It appears, however, that the quantity packed from the 15th to 20th September was satisfactory in quality, while that which was packed after that date is most undesirable.

TO DETECT FROSTED ORANGES.

Frozen on the Tree and Become Puffy—Cannot Tell From the Rind.

There is considerable trouble in the orange trade, and the cause of it is interesting. Those who are buying oranges will find a great difference in flavor and richness in the quality, even in the same varieties. This is the result of "frosted fruit," but most people are under the impression that they were damaged by frost during transit, and are looking on the outside to see whether they are free from it. This is, however, not the trouble. This year they had frost where the oranges grow, and this has the effect of driving the juice from the oranges back into the tree, which makes them light, puffy, and undesirable. As the grocers themselves are not able to pick out all that were touched, some damaged fruit gets mixed more or less with that which is supposed to be uninjured. Wholesale houses, however, are careful, and are doing their best to give the retailers good fruit, and in a short time the trouble will disappear.

TRADE NOTES.

The Montreal Industrial Co-operative Co., Montreal, has assigned to J. McD. Hains.

J. E. Little, who for some time was a salesman in the grocery department of the Wm. Beatty Company's store, Parry Sound, Ont., has been engaged by L. L. Barber, Essex, Ont., to manage his grocery department.

Hagerman & Baird, general merchants, of Hartland, N. B., have dissolved partnership, Frank Hagerman retiring. A new partnership has been formed by Woodford C. Craig and Arthur L. Baird, under the name of Baird & Craig, to carry on the business.

Harold N. Hill, Valleyfield, Que., and D. N. O'Byrne, Rockland, Ont., have gone out on the road for the Dominion Register Co., the former to the Eastern Townships, Quebec, and the latter to western Canada, with headquarters at Moose Jaw.

The last Appraisers' Bulletin, No. 374, issued by the Commissioner of Customs, Ottawa, refers to a tariff decision on "beef tongue, cooked, pressed, in form of blocks, wrapped in paper, and packed in wooden case," fixing the tariff at 17½ per cent. British preferential, and 27½ per cent. general tariff.

Robert Christie, an old country Scotchman, who came to Canada about a year ago with a view to locating a fish-curing factory in a centre where fish are readily procured, has now in operation a factory, wherein Canadian fish are being cured by the Scotch method, which is unique. Although the firm recently suffered considerable loss by fire, they are now in shape again.

Visitors to New Brunswick for some time back, writes the St. John correspondent, have been predicting that the east would experience a boom as a result of the increasing population of the west, inasmuch as the east would be the manufacturing portion of the Dominion, while the west would be the granary. This prediction seems to be working out for factories in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia have been steadily increasing their market in the west, until now the business has grown to respectable proportions.

To the Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh and clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clean money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

Advice of a St. John, N. B., Salesman on Giving the Shelf its Proper Deserts—Old Goods Should be Brought Forward—Keep Shelves Replenished—The Results of Indifference.

By W. E. Hopper.

In conversation with a grocery salesman in a St. John, N.B., store recently, he referred to the importance of keeping the shelves well stocked at all times. "I had that drilled into me more than anything else in the first few years I was in the business," he said. "It would quite often happen that a customer would come in for a tin or a package of something, and the proprietor, on going to get it, would find there was none on the shelves, though we would have plenty in the stockroom.

"'You can't expect to sell goods in the cellar or upstairs,' he would say. 'You must keep them where people can see them.' I soon come to see that he was right, and if you look over our shelves any time now you will find them well stocked.

"In opening up new goods we invariably pile them at the back of the shelves so that the older stock will be sold first, and when a tin, package or bottle is taken out, we pull another one from the back so that the shelves always look uniformly neat and full."

This implied advice of the retail salesman is worth while considering. Salesmen in the store have a hundred and one things to look after, and if they do their duties faithfully they will be successful merchants.

Is a Common Trouble.

Ask a merchant what is the chief complaint he has against his salesmen and he usually refers to their lack of interest in watching the goods on the shelves—seeing that the shelves are well stocked and in placing new goods to the rear in order that the old may be sold off first. Many salesmen have, of course, realized the necessity of attending to this, but there are others—the disinterested sort—who apparently do not seem to try to take the advice. Even some merchants themselves become indifferent, and indifference is certainly contagious. It not only spreads to employes, but when once it masters the merchant or salesman in one thing it soon begins to take effect on other things as well.

Thus, if the salesman neglects the shelf, he will soon neglect the floor, the fittings and the bookkeeping.

The care of the shelf is important, because it either makes or loses money. If it is properly attended to, replenished at the proper time, old goods sold first, it is sure to be an asset. On the other hand, if a customer has to wait while a salesman runs down cellar for a can of beans or a bottle of preserves, that customer will not form a favorable impression towards that store. Neither will she, if she purchases a stale package of tea that has been shoved to the back of the shelf every time a new stock was laid in during the six months previous.

Store salesmen should make it a point to see that the shelf gets its deserved attention, for much depends on it—much that possibly cannot be directly traceable to it, but nevertheless exists.

ROBBERS TWO DAYS LATE.

A daring robbery was perpetrated on the five drivers of Rutherford & Marshall, produce wholesalers, at the barns of that company, on Pembroke Street, Toronto, on Thursday morning last. The drivers go down to the barns at intervals of about twenty minutes apart, and as each man entered the barn he was held up by two masked men, armed with revolvers, relieved of his money, bound and tossed into the hay mow. The employes did not usually hand in the firm's money at night, but in the morning, when they came to work. One man lost $160, and altogether the robbers got $200—$50 belonging to the men and $150 to the company. Had the hold-up taken place on Tuesday morning some $1,500 would have been obtained.

WILL IT PAY?

This is the first question that is asked by any merchant when considering the purchase of modern store fixtures. The fundamental question is one of

ECONOMY.

A device is economical if

It adds cleanliness,
It is a convenience,
It makes labor lighter,
It makes labor more efficient,
It reduces the labor item,
It saves time,
It adds safety,
It adds neatness.
It helps the appearance.

IT SAVES MONEY.

Considered from these standpoints the

BOWSER

Self-Measuring Oil System is the greatest economy.

The question is not "Can I afford it?" because it will pay for itself with money that was before wasted. It's simply up to you to investigate. The merchant who tries to see how much he can really get by adopting modern methods is the one who pulls the largest trade.

WARNING!

Your profits are in danger, Mr. Grocer, unless your credit customers pay up. And you can't jump on them "rough shod," because that will drive them away entirely. The safe way is to use.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

They systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10 — No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the hook is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another hook. No pass hooks, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For Sale by the Jobbing Trade Everywhere.

Opening New Accounts

Your business will not grow unless you do add new customers constantly. The old ones will drop out with surprising regularity and those that remain will not increase their purchases materially.

Have a good live talk about your goods in THE GROCER every week. All the best grocers in Canada will read it, and if what you say is worth while, they'll steadily be influenced in your favor.

You will find THE GROCER the most powerful agent at your disposal in the cultivation of new accounts.

Sardines That Sell

are those that have a guarantee on each tin!

Concord Norwegian Sardines are finest small autumn fish only, packed, when freshly caught, in high-grade oil. Each tin is provided with an extra cover for use after it has been once opened. The care given in selection and packing has retained the natural delicate flavor of the fish in a remarkable degree. Order from any wholesale grocer, and don't forget the name CONCORD.

WARNING!

Crescent BM&Co. Brand
TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

"Shell" Soap

Bramwell's Epsom Salts show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package. They are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

"Bramwell's"

Epsom Salts

Pastacaldi's Peel is prepared from the finest Corsican Citrons and you get what you pay for every time. No excess of sugar, but highest quality selected peel—drained. Pastacaldi's name on every box.

Grocers of Canada Thank You!!!

We appreciate your co-operation in making our advertising campaign to the consumer a success.

Honestly, we feel almost timid about stating in this bold way the fact that a campaign begun so few months ago is a success---but really it is.

Pure Gold Products

have won their way to the hearts of consumers. First they bought---then they bought again and still are buying. You have had that experience with the goods---at least, so many grocers have written us.

You gentlemen have helped us to this quick success by putting the goods in stock either at our request or that of your customers. Thank you.

There may be some who have been slow in doing this---their reasons undoubtedly were good. We look forward to supplying them later when their judgment dictates this profit making step.

May we suggest to those who have delayed, that putting Pure Gold goods in stock is no risk. We ship the goods. If they prove unsatisfactory either from a selling standpoint or a quality standpoint, all in the world the grocer has to do is to return the unsold goods and get his money back--every penny of it.

If you don't carry the goods now write for information and a salesman's call (should you wish it).

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped from Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

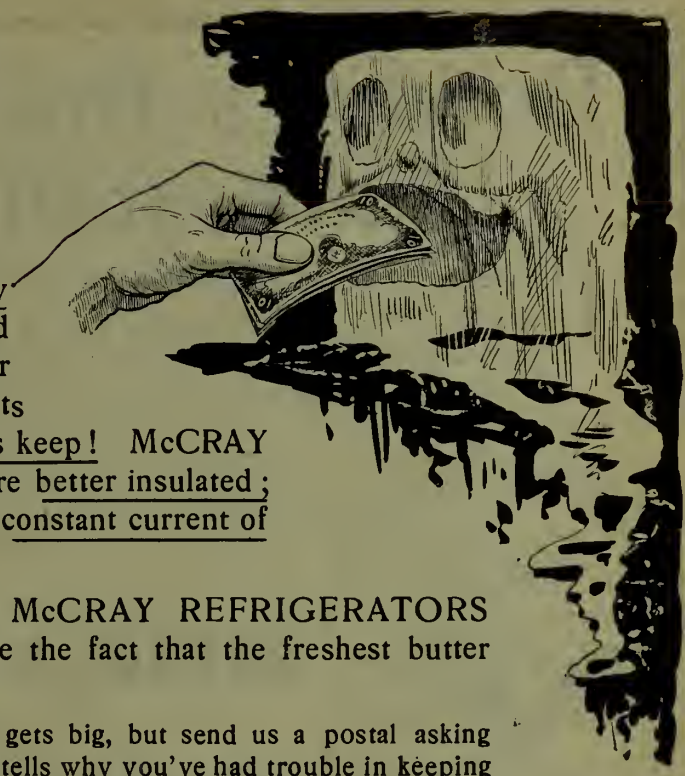
How much money will you put into Ice this Summer ?



The answer is easy—unless you install a McCray Refrigerator, your ice bill will be bigger than it should be. Trying to preserve perishable goods in a poor refrigerator means spending most of the profits on those goods for ice. And the goods don't always keep! McCRAY REFRIGERATORS use less ice, because they are better insulated; and refrigerate perfectly, because they keep up a constant current of chilled air as long as there is any ice left.

Besides preserving their contents perfectly, McCRAY REFRIGERATORS increase sales because your customers will advertise the fact that the freshest butter and cheese, berries, etc., come from your store.

Don't wait until the weather gets warm and the ice bill gets big, but send us a postal asking for our "Refrigerator Catalogue No. 66." This catalogue tells why you've had trouble in keeping butter, cheese, berries, prepared meats, etc., and how you can avoid all trouble. It is especially written for grocers. Send a postal for the catalogue while you think of it.

The Government's Opinion of Our Factory Is Well Worth Considering—

Here is what the Dominion Government Inspector of Canned Fruits and Vegetables had to say about our factory—as reported in the St. John Standard of Wednesday, December 22nd, 1909:

> "———found everything in excellent shape. He "said that they were doing a very good business "and that the class of canned goods put up was "of the best quality."

It is in this factory that BOSTON BAKED BEANS and BALAKLAVA BRAND SARDINES are packed.

Some talking points for your use in selling Holland Rusk (The Dainty Dutch Delicacy)

Holland Rusk is the only food made that is good for breakfast—lunch—dinner—supper and every hour between, in a hundred different ways, "Just as it comes" without any preparation.

It's a Dainty Dutch Delicacy and good all day.

Men like it better than anything else ever put out in the food line. Children pass by many breakfast foods and ask for it three times a day.

Holland Rusk can be eaten as a milk or cream toast, or dipped in coffee, tea or chocolate—as a relish—as a rarebit—with Lobster Newburg—or Finnan Haddie—or Minced Chicken—with your favorite beverage—with cheese—poached egg—in a hundred different forms.

A pleasing substitute for heavy biscuits or rolls.

Holland Rusk is made of eggs, milk, sugar and Dutch Skill with Dutch Secrets.

There's only one Holland Rusk in America.

Our offer, to send a full-sized package of Holland Rusk to any grocer in Canada as a sample, still stands.

What interests you most as a grocer is that HOLLAND RUSK IS A SELLER. It has proved to be in 700 Toronto stores, and wherever else it has been introduced. It pays a profit which makes it worth your while to talk it to your customers.

It does matter a great deal what kind of a refrigerator you use. For they don't all refrigerate alike.

There are many good reasons why your refrigerator should be an ARCTIC.

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

Part Played by Farm Products in High Cost of Living

Careful Resume of Files Show That in February 1910 Prices on the Whole Were Higher Than During Previous Eight Years—Increases Nearly all in Canadian Farm Products and are Due Chiefly to Shortages—Why Hog Products, Beans and Flour are Dear.

Talk of high prices is still in the air. The general public, who are readers of the daily press, are being led to believe so many different reasons for the high cost of living that it is difficult for them to form any definite conclusion.

The retailer has been blamed by many; others censure alleged 'combines' among manufacturers, but few attribute any of the higher cost to supply and demand. If this latter phase of the question is gone into, it will be seen that the production of farm products plays a prominent part in the increase in cost of some of the table necessities.

In the table below, the prices of 51 articles sold over the grocery counter are given. They range over a period of 9 years, beginning with 1902, the prices being taken from the files of The Canadian Grocer. They were the prices prevailing on these articles during the first week in February of each year, are the standard wholesale prices to the retail trade in Toronto, and are guaranteed correct.

From this table it will be observed that there is not a great deal of difference in the cost of these goods during February of the different years.

For instance between 1910 and 1909 there was an increase of only about $2.50. The year in which prices were, on the whole, the lowest was 1904, the present year being an increase over it of $17.85.

Now let us examine the costs of the various articles and determine wherein this difference lies.

In the case of long clear bacon there in an increase of 6 cents per lb. in 1910 over 1904; in roll bacon it is 4½c; in breakfast bacon 5c; in back bacon 5½c; in heavy mess pork $10.50 per cwt.; in lard 8c per lb.; in dressed hogs $5.80; in creamery butter 7c; dairy butter 7c; chickens 6c; turkeys 5c; granulated sugar 92c; and in beans 75c per bushel.

Part Played by Farm Products.

This totalled, comes to $18.56, and there you have the cause of the $17.85 increase—all the products of the farm. If the remaining articles are closely followed, there will be an occasional change noticed, but on the whole the prices are practically the same.

The only conclusion to which one is forced to come is that the prices of farm products are almost entirely responsible for any increase in the cost of living.

The same conclusion will be reached if the years 1910 and 1909 are compared—the increase this year over last is due to Canadian farm products.

There is no necessity here in going into the advances made on hogs and hog products. Everyone knows there is a world-wide scarcity of raw material. The farmers are not paying as much attention to the hog industry as formerly and those who are, are getting big money for what they raise.

With respect to granulated sugar any advance or decline originates with the supply and demand—or more properly the estimated supply and demand—in the primary markets. The Canadian market is to a very great extent governed by the New York market. So far as the advance in sugar of 92c since 1904 is concerned, the retailer's profits have not increased. In 1905 sugar was quoted at $5.83, almost a dollar more than in 1910.

There are many who consider new laid eggs have been excessively high this year in comparison with others, but a glance at the table shows very little difference during the past 9 years. In fact, in February, 1904, they were 7c dearer to the trade than they were last week.

Horseshoe salmon is the same price as in 1909, but 10 cents per dozen dearer than in 1908. Supply and demand reg-nlates this. Canned peas are high this year, because the crop was short.

Regulated by Supply.

Apples and potatoes are cheaper this year than usual, because there was a good supply of both. If the same could be said of hog products, salmon, etc., they would be cheaper too.

With respect to imported fruits, they are generally cheaper; few changes occur in spices and vegetables.

Flour is dearer this year, because the price of wheat to the farmer is higher. Beans are up for the reason that the farmer is holding on to his supply, and the demand is good.

From the above facts and figures it should be plain why there has been any advance in the cost of living this year over previous years—the farmer evidently holds the key to the situation.

It is a significant fact that many of the young men of the farms are leaving and crowding into the cities. Can this be the cause of the lesser production? If so the educational campaign to "keep the boys on the farm" should be waged more vigororously and probably in a few years' time, things would be back to their normal condition again.

SPECIALIZES ON TWO TEAS.

Reasons Why a Hartford, Ont., Merchant Sells Only the Two Kinds.

By R. J. Thomas.

We only sell two kinds of tea in our store. In the first place we make a specialty of our 30c. Japan. Our Indian customers are large users of tea, and they prefer a good Japan. I have tried them with a blend of Ceylon green and Japan, and clear Ceylon, but good Japan seems to suit them best.

The white customers are about evenly divided between our 30 cent Japan and a package tea.

We are seldom asked for a higher priced tea, and not often for a 25c line.

The package tea trade we have worked down to one kind, at 25c. This one was the first we stocked. We have tried 3 or 4 others since, but this one has outlived them all, with no special advertising. The others have been sampled and personal letters have been written, etc., but the customers still prefer the first choice. We have always managed to sell out the other kinds, and when we find a tea a drag, we do not stock it again. We have even given some teas the second trial but it was of no use.

In looking back over our tea business, I think we have been wise in educating our customers to the two lines. It has been an education both ways; and I think it could be applied to other lines as well.

It is a great satisfaction at stocktaking time to not find a lot of unsalable goods filling the shelves, or perhaps shoved back out of sight.

Stock of H. O. Smith, general merchant, Marquette, Man., has been sold to Mrs. H. O. Smith.

Is Your Clerk Worth the Salary He is Receiving?

A Practical System Devised For Determining His Value to the Business—Does His Salary Exceed the Profits on the Goods He Sells?—Something That the Scientific Grocer Figures on.

Do clerks ever consider what they are worth to their employers, or do the employers even know whether certain clerks earn their salaries? As mercantiling is becoming more of a science every day, it also becomes necessary to look more scientifically into the financial details of a merchant's business.

It is well known that clerks in most retail grocery stores are not drawing large salaries, but it does not matter so much what a man is paid, as it does to know whether he earns what he is getting.

It is an easy matter to ask for a higher salary, but a clerk has no right to ask for an advance unless he can show that he is worth it.

Some have an idea, if they work in a store for a certain length of time they are entitled to a raise whether they are worth more or not. Few really consider what value they render to their employer and make little effort to be more valuable, and yet expect more wages without taking into consideration whether their employer can afford to pay an advance or not.

To assist the clerk in taking a fair look at the situation and arrive at a businesslike conclusion whether he is entitled to more or not The Grocer has prepared the following schedule which will show in a practical way what a clerk must do to earn his salary. The bill of goods is a fair ordinary every day order :—

	Selling Price.	Cost.
To 1 lb. soda biscuits	10	7½
1 lb. butter	32	28
1 loaf bread	10	08
½ lb. coffee	20	15
½ lb. tea	20	15
1 doz. eggs	35	30
3 tins tom., corn peas..	25	22½
2 breakfast foods	25	20
18 lb. sugar	1.00	89
Flour	25	20
6 soap	25	23
	$3.27	$2.78

It will be seen from this bill that the profit is 49c. If a clerk gets $12 a week at this rate he will have to sell about $70 worth of goods to pay himself. If he does not sell more the proprietor is losing the expense of running the business, so far as this clerk and the goods he sells are concerned, which would be about $10.

After the clerk has first made his own wages he begins to pay the expenses and what is left over and above that goes as profit to the proprietor. The value of a clerk therefore depends entirely in his ability to exceed the point where the net profit of the proprietor begins.

It is quite probable that there are clerks who never reach the paying point, and yet might think that they should have more wages.

Every merchant therefore should adopt some system by which he could tell every week from the amount of business done, whether his clerks are worth the salary he pays them or whether they are entitled to more. By a clean and fair investigation some unsuspected ones might not measure up to the paying point.

E. A. Bagin & Co., general merchants, Haywood, Man., are succeeded by Fay & Dagesse.

Presentations were made by the employees of the Empress Manufacturing Co., to Walter Taylor and E. C. Taylor, who have retired from the firm. Gold lockets were the mediums by which their former associates expressed their goodwill.

Things That Shouldn't Be

A Grocer Dodging a Traveler by Slipping Out the Back Door.

Hands Out Important Judgment Re Substitution

Judge of Superior Court Claims it to be Illegal to Substitute a Certain Brand of Goods When Another is Demanded—Defendants Have to Pay Nominal Damages and are Restrained by an Injunction to Continue Substitution.

A judgment of much importance to the retail and wholesale trade, and which was referred to in last week's issue, was that given by the Hon. Chas. de Lorimier, Judge, Superior Court, Montreal, Que., in favor of Bovril, Limited, and against Metrakos Bros., confectioners, Montreal, the latter being accused of substituting another brand of beef fluid when that of the plaintiff was called for.

The Grocer has secured a copy of the judge's observations and decision, the prominent extracts of which appear below as given by him minus some of the words and phrases, which are not necessary to the comprehension of the judgment by the reader, but which are necessary in law:—

"The Court, having heard the witnesses in open Court, and respective attorneys of the parties in this case, examined the proceedings, documents, consents and evidence and on the whole, having deliberated, renders the following judgment:

"Plaintiff is a body politic and corporate duly incorporated, having its head office in London, England, and an office and chief place of business for Quebec in Montreal. The defendants are fruit and candy merchants, doing business under the style of Metrakos Bros. Plaintiff complains of defendants and by the declaration in this case, it is, in effect alleged: That plaintiff has for a long period of years carried on business throughout the world as manufacturer's of a fluid beef, which it has placed upon the market and sold under the name of Bovril. The plaintiff has advertised its product extensively, and has spent very large sums of money therein, and it has become universally known under the name Bovril. The plaintiff has advertised and sold its product in Montreal and vicinity for a number of years.

Where Substitution Comes in.

The defendants for a long time past have been serving and supplying those of their customers, and the public generally, who ask for Bovril, with a preparation of another fluid beef; when customers of the defendants and the public asks for Bovril they are alleged to be served with another beef fluid; the defendants have for a number of years palmed off and substituted upon their customers and the public, a substance manufactured and placed upon the market by another company, the whole to the great loss and damage of the plaintiff; the plaintiff is entitled to a writ of interlocutory injunction concurrently with a writ of summons to be issued herein, restraining the defendants from selling or offering for sale under the name of Bovril, any substance, preparation or product other than that manufactured and prepared by plaintiff and placed upon the market under the trade mark Bovril; as a result of the acts and conduct of the defendants in substituting and palming off upon their customers and the public, products not manufactured by the plaintiff, the plaintiff has suffered loss and damage in the past to a large amount which for the purposes of the present action, it reduces to the sum of $5,000.

The Defendants' Plea.

The defendants, in reply, allege that the public generally do not ask for Bovril, but usually ask for fluid beef, and very often beef tea, which means any kind; that the respondents sell and supply to their customers either fluid beef indifferently, according to the wishes of their customers. Those of the customers who call for Bovril as a general rule and perhaps invariably mean and signify their intention of having fluid beef or beef tea; that the customers certainly never have been misled, as they always were supplied with whatever they wanted; that the defendants have put in front of their store a sign (4x8) advertising the other fluid beef, and that the customers always know what substances are being supplied by defendants; that the customers further may see, and as a matter of fact, do see, the bottles which are being used so as to supply what is being asked for, and these bottles are labeled; that the defendants never palmed off the other fluid for Bovril; that if Bovril was not served when asked for on some occasions, which is denied, it was because customers did not make it clear that it was Bovril they wanted, and the defendants were misled every bit as much as the customers, if not more so, and defendants supplied them openly with what they were in the habit of serving when fluid beef was called for; that the defendants have never practised any deception on their customers and have, on the other hand, supplied Bovril when fluid beef was called for, and the plaintiff has certainly in this matter been compensated, if, indeed, any errors were unwilfully committed; that both fluids are equally good, and at all events it is a matter of taste, and both substances are made of extract of beef; that if any error has been committed, which defendants deny, they regret it, but have acted in good faith and are prepared to so act in good faith in future and to be very careful and not to give other fluid beef when Bovril is asked for; that the defendants, at the times of which the plaintiff complained that the defendants passed off the other fluid beef, had engaged new hands.

Reasons for Decision.

In rendering his decision his honor said in part: "It is in evidence that plaintiff has expended large sums of money for the advertising of its product; that at divers dates, and more particularly during January and February, 1909, customers who went to defendants' place of business, called for Bovril, but were knowingly and illegally served, by defendants' employes, with a totally different product or preparation of fluid beef purchased by defendants at a lower price than plaintiff's product; that such willful substitution constitutes, in law, an illegal and willful act, for which the defendants are responsible.

Nominal Damages to be Paid.

"It is also in evidence that, by reason of defendants' illegal acts, plaintiff has suffered loss and damage; but seeing the declarations contained in defendant's pleas as to the future, plaintiff has agreed that such damages be assessed nominally to the sum of $25.

"Considering that plaintiff has established by legal evidence, the material allegations of his action and demand, and that interlocutory injunctions, must in consequence, be declared perpetual.

"Considering that defendants have failed to establish the material allegations of his plea;

"The court maintains plaintiff's action, demand and injunction, and declares said injunction pre-emptory and perpetual, and in consequence doth restrain and enjoin the defendants from selling or offering for sale under the name of Bovril, any substance other than that manufactured and sold by the plaintiff under its trade mark, and it is ordered that the injunction remain, according to law, perpetual and in full force to all intents and purposes; condemns defendants to pay the plaintiff $25 with interest, and dismisses the defendants' pleas, the whole with cost against them."

A BUSINESS CREED.

To do the right thing, at the right time, in the right way; to do some things better than they were ever done before; to eliminate errors; to know both sides of the question; to be courteous; to be an example; to work for the love of work; to anticipate requirements; to develop resources; to recognize no impediments; to master circumstances; to act from reason rather than rule; to be satisfied with nothing short of perfection.—Michigan Tradesman.

Hard Headed Business Man Condemns the Bill

Some of the Schemes of the Promoters of Co-operative Bill Elucidated — Why Wholesalers and Manufacturers Should Oppose It—Toronto Labor Men Have no Sympathy With It.

Hamilton, Ont., February 8.—Shown a copy of the Bill to be introduced in to the House of Commons by Lloyd Harris to incorporate Co-operative Societies in Canada, one of our hard-headed business men says he considers it about the "smoothest" proposition he has yet seen. After analysis he comes to the conclusion that there is far more in it than appears on the surface and that there is some powerful motive behind it that is pressing for legislation, other than the Canadian people.

A clause relating to the formation of local companies reads: "That any seven persons may register with the Secretary of State and do business as a Co-operative concern."

"Now mark," he said. "this clause goes on to say that any child over twelve years of age may qualify as one of the directors of the company. Thus any family consisting of the parents and five children over twelve years of age, may register, form a company, and act as directors of same.

"Another pernicious clause is, that outside companies may acquire holdings in any company so formed, and these outside companies may dominate the smaller concerns. Of course, this is done apparently for the purpose of legally getting control by the parent concerns which are behind the whole scheme."

Establishing wholesale depots in the principal centres if found successful, manufacturers of all descriptions would soon follow. And here is where my friend H. H. Businessman is surprised at the apathy of the wholesaler and manufacturer in not opposing such a piece of legislation.

Some of these people smile and say this is only a matter for the retailer. If they will look up the business they have done in England and their methods, they will possibly want to keep the retailer out.

Another clause in the bill which is very bad is the system of auditing. The bill provides "that one of the number shall be an auditor." As a good many business men know, there are "auditors" and "auditors," but the safest ones are chartered accountants who are above "cooking" the returns.

The system of selling stock in connection with these companies is also pernicious. In the event of failure the subscriber stands no chance whatever for restitution. Every merchant and manufacturer in Canada should make it a point to present the case to his local member and Senator and thoroughly enlighten them on the character of such a measure.

WHAT LABOR MEN THINK.

Toronto, Feb. 8. — The Toronto District Labor Council invited a delegation from the Retail Merchants' Association to meet them the other evening to discuss the Co-operative Bill now before the House and also the troublesome question of the causes of high living. The meeting took place and the discussion was interesting and brought out many features which shed light on the subject. The butchers aimed to show that they were not getting more than a living profit out of their end of it and were not the cause of the trouble. It came out in the discussion that if the farmer gets, say $2 a hundred more for his cattle, the general public erroneously thought that the butcher should be able to sell his meat at 2c advance and make the same profit.

This, however, is not the case. The offal, it was explained, was nearly half of the animal, so that if the farmer gets say $4 a hundred live weight, the meat costs the butcher about $8, but if the farmer gets $6 per 100, the meat costs the butcher $12. The farmer gets 2c a pound more but the butcher has to pay 4c more for the meat. As the cheaper cuts are not in demand they will bear little of the advance and therefore the desirable parts must bear the extra cost. Practically the same rule works out in the hog problem.

The Co-operative Bill was strongly opposed by the retail merchants and it receives no sympathy or support from the labor council. The bill never originated from the labor people, nor from any class of consumers, and it must therefore come from some promoters who are seeking special privileges to "do up" the public, and therefore, it was maintained, such a bill should have no support or even consideration by any member of the House.

NEW FACTORY FORMALLY OPENED.

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 10.—At the formal opening of the new factory of Wagstaffe, Limited, here last week there was a large attendance of retail grocers, besides the mayor, board of control, aldermen and a number of other citizens. The visitors were conveyed by special cars to the factory, where Mr. Wagstaffe conducted them through, at the same time explaining the machines and the work they performed in the manufacture and packing of the various products. It was shown how they are arranged for the convenience, and, at the same time, comfort of the employes. The factory is divided into five rooms, besides the office. The equipment makes provision for cleanliness to a marked degree, and the rooms are large and well ventilated. The factory was formally declared open by Mayor McLaren, who compared the present to the time, just four years ago, when Mr. Wagstaffe started up with a chopping machine and a few dollars capital. Fred Smyc, president of the company, thanked the visitors for their attendance, and refreshments were served. On departing each lady was presented with a jar of marmalade and the gentlemen with cigars.

GREAT DECLINE IN SUGAR.

Grocers' Association's Opinion on Cost of Living—Eighteen New Members.

Hamilton, February 10.—The Retail Grocers' Association maintains that groceries are cheaper to-day than they were forty years ago. J. A. McIntosh, president of the association, brought this question up at the last regular meeting and stated that it was proved at the annual banquet of the retail grocers in London that the above statement was so. Forty years ago, he said, sugar was selling at eight pounds for $1, while to-day eighteen pounds could be procured for the same money. Much discussion took place as to whether the association should take any action in regard to the matter, but it was decided to leave it over until the next meeting.

There is a possibility that the annual picnic of the grocers will not be held at Niagara Falls this year, as the association at London has invited the local association to go there. While no definite action was taken, a majority of the members suggested Guelph as a convenient spot to hold the picnic. It is probable that the matter will not be decided for some time.

The co-operative bill, at present before Parliament, was also discussed at considerable length. The president explained that petitions had been circulated protesting against the bill and had been signed by the leading manufacturers and departmental stores of the city. All the members of the association were requested to sign them.

The auditors' report for the past year was presented by Joseph Kirkpatrick and showed a small balance to the credit of the association. It was explained that during the year a large sum was donated to various charitable institutions. Eighteen new members were received, the largest number to join at any one time for years.

The announcement in Ottawa that the Retail Grocers' Association would employ a brightly uniformed man to collect bad debts seems to have been very successful according to an Ottawa report. A number of grocers report that in many cases people who previously had refused to pay their debts are now coming in and paying up unsolicited for fear of the collector calling on them as soon as engaged. The association is taking up the question of a grant towards the $5,000 the board of trade is raising for the Ottawa publicity department.

Solid Business Discussed at Important Banquet

London Retail Grocers a Live Organization — Price-Cutting Discouraged—Grand Annual P.cnic Suggested and a Provincial Organization Touched Upon—Views of Representatives of Hamilton and Brantford Associations — Plan to Extend the London Manufacturing Field.

In business "the other fellow" is often credited with a good many characteristics and motives that are anything but desirable—till we know him better.

In days gone by Bill Smith, grocer on Dundas Street, London, hadn't much use for John Jones, who conducted an opposition store a couple of blocks away.

These two stores were the best in the locality. Smith felt that Jones was the man he had to beat, and vice versa.

Smith advertised several leaders at cut prices, and Jones, fearful of losing trade, went him one better.

Pretty soon it was a rare occasion when Smith and Jones were not offering bargains in groceries.

Each — figuratively speaking — went round with a chip on his shoulder daring the other to knock it off.

Smith and Jones barely nodded when they met on the street, and neither had a good word to say for the other.

About this time a reorganization was effected of the Retail Grocers' Association, that had been in existence for years, but which had got into the habit of waking up periodically just long enough to declare the old officers re-elected by acclamation.

To make a long story short, Smith and Jones were thrown together frequently by the association meetings, and once the ice was broken each found the other a pretty decent sort of a fellow.

They compared notes and figured out just about what this campaign of price-cutting had meant to them.

With both there had been some increase in yearly turn-over since it was started, but——they had actually made less money from their businesses.

Their petty jealousies and short-sighted merchandising had cost them pretty dearly.

Smith and Jones don't attempt to do business on the cut-price basis any more

They depend upon good, well kept stores, first-class service and quality merchandise to attract and hold trade.

Their businesses have increased steadily and they're both making money a great deal faster than they ever did before.

There is lots of competition between the two stores, but it is a competition that does them both good and brings extra profits to their cash drawers.

All because Smith and Jones were brought together by the reorganization of the Retail Grocers' Association and got to know and understand and appreciate one another better.

Which brings us round to the fact that the London Retail Grocers' Association is one of the livliest organizations of its kind in existence anywhere.

Smith and Jones and some hundred and fifty other grocers of the Forest City are on the membership roll.

They're not there as a mere matter of form either. Every last man of them takes a real interest in the association and its objects, and every last man of them has derived benefits from it that have had a dollars and cents value to him.

The association has been the means of immensely bettering conditions, not only by creating a feeling of good-fellowship, but by correcting abuses and promoting the adoption of sounder, saner, merchandising methods.

The Canadian Grocer congratulates the London Retail Grocers' Association on what it has done in the past and extends its best wishes for the future.

London, Ont., Feb. 10.—It was indeed a merry company that gathered round the festive board at the third annual banquet of the London Retail Grocers' Association—a company composed largely of men more or less in close competition during business hours, but who are broad enough to see that this need not interfere with organization for mutual benefit and the betterment of friendly relations. As their guests they had representatives of the manufacturing and wholesale interests, commercial travelers, retail associations of other cities and the Mayor of London.

The annual banquet is an eloquent expression of the good fellowship that exists among London grocers. This year it was more successful than ever, which is saying considerable. A splendid menu, well arranged toast list and good musical numbers all combined to make the evening an exceedingly enjoyable one. The program proved so entertaining that when the National Anthem was sung at 2 a.m. scarcely a chair had been vacated. There were nearly 125 present.

Hamilton and Brantford associations were represented by their presidents, J. A. McIntosh and W. J. Mellen, respectively. A telegram was read from D. McLean, president of the Toronto association, expressing regret at his inability to attend.

President E. J. Ryan discharged the duties of toastmaster very gracefully. Following is the list of toasts introduced, with the respondents :

"The King."

"Canada and the Empire."—Col. A. M. Smith.

"Our Mercantile Interests."—Moses Masuret, Wm. Turnbull and J. S. McDougall.

"City of London."—Mayor Beattie.

"Our Manufacturers."—Robt. Wallace, Chas. Hunt and John Stevely.

"Our Travelers."—F. E. Tobias and Jos. Boyd.

"Retail Grocers' Associations."—J. A. McIntosh, R. J. Donaghy, Harry Ranahan and W. J. Mellen.

"Our Trade Journal."—T. J. Tobin.

"The Ladies."—Clem Garvey.

"Our Guests."—C. W. McGuire and G. J. McKey.

The following vocalists contributed very acceptably to the enjoyment of the evening : Thos. Ranahan, Frank Webster, Wilfrid Blakie, M. McKeough, Ken Murray and the Centennial Male Quartette. Bert Weir was accompanist. The Tony Cortese Jr. orchestra was present as well.

Officers of the London Association are : President, E. J. Ryan ; vice-president, Norman McLeod ; Second Vice-President, Jas. Haskett ; Treasurer, Harry Ranahan ; Secretary, Cyril Hayes ; Committee, Thos. Shaw (chairman), R. J. Donaghy, Fred Travers, Frank Paull and Chas. Summers.

Following are extracts from some of the addresses, all of which were characterized by pointed reference to the various subjects, and brevity as well :

Col. A. M. Smith.—"We all know the facts and figures about this great Dominion and this great Empire, but do we realize what it all means ? I was lately in England, and while I thought that people had generally informed themselves as to the facts about Canada, I could see that they do not realize what it all means. * * * Great Britain is increasing her capital at the rate of a thousand million dollars a year. She could greatly increase her expenditure on army and navy without unduly feeling the burden, and I think she would be wise to do so at once. All that does not excuse the dominions beyond the sea from doing their part. * * * The secret of the solidity of the British Empire lies in the fact that each portion is at liberty to work out its own policy, whether good or bad, without reference to the others."

Moses Masuret.—"I feel that I was born a half century before my time, for Canada has only really been discovered. * * * There is talk of high living, but I think it is only due to an overgrowth. People do not want to stay on the farms, consequently we do not produce enough. The law of supply and demand must always regulate prices. * * *The Wholesale Grocers Guild has lowered instead of raising prices, by equalizing freight rates, etc. It shortened credits and led the retailer to do the same. Now you men have your own association and it has also been beneficial."

Wm. Turnbull.—"Seventy years ago groceries were four times as expensive as they are to-day. Then only rich men could afford store goods. Workingmen now enjoy luxuries that Queen Elizabeth could not have. Not so long ago the workingman could not have wheat bread unless there was a wedding in the family, and they seldom ate meat. * * * Nations have in the past destroyed commerce by putting to much restriction on it. You can't regulate trusts by act of parliament. We need

Three things that the London Retail Grocers' Association are going to work for are :—

1. A union picnic of the Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford and London associations to be held at London.

2. Mayor Beattie's scheme to raise by subscription among business men of the Forest City, a fund sufficient to purchase property that can be offered on easy terms to manufacturers seeking locations.

3. A Provincial Retail Grocers' Association.

a commerce commission that would follow the lines of the Railway Commission. It was always found impossible to regulate the railways by legislation. They always found a way to get round it. So will the combines and trusts. * * * People to-day are pretty well off. Not so long ago the highest salaried man in Hamilton received only $600 per year. At the same time sugar sold at 14c a pound wholesale and cotton at 30c a yard."

J. S. McDougall.—"Price-cutting is very unwise. It seems to me that any fool could sell goods that way." Mr. McDougall dwelt at some length on the matter of boosting London. He suggests as a practical method that the citizens be loyal to the retail trade, that the retailers buy altogether from London wholesalers, and that the latter patronize as largely as possible the local manufacturers.

Mayor Beattie.—"The Customs revenue at London increased 30 per cent. in the past year, and the bank clearings $5,000,000. This city stands third as a distributing point in Canada, and fifth as a commercial centre. * * * We want factories, but we are badly handicapped at the present time in not being able to offer any inducements to manufacturers in the shape of cheap sites. We have asked the Government for power to issue debentures for the purchase of property for this purpose, but our request was refused. I propose to circulate a subscription among the merchants and other business men, and hope in this way to raise sufficient funds to purchase a desirable block of land that can be sold at very favorable prices to industries that we induce to locate here. * * * I hope to have the old market building removed. We are harboring men there who pay the miserable rental of from $4 to $8 and are in direct competition in some lines with you grocers who have heavy taxes and rentals to meet."

W. J. Mellen (Brantford).—"Personally I am in favor of a union picnic of the Toronto, London, Hamilton and Brantford associations, and I would like to see it held in London first. I will do what I can to bring it about, although I am not authorized to promise anything on behalf of the Brantford association."

J. A. McIntosh (Hamilton).—"Hamilton has the oldest association in the Province, and it is doing good work. We are circulating two petitions now against the Co-operative Societies Bill. Our objection is not that a certain form of competition should be allowed to crop up, but that it is proposed to accord it special privileges. Brantford and Hamilton take 6,000 people to Niagara Falls on their annual excursion. Eight special trains are required to carry the crowd. We have money to burn. There has been talk of a union picnic with London. If that materializes I would like to see it go to Guelph. * * * We should have a provincial association. It would not aim to hold up the manufacturers. We only wish to talk matters over with them. I believe also, that it would remedy evils among the retailers themselves. For one thing we should quit cutting prices. Our percentage is small enough any time. The secret of success is good goods at honest prices. No man can ever build his trade solid by cutting. I am glad to see that The Canadian Grocer has taken this matter up."

R. J. Donaghy.—"We should stick together. In the London association we have nearly 150 members. Whatever we have tried to carry we have carried very successfully. Among other things we have discouraged new goods that do not allow the retailer a fair margin. A line that costs $1 should not be retailed at 10c. We have done a good deal to prohibit pedlars from selling in the streets. Hucksters became so bold they overbid us on the market. Two or three of them were brought into police court recently and conditions are becoming better. * * * A provincial association is needed. We should start with London, Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford. * * * At the next meeting of our association I propose to start the list the mayor spoke of for the purchase of factory sites. I will move that the association make a contribution of liberal size. The scheme is a good one and deserves the best support we can give it."

Harry Ranahan.—"What good has our association done? If it never did more than promote the good-fellowship that now exists among the grocers, it has justified its existence. * * * The various associations should be loyal to Canadian cities. When an excursion is taken to Niagara it means the expenditure of a lot of money in Buffalo. We ourselves have gone to Detroit and spent our cash like sailors. Now let us have a union picnic and hold it in a Canadian city—in London preferably."

Robt. Wallace.—"Manufacturers will build up a city as nothing else can. It used to be that we in this country were afraid of U. S. competition. Now an article can have no better recommendation than that it is made in Canada. There is nothing more effective as an advertisement for London than good branded lines going out from her factories with the 'Made in London' stamp on them. This city has now 150 factories, with 6,000 employes and a weekly pay roll of $45,000."

Chas. Hunt.—"The grocer is the doctor who feels the pulse of the public and the manufacturer fills the prescription."

John Stevely.—"We export pulpwood at $7 a cord that is worth five times that amount in the manufactured state. We should provide our own people with this labor. * * * We have in London three or four concerns that are the largest producers in their line in the British Empire. Their products are known throughout the world. 'Made in Canada' is a grand motto."

F. E. Tobias.—"I have a heart full of sympathy for the grocer. He is certainly a philanthropist. His ledger is conclusive evidence of that fact. When we travelers call on grocers we occasionally find one that is grouchy and out of sorts. However, we shouldn't judge him too hardly, for we are not in a position to know what load of trouble he may have on his mind. The things that happen to some men, both in their businesses and outside are enough to make them grouchy." Mr. Tobias mentioned a statement in a farm paper that $40,000,000 a year were spent on travellers' salaries and expenses, and that the traveler could be dispensed with, the consuming public being given the benefit of the consequent saving. Such reasoning, he said, was obviously ridiculous.

Joseph Boyd contented himself with giving a reading entitled: "Shanahan's Old Shebeen."

C. W. McGuire.—"I am glad to note the tendency in the grocery as well as all other lines of business toward the cash system."

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Minto Bros., Toronto, having experienced through their American branch at Buffalo, that coffee and tea go hand in hand and having acquired thorough experience regarding the purchasing of the green bean in the different markets in various parts of the world during the last three years, have installed a coffee roaster, cleaner, cooler and grinder of the most improved type, and especially built an odor proof room with all the latest facilities necessary. This is a separate department from their tea business. They have secured the services of W. Mills who has had a life-long experience in coffee and coffee only. They feel satisfied of their position in this new branch of their business and are going to put it out in half-pounds and pounds in tins under the name of "Melagama." They are putting money in every package the same as in the case of Melagama tea. Their bulk blends will be known as Minto coffee under numbers over two, three, etc.

SMALL MINDS AMONG RETAILERS.

A "small mind" is one of the worst evils that can beset any trade. That "small minds" among the retail trade are gradually being eliminated is a fact, but nevertheless the educational campaign should by no means be terminated.

A case in point has recently come to our notice. Among the retailers in a large Canadian town there was one more successful than the rest, simply because he did business on a broader plane and always on a modern basis.

Eventually, his retail business evolved into a wholesale one and he naturally expected to get a share of the trade of his former associates. In this, however, he was doomed to disappointment. The others were jealous of his success, and, rather than purchase from him, sent to other places and paid more for their goods.

The result was that the wholesaler was forced out of business and left that town.

When retailers show such petty jealousies as this, and at their own expense, too, the trade in such a place cannot be in a very healthy condition. Broad-minded men are required—men who are willing to do what they can for the furthering of the interests of their native towns—and not "small minds," who are always prone to hate their competitors and even customers of their competitors.

It takes an organization like the London Retail Grocers' Association to dispel all these small ideas. Such an organization, as shown by their recent banquet, a report of which appears elsewhere, brings together competitors, gets them acquainted with each other so that they may see the good in one another. It provides new ideas, new methods and makes it possible for a combined campaign in the interests of trade and commerce in any town or city.

Had the labor men not organized their unions and worked together, what advantages or privileges would they have had to-day?

The retailers are standing absolutely in their own light when they allow narrow ideas and petty jealousies to rule their actions.

EARLY CLOSING SPREADING.

That grocers are more and more working towards scientific methods cannot be disputed. Early closing is one of the advanced methods that is gradually coming into its own, and in this matter The Canadian Grocer has reason to feel grateful, because it has been continuously advocating it.

By an item in another section of this issue it will be seen that the Peterboro grocers are now after early closing and have waited on the city council to have their request granted.

It is pleasing to note that about three-quarters of the members of the trade want the new system, and that among these are the majority of the best grocers in that city.

There is only one point for the trade to learn. That is, that no trade will be lost to any if all agree to close early. The trouble in the past has been that someone always kicks over the traces, thinking that he will gather in everything; but this only causes the others to do likewise and eventually conditions are back to the old state—every store open and none making enough profit to pay for light and fuel, not even taking into account the time of the grocer and his salesmen.

A little backbone is required and the trouble is blotted out.

ILLEGAL SUBSTITUTION.

The attention of the trade is directed to an article in this issue regarding substitution of goods. It is a judgment given by a judge of a Superior Court in favor of a firm which accused Montreal confectioners of supplying a beef-fluid to the general public other than the brand asked for.

This judgment is important inasmuch as there is considerable illegal substitution going on at the present time, not only in the grocery trade but in others as well.

It will therefore be in the interests of every member of the trade, whether retailer, wholesaler, broker or manufacturer, to carefuly study the judgment given by the Hon. Chas. de Lorimier at Montreal. It may be the cause of preventing an action for damages.

A LESSON FROM TRADING STAMPS

To a retail merchant in Canada it seems like a dream to hear of the merchants in many states of the union still having the trading stamp chain around their necks. This was one of the greatest obstacles the retail trade in Canada ever had to meet, and many of our retail merchants have no idea what was saved for them by the prompt action of organized effort.

The United States trade papers are full of the enormous drain on the trade made by trading stamps and still do not seem to be able to cope with them.

In South St. Louis it is claimed that the "Eagle Trading Stamp Company" has 1500 clients, of these 825 are grocers and 319 are butchers. Petitions are being circulated to get all these to sign an agreement, under a penalty of $200 for breaking it, that these stamps be discontinued. It has been shown that $90,000 has annually been taken from the pockets of the grocers and butchers in South St. Louis. This is about the amount that was supposed to have been taken from the coffers of the Toronto grocers and butchers each year during the time they were flourishing in Canada.

Suppose the retail merchants of Canada had not acted promptly and vigorously, that drawback would still be upon us, and what would it mean? Toronto merchants alone would have been fleeced to the extent of about a million dollars, and what loss it would have been to the merchants of the Dominion is beyond comprehension.

The schemes crept in, serpent-like, and the bait was taken first by the weakest men in the trade and through their mistakes, others were forced to follow and the result was a ruinous loss to the entire trade.

The Co-operative Bill, with such persistent efforts behind it, which is again before the house, is regarded fully as dangerous as the trading stamps, and yet to many merchants it appears perfectly harmless. The great danger lies in giving special privileges to promoters to organize these societies and in tying up the unsuspecting to these stores which are in direct opposition to fair and honest trade conditions.

Merchants in general seem to be able to spare little time in looking after matters that concern the general trade and therefore the absolute necessity of trade papers and association work is apparent, and these should have the warm patronage of every merchant in the country.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Calgary Merchant Selling Cabbage by Weight—How a New Brunswick Grocer Makes Use of the Traveler—Vancouver Grocers do not Want Two Phones—A Seasonable Marmalade Window—Toronto Grocer Makes Good Use of Different Colored Canned Goods Labels.

Sells Cabbage by Weight.

Calgary, Feb. 9.—There is at least one grocer here working towards the 'selling by weight' plan. He claims that in the case of cabbage a retailer hands out no justice at all to customers when he sells by the half dozen or dozen. Some are sure to get more than their share of the big heads, while others have to take what is left.

Recently he decided to eliminate selling cabbage by the head and adopted the weight plan. He finds his customers more easy to please, his salesmen are not tempted to 'play up favorites,' and everything is done, as he himself states, 'on a fair and square basis.'

Makes Use of the Traveler.

Moncton, N. B., Feb. 10.—The advantage of using the traveler for educational purposes is strongly advised by one of Moncton's merchants. Many of these drummers, he says, represent big jobbing houses, who are closely in touch with the markets and their advice is often worth while considering.

"I talk to them regularly, because they are always full of information, but, of course, I don't mean that I gossip with them. If this talk is carried on in a casual way some good pointers may be secured not only regarding markets, but in connection with successful methods adopted by merchants in other places.

"In this way the traveler is very useful to me, and I am always glad to give him a hearing whether I want to buy or not."

Grocers Favor One 'Phone.

Vancouver, Feb. 9.—The Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association has sent in an official protest to the city council against the granting of a franchise to a second telephone company in this city. A couple of weeks ago, application was made to the council by the Automatic Telephone Co. for a franchise, and it was rather favorably entertained, since the present system is reported a long way from being satisfactory. Since then, however, business men generally have raised objections, and they consider they would rather bear with the evils that exist rather than have them added to by the addition of another system, when every business man would have to have two sets of telephones installed. One grocer, who makes frequent trips to other cities, and who has seen the two systems in operation in one place, declares that they have no single advantage. The rates are not reduced, and it only means an extra expense without any increase in business.

Suggestive Marmalade Window.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—Marmalade season is on and it's the live merchants who will make the most of it. J. Blood, a Yonge St, grocer, has had a window display for some days with this end in view. Besides showing two or three different lines of manufactured marmalade, he has the raw material also and works out a unique idea in this respect. Three cedar poles about a couple of inches in thickness and about five feet in length are stood up in pyramid shape—a hunter's method in cooking meals—tied at the top with a chain hanging down snapped onto a pot filled with marmalade oranges. Beneath this is heaped up wood all ready for the match.

An orange slicing machine is also displayed, with a card attached, to the effect that it is loaned free of charge for slicing oranges for marmalade.

This is a window that any grocer—large or small—can easily use. It is up-to-date because the marmalade season is here, and it might be used by other grocers with good results.

Attractive Showing of Labels.

Toronto, Feb. 8.—Walter Giddings, who manages the branch of the W. J. Snell grocery store at the corner of Queen Street and Lee Avenue, has a fine up-to-date store. The ceiling is covered with art metal roofing of simple design, the silent salesmen and show cases are of oak, and of the modern variety. The store has two cash registers, each of which has four separate compartments used by different clerks for different departments. The most novel feature of the store at present is the artistic arrangement of the canned goods on the shelves. At the end of the store is a pyramid of cans. The outline is made of cans of corn which have a light colored label. The inner part has the dark green pea labels, the cans being arranged diamond shape. This scheme is carried out along the top of the shelving; the different colored labels on the cans offering large scope for the designing of conventional patterns.

View of High Cost of Living.

Peterboro, Feb. 10.—In all this talk about the increased cost of living, no one can blame the grocer for any increases that may have been made to the price of the goods they handle. Such is the feeling of a local grocer of this city in regard to the present question that is of all-absorbing interest in the press during the past few weeks. The grocer was trying to place the blame for the state of affairs that is being emphasized now and will be forgotten in a month or more, and he completely exonerated the members of his own craft.

"The retailer is practically a fixed quantity in this game," he said. "The producer, wholesaler and others are securing higher prices. The consumer, through the increase in the cost of labor, is receiving more money, but the grocer is almost untouched by or unaffected by the conditions. In fact, if it does affect us, or has affected us, it has been to cut down our profits, rather than to increase them."

The grocer claims that there is not the same production as formerly and that, combined with the cost of labor, has almost compelled the manufacturer to raise his prices, and the burden has returned to the shoulders of the consumer.

Grocers Handling Baled Hay.

Bracebridge, Ont., Feb. 8.—"Should a grocer handle baled hay?" asked your correspondent of a large grocery store proprietor in this town. "Well, that's a serious question to answer," he replied. "Honestly speaking, I think not, it more or less damages the delivery system—a big factor in a successful store; it creates more work in the office; its the means of enlarging your credit system and it means bad friends with some of your customers who buy hay if it's not number one. On the other hand, I have handled 15 car loads since the New Year, and have made some money out of it." So that is the question. Who can answer it?

Protection Against Poor Pays.

Vancouver, Feb. 9.—The Merchants' Protective Association is approaching retailers to become members, a charge of $10 per year being made. It is proposed to give a service by means of which a dealer may ascertain at short notice the standing of any resident of the city, whether of good or bad pay and of what financial resources. A list would be furnished every month of suitable information. This is fairly well looked after in the credit list of the Retail Grocers' Association, which keeps track of those who do not pay, which is the principal thing.

Montreal, Feb. 10, 1910.

The coming of Lent has put somewhat of a damper on trade generally, though, of course, some lines have benefited. It's an ill wind indeed that blows no one good. However, as this condition of affairs is expected every year, dealers have time to prepare for it and make ready for the large increase which always takes place after the Lenten season closes. It is a good thing to have a time of year set apart when it is known to be dull, if only to allow a general relaxation and period of recuperation. Trade always comes back with a bound later.

In Montreal this condition of affairs is probably more pronounced than in our other large cities, owing to the greater number of strict observers of Lenten denial here. At any rate for the next few weeks trade is expected to slacken materially.

Sugar—Raws continue firm with an upward tendency. There has been considerable activity in sales of refined and refiners are well satisfied with present conditions. No changes in quotations have occurred.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Somewhat easier.

Raisins—Shortage reported.

Beans—Demand strengthening.

Toronto, February, 10, 1910.

Immediately after the holidays, the wholesale trade started off at an uncommonly high speed, which was too good to keep up, and in order to balance affairs, the trade is losing now what it unduly gained in January. On the whole, however, the wholesale trade is satisfactory and all look for a rattling good spring business.

It is a most healthy condition of affairs when there is not a line of goods on which a decline in value is expected. Everything is looking up.

Sugar—The sugar market is a little easier, but this means nothing more or less than a lack of the keen interest shown a few weeks ago. That the production is below last year is unquestioned and with a continual increase in the consumption, sugar will likely hold its present price with a chance of going higher. As sugar has already advanced it is not likely that it will make another move for some time.

Dried Fruit—The orders for dried fruit are not what they should be, and the reason for it is a matter of opinion. It is, however, expected that things will improve and that a good brisk demand will follow the dullness which now prevails. The cheapness of green apples may have some influence on the dried fruit market. Raisins, especially Valencias, are scarce and are in the hands of a few and will likely bring more money in the near future.

Winnipeg, Feb. 10, 1910.

At present there are many changes going on in the grocery trade throughout the west. New stores are opening, old stores are enlarging, pioneer grocers are retiring, and several transfers have been transacted in the different provinces. There is more or less of this every year after stocktaking, but this season has been rather an exciting one in this regard. The changes have all resulted in an active demand for goods. Better perhaps has been the excellent manner in which receipts have come in during the past few weeks. Wholesalers are busy revising their trade list and credit accounts, at the same time doing all in their power to despatch the goods that are ordered in such large quantities and covering a wide range of goods. This condition has stimulated the market, and although manufacturers do not quite understand, they are being pressed for goods of all kinds.

There is no commodity in the wholesalers' list this week that has a weak trend. All lines are firm and advancing many important items are reported out of stock. If the manufacturing centres do not look more eagerly to the output in the west, there is no alternative but high prices and continued shortages.

SUGAR—The trade is fair only and prices hold firm at the following quotations. Although lower prices are not anticipated, yet there is no immediate advance expected. Merchants are quite well stocked.

10 Years

A great past
A greater future

Year by year the next ten years are going to witness great expansion in business in Canada. and the time will soon slip by. You know the story of the great success of Red Rose Tea in Ontario and the West in the past ten years. The quality of the tea from the first has inspired confidence. On that quality and the confidence it inspires in both merchants and their customers, the business has been built up. No matter what you may have thought about some other package tea ten years ago, when Red Rose Tea was new on the Ontario market, to-day you have the utmost confidence in the quality of Red Rose and absolute faith in its future as one of the great and expanding commercial undertakings of the Dominion, and you are pleased to see the sales increase so rapidly.

The quality that has brought Red Rose Tea, in the face of great opposition, to its present strong position as a standard seller throughout Canada, is going to make it keep on growing. The next ten years' increase, year by year, will be enormous. Every week will tell. Why not begin now to get your share of that increase, and every day recommend

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, Feb. 10, 1910.

Unseasonable weather during the past week has interfered to some extent with business in the grocery lines. As a result of these conditions the wholesale trade is rather quiet and the retailers also report a falling-off in business. This is only temporary, however, and as soon as the weather and the roads improve, business will again resume its normal state. With regard to prices, they are fairly steady at present. Some of the dealers are anticipating that the markets will be a little easier from now on, but there is nothing at present that indicates any marked change.

Large shipments of apples continue to be made from Halifax to the London market. Over thirty thousand barrels were sent from here this week, and more are to follow. Prices are improving on the other side for first-class fruit.

Now that the Lenten season is near at hand there is a good demand for fish. Lobsters are fairly plentiful and heavy shipments are being made to the United States market. The prices are high, and are likely to continue so. As the consumption of fish has increased in the United States cities since the meat boycott, fish is in better demand and the dealers in Nova Scotia are now sending large quantities of fish to these markets.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Vancouver, Feb. 10, 1910.

Outside of navel oranges, which have decreased in price from $3 to $2.25 per crate, there are few changes in prices, though some of the figures are very firm. Potatoes, Ashcrofts, are held at $35, with a prospect of a rise to $40 in the near future. Locals are still quoted at $25.

Apples are jobbed at $2 to $2.50 wholesale, and from now on the price may go up still further.

There was a tendency to drop eastern selected eggs to 30c, but with a few days of cold weather this week, the holders of stocks have taken courage, as local stock has been coming in slower. The 32c figure has therefore been maintained.

With creamery butter jobbing at 40 cents, the quality is poor. For some time it has been impossible to secure an article free from a rank taste, and as the quantity is limited, consumers have to take what the commission men favor the retailers with.

Although there has been an increase in the price of sugar in the east, the price still remains the same here. The reason is believed to be the importation of sugar from Scotland, which is brought here on the Blue Funnel liners.

PETITION FOR EARLY CLOSING.

Majority of Peterboro Grocers Want New Method Brought About.

Peterboro, Feb. 10.—A large number of Peterboro grocers have presented a petition to the council asking that a by-law be passed fixing the hours at which the grocery shops in the city shall be closed. A deputation representing the grocers was present to explain the reasons for asking the passing of the by-law. Affixed to the petition are the names of more than three-quarters of the grocers, and it is believed that the council will acquiesce in the request that has been made. The majority of the leading grocers have joined in the petition. One of the speakers stated that those who objected were largely proprietors of small businesses. They could open at seven in the morning and close at midnight if they chose, and in most cases they remain open until 10.30 and 11 o'clock.

In a large business it is not fair to expect clerks to work all day and several hours after supper. Another point was that the new hours would educate the people to buy their supplies early and thus be cured of the carelessness that is responsible for purchases made at ten and eleven o'clock at night. It was pointed out that the passing and enforcing of the by-law will educate the general public to turn out earlier and by all the stores being closed no grocer will secure an advantage over another. The representative of The Canadian Grocer was told by one grocer that he believed the by-law would lead to the formation of a strong grocers' association, an organization which he claimed would be a great benefit to the individual.

Peterboro grocers want to close at 7 o'clock every night except Saturday night, when 10.30 will be the limit. Other provisions, as usual, are made for particular occasions.

CARELESSNESS CAUSED FIRE

That clerks and grocers should be careful with matches was demonstrated in Montreal recently when a fire was caused in a grocery store caused by a clerk dropping a lighted match into a tank of coal oil. A patron came into the store to purchase some coal oil about eight o'clock and a clerk went to an outbuilding at the rear to draw a quantity from a large tank there. It took some time for the oil to come out of the tap, so he lit a match, and leaned over the tank to see if it were nearly empty. A part of the match fell into the coal oil. An explosion followed and in a moment the clerk's clothes were a mass of flames. He had the common sense to rush out and throw himself into a snow pile thus saving himself from death, though he did not escape without severe burns. The damage will be in the neighborhood of about $1,000.

STORE HINTS FOR GROCERS.

Cleanliness Pays. Keep the show cases, floors, and goods themselves clean.

Keep your shop warm during the winter months. A good radiator will yield you returns in the form of pleasure to your customers, and increased sales.

Your share of your town's trade is yours only if you get it, and to get it you must go after it in the right way.

Please your customers and your business will grow, even if you have to ask a little more money for the best goods.

Instruct your assistants to now and then suggest to housewives that they may be in need of a new washtub, washboard, or some such thing.

To sell goods in quantity is to sell more goods, because the housewife will use things more freely if she has a good supply on hand.

TRADE WITH NEWFOUNDLAND.

A special report on the trade and commerce of Newfoundland, issued by the Trade and Commerce Department of the Dominion Government, and compiled by Trade Commissioner J. E. Ray, at St. John's, deserves the attention of manufacturers and exporters of grocery articles.

The Customs Tariff comprises 218 items, of which 61 are on the free list. The highest ad val. rate of duty is 75 per cent., but the items are very limited. The items of interest to the grocery trade bearing a duty of 50 per cent. are brooms and whisks. Important items liable to a duty of 40 per cent. are: Aerated waters, fancy biscuits, brushes, china, fancy wares and glassware. Items carrying a 35 per cent. duty are: Acids, anchovies and groceries in general.

Among the items on the free list are: Wheat, flour, hides, Indian corn, kerosene oil, molasses and pease meal.

An interesting feature in connection with Newfoundland's exports is the increased trade with Canada to the extent of $1,000,000 in the years 1907 and 1908, in comparison with the year 1900. This state of affairs should be gratifying to both countries, in view of the fact that the imports from Canada exhibit an increase of $1,768,148 during the same period, thus indicating the rapidly developing trade relationship between these two British colonies.

TRADE NOTES.

The French-Canadian treaty which was explained in a recent issue came into effect on Feb. 1st. The Commissioner of Customs, Ottawa, has sent out a notice to the effect that warehoused goods specified in the treaty may be ex-warehoused at the rates therein provided after Feb. 1, upon proof by declaration of the importer to the satisfaction of the collector that the goods are by reason of their origin entitled to entry under the treaty.

An Ontario charter has been granted to the Bon-Bon Co., a new concern formed for manufacturing purposes. The head office is in Toronto, the provisional directors being Lionel Davis, C. E. Stonehouse, G. E. McCann, and A. T. Struthers.

A TRAVELER'S APPRECIATION.

The Canadian Grocer,

Gentlemen.—Am sending you herewith P. O. order for $2, to pay subscription to March, 1910. Apologise for not attending to it before, and wish to say, that my only explanation is a bad memory. Am highly pleased with The Grocer which has improved very much since I first read it and think it an absolute necessity to the traveler who lives too far away from house to visit it weekly.

Wishing you continued prosperity, I am,

H. L. McNALLY.

Early Closing Saves Light and Fuel Expenses

Experiences of Toronto Grocers Who Close at Seven O'clock —Others Admit That They Only Make About 75 Cents Profit After That Hour—Claim This to be Insufficient to Pay for Gas and Coal—Advantage of Evenings at Home.

By R. Y. McLean.

The all too common practice in Toronto of keeping grocery stores open till ten and eleven o'clock every night in the week is a feature of the trade which is deplored by most rational business men.

When a man starts work at 7 a.m. he has done all that should be asked of him, or all that he should ask of himself in the twelve hour span span between that time and seven o'clock at night. If he is a clerk he has a right to demand extra pay at double scale for all work done after that hour and if it is the proprietor, himself, who stays tied down to his work till ten or eleven o'clock, he is forfeiting, in impaired constitution, many times what he receives in increased profits.

The main obstruction in the path of the early closing movement seems to be the antagonism which exists between different members of the trade. Each man is afraid to close because his competitor may stay open and carry off some of his custom. This is a natural fear as grocers are all human and all after business. A very little thought, however, will show anyone that early closing can be instituted without any falling off in receipts.

People have to eat and they have to eat groceries. The consumption of these necessities is not going to dwindle off because it becomes necessary to purchase them before seven o'clock.

The trouble does not lie between the merchant and the puhlic, but between the grocers themselves. The money is there for them to get, and it is only a matter of the time when they are to get it. If the merchants in a section would get together and bind themselves to close every night at seven o'clock they would be money and time in pocket.

Are Money in Pocket.

A. A. Martin, 202 Lippincott St. and P. R. Morrison, of 127 Lippincott St. agreed last November to close their stores at 7.30 every evening. Although there are three or four other stores within easy walking distance of these two men yet they claim that they have not lost more than an occasional odd cent or so, not enough to pay for their gas and coal bills had they kept open.

One man in that same district who keeps open at night states that he sold practically no groceries after seven o'clock. His stand is on the corner of two streets along which there is considerable traffic and he says that his business after seven consists of sales of tobacco and cigars to transient customers. He estimated that his sales would average about $3 for an evening on which there would prohahly be 60c or 75c profit. When he was reminded of the extra gas and coal bills he incurred through his long hours, to say nothing of the strain on his constitution, he decided that there was not much profit in the late closing.

When Mr. Morrison was asked how his customers liked the change, he said that he had not had one complaint. Some of his patrons were in the habit of doing their shopping late and he went to these people, personally, a few days before he inaugurated the new order of things. He told them the position in which he was placed, explaining how the late hours tied him down to his business. He put it to them fairly and squarely asking them how they would like to be kept at their work all night instead of getting off at six o'clock.

These people met him in the right spirit and now he has no customers who do not make their purchases before the hour of closing.

Jealousy Must Not Rule.

The practicability of this scheme depends altogether on the closeness of the relations between the members of the trade in one section. There is no reason at all why the grocers cannot get together, formulate an agreement and then live up to it.

No one grocer will lose money, the whole body will he further ahead, because the expenses of running a store after dark will be cut out and at the same time the volume of trade will not decrease, for as it has been pointed out hefore, people have to eat whether they buy their provisions after seven or before. This is a "dollars and cents" matter to every grocer in Toronto, whose store is open at night, and as such it demands his attention. In these days when profits are cut so fine in the grocery trade it behooves all line grocers to save every possible cent, and early closing will save you money.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

What Retailers Desire to Know—Cost of Doing Business Puzzling.

H. A. Meredith writing from Vegreville, Alta., to The Canadian Grocer, asks: "Will you inform me through your valuable journal, whether any of the Canadian canners put up tomatoes in any smaller size than 3's. It has often occurred to me that in this western country there is room for a smaller can—say half above size — there being so much travel and camping, and so many hundreds of farmers living alone who would often use the smaller one, whereas they would not the 3's. I feel sure there would be a big sale for a 24 oz. can."

Answer—There is a smaller sized can of tomatoes put up by some of the canners, but not to any great extent. Some 2's are put up but this, as a general rule, is done only in cases where canners have a surplus of the smaller sized cans on hand and they have a supply of tomatoes to fill them.

Wants Cost of Doing Business.

A Hamilton, Ont., grocer in renewing his subscription, asks: "I would be pleased if you could supply the follow-information, viz., what is the average net retail profit and the average net cost of doing a retail business in staple groceries."

In answer to the above it may be his subscription, asks: "I would be as the average net cost of doing business entirely depends on circumstances and varies in different towns and cities, and it also depends on the management. One grocer makes money under conditions where another one will lose. It may, however, he stated that the net profit over and above all expenses should be at least 8 per cent. and not less than 5 per cent. This, however, can only he ascertained hy each grocer, hy keeping account of his daily cash sales. Some find it too much trouhle to keep proper accounts, from the fact that they are trying to keep track of the cash and credit sales. To save a great deal of trouble and have just as good results in the end, the daily cash sales should include all the money that was received from goods sold and also that was taken in that day on accounts for goods that had been sold before. If this is done, it is an easy matter to know the daily cash receipts. To find out the cost of doing business, find the weekly cost of rent, light, heat, telephone, help, horse feed, delivery, etc. Suppose cash sales for a week are $400 and expenses $52, then by multiplying $52 by 100 and dividing by $400, the cost of doing buisness in percent is ascertained. This is 13 per cent. the percentage on the turnover for doing business.

To get an approximate percentage of the profit made on any goods, the following is a simple method: Take a number of your bills as you sell the goods to your customers and determine what they have cost you. If this is done, say with 3 or 4 bills for several days, you will get a fair idea of the profit you are making by finding the difference between cost and selling price. When these parts of the grocery work are properly attended to, they offer inducements for greater effort to excell from week to week, hesides providing the satisfaction of knowing what you are doing.

A Halifax grocer is charged with attempting to set his store on fire. It was found the fire was caused by two oil soaked lighted cords, which were lying on the counter and were attached to the oil tanks. Had it not been discovered the place would have been blown up.

Anti-Meat Agitators Discover Their Mistake

Come to Conclusion That Supply Rather Than Combines of Dealers Has Been Responsible for High Prices — Export Trade in Butter Likely—Good Outlook for Cheese.

The effort made to shake up the meat situation and place the blame of the high prices of meat on the dealers, has resulted in a fizzle. The agitation came from a source where the facts were entirely lacking. Cold storage plants and well equipped packing houses are now better understood as safeguards against extreme prices than as combines to fleece the people. The outcome of all the fuss is that the supply is not sufficient to meet the demand. This seems to be general all over, and the natural remedy is high prices to induce greater production and to lessen consumption. This is actively at work and will in due course of time find the proper level.

As the demand is well supplied with fresh made butter, it is encouraging to those who still hold large quantities of cold storage creamery butter to know that there are export prices so nearly reaching their views that business is likely to result.

The cheese market has a good outlook, and there is no danger of having too much of a surplus on hand when the new season opens up.

The egg trade is in good shape, and even with the increase in the receipts of fresh eggs, the held stock is held firmly at unchanged prices.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Both pure and compound lards are down ¼ cent, owing in some part to a slackening of trade during Lent. There is a general weak tone to the provision market, though two lines—heavy flank pork and Windsor bacon—show an increase due to a short supply. Clear fat backs are down 50c. Trade for all lines is dull.

TORONTO.

Provisions—The provision market is steady, with a fair demand, but on the whole a little bit easier, although there are few changes in the prices. Hogs are about 50c cheaper, and are now bringing $11.50 per hundred dressed, and from $8 to $8.10 live weight f.o.b at country points. Butter—The receipts of fresh-made butter are heavy and quite ample to supply the demand. Instead of complaining about the poor quality of butter on our local markets, it is claimed that the quality is much better than last year. This is certainly good news, and the farmers who deserve the credit should know that their better work is appreciated. The grocers throughout the country who buy the butter from farmers should be pleased to convey this knowledge to the farmers as an encouragement for still greater effort.

WANT TO SEE NO CHANGE.

Hamilton Grocer Believes the Present Bread Act to be Satisfactory.

Editor, Canadian Grocer. — A local paper with the aid of the city solicitor claims to have found the true remedy of the bread problem. The remedy is to pass an act fixing a uniform weight for all kinds of bread. This is as old as the hills, but it has always been found wanting.

Writing from a retailer's standpoint I favor the law as it stands now. I believe the grocers as a rule are all perfectly satisfied, and I fail to see where the consumer would in any way be benefited by a change. This act has only been in force for a short time, and as it has given good satisfaction I think it is unwise to ask the Government to make a change, when it is not clear that any class would derive any benefit.

It is certainly much easier for the grocer to handle it all at the same price, than to sell at three different prices, because the consumer, if he wanted the fancy bread, would then have to pay more money in view of getting a larger loaf than he now gets. It might be that some would take the cheaper loaf, and inferior bread, rather than pay a higher price for the same size of a better quality. The privilege of buying the standard loaf is open for any one now, but it appears that the demand is almost entirely for the fancy bread of the better quality.

Suppose the law should make a standard loaf of 24 oz. or 3 lbs. for a large loaf, would it be any help to the consumer to be compelled to pay 15c for a fancy loaf instead of taking a smaller weight a t 10c. There cannot be any difference to the consumer. It should also be taken into consideration that it is impossible to make a 3lb. loaf of fancy bread as good as a 2lb. loaf, owing to the process of baking. Taking all into consideration I think it is best to leave well enough alone.

HAMILTON GROCER.

Hamilton, Feb. 10, 1910.

Substitution

Substitution kills trade. Imitations are invariably inferior. A lower price, or a promise of a wider margin of profit, is the temptation held out to persuade the trader to buy the "just as good" and push it off among his customers, but they are not pleased with the goods. The grocer suffers in reputation and the consumer is prejudiced against the particular class of goods to the loss of the manufacturer who must again attempt to convince that individual that his product is worth buying.

There is only one

and to protect the honourable trader, the consumer and ourselves we have recently taken into Court a case of substitution of another article when BOVRIL was asked for, and

His Honor, Judge Charles De Lorimier, in the Superior Court in Montreal, granted an injunction restraining the defendants from any further substitution and condemning them to pay damages and also all costs of the action.

We have been compelled to institute action against several other firms to restrain them from the same course.

The qualities of BOVRIL and its uses have been widely advertised, and we have always endeavored to retain a good margin of profit for the trade. We therefore solicit your interest and aid in the distribution of our preparation.

Why Christie biscuits make for success in the grocery business

Success does not happen.

There is nothing accidental about it. There are always good and apparent reasons for success—especially in the grocery business.

The grocer who conducts a pure food shop is bound to succeed, for the simple and conclusive reason that pure foods are the foundation of stable reputation—a reputation that no amount of money can buy.

Since Christie biscuits are the purest of all pure foods, it is reasonable to assert that the grocer who handles them is laying the proper foundation for permanent success.

Your best customers know a great deal about the purity, quality and lasting goodness of Christie biscuits.

Is it wise to risk losing even one good customer? Remember there's a Christie biscuit for every taste, and—

Christie Biscuits sell more than biscuits.

Manipulatinos Not Affecting the Flour Market

Flour is Still Strong With Wheat Somewhat Lower — Cereals in Good Demand at Firmly Held Prices—Trend of the Markets.

It was generally believed a week ago that the price of wheat would hold its own, and perhaps gradually, but quietly, climb a little higher. During the week, however, the market became restless and during the struggle it dropped about 3 cents a bushel on the large markets.

While the cause is always based on the reports of decrease or increase, it is, however, princapally owing to the manipulation of the dealers, and as long as this continues all that the most experienced can do is to keep guessing. The flour market, however, is steady and firm.

The cereal market although presenting no changes in prices is quite firm, and it would not be a surprise to those directly interested in the market to see an advance soon. Cereals find good sales at this season and orders have been frequent and many of them large.

TORONTO.

Flour—The local flour market is slowly affected by the constant fluctuations in wheat, and therefore the prices remain steady. With all the ups and downs, it is, however, noticeable that wheat is on the whole, getting a little higher. In view of this, millers are aware of the fact that their margins are growing a little smaller, and that it will be necessary to raise the price of flour in the near future.

TALK OF FLOUR MILL MERGER.

The Canadian Grocer has learned on good authority that there is a move on the part of some large millers to buy up some of the smaller concerns. While these rumors are substantiated by several in the trade, those approached did not know anything definite.

Some years ago there was an agreement among millers to buy and sell on a co-operative plan, but for some reason or other, it did not work out extra well. Now the proposition is that the mills be purchased outright by one company, so that this might be brought about.

At the present time there are some mills in Western Ontario mentioned as among those likely to be purchased.

HAVE FAITH IN BREAD ACT.

Master Bakers Desire no Change—Grocers Not Complaining.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., met a large representation of master bakers in the Retail Merchants' Association board rooms on Saturday to discuss with them the bread act, as it stands, and also the proposed amendments. Toronto, Hamilton, London and other places were represented, and all delegates favored the present act and desired no change. After considering every phase of the act in which others, as well as bakers took part, none suggested any improvement. They all think the act is fair to all concerned. The bakers think it an unfair hardship to make frequent changes in the weight of bread, on account of the cost of the changes in pans, etc., and therefore the present act, which they claim is the best they ever had, should not be disturbed. They also state that the public in general is well satisfied, the grocers who handle bread are not complaining, and the bakers are not making an unreasonable profit.

The inspection of bread in the bakeries was strongly upheld and considered far more effective than the old system of inspecting in stores, where only a small percentage could be seen by the inspector. and when all the bread delivered directly to the consumers escaped inspection altogether. The standard loaf of common bread is almost entirely off the market, the people demanding the fancy bread of lighter weight.

More Than Soda Crackers

On Calling the Customer

WHEN I was young and guileless, Brother Grocer, long before I ever saw a bag of FIVE ROSES, I was wont to pass my summers with an uncle of mine, owner of a large farm on the Richelieu.

¶ Amongst others in the meadow, there was one frisky nag, called Juno, which I fancied above all her equine companions.

¶ I used to go out with a handful of oats, sauntering gently over the green with malice aforethought, warbling melodiously, "Juno, darling, Juno."

¶ And Juno at a safe distance would prick up her auricles and whinny in distressed, deliberating accents, till Juno's greed overcame Juno's judgment, and she was led away to "fresh fields and pastures new."

¶ But one day, Brother Grocer, I called Juno when I had no oats—ever after it took Juno a long, long time to come even when both hands overflowed.

WHICH must remind you, Brother Grocer, of many a long-cherished customer lost through poor quality and long-sought since.

¶ Many a housewife replies to the call of good flour and obeys the re-calls, till one day your quality fails and Mrs. Housewife fails to call.

¶ Good quality now and again wont coax success, Brother Grocer. Needs must a regular unbroken chain of satisfaction.

¶ Once lost, it takes ten times the trouble to recover gone patronage that it did to make the first sale.

¶ A single baking disappointment shakes the housewife's confidence—she is looking for trouble, she is bound to discover flaws and magnify them even from perfect flour.

¶ There is this, Brother Grocer, about FIVE ROSES: every sack and barrel is a link in a chain of satisfaction, each of equal strength and quality—there is no weakest link.

¶ Don't call the customer, Brother Grocer, unless you have the "oats"—I mean FIVE ROSES.

DUTY IS MUCH HIGHER.

Why Tobacco Prices Have Gone up Since 1865.

Since the publication a few weeks ago of prices of grocery articles in 1865 and 1910, considerable interest has been displayed in the great advance made in tobacco. In 1865 the price quoted was 26c per pound, while to-day it is 75c.

The chief reason for this advance is due to the increase in duty.

For instance the excise duty on tobacco made from foreign leaf in 1867, as shown by Inland Revenue statistics, was 10c per lb. In 1870 it was increased to 15c and in 1874 to 20c. In 1883 it was reduced to 12c, except when put up in packages of less than 1-20 of a lb., when the duty remained at 20c.

It was increased again to 20c per lb. in 1885 and to 35c, when put up in packages less than 1-20 of a lb. In 1891 it was made 25c, irrespective of size of packages.

Regarding Canadian tobacco, no duty was specially imposed until 1880, when one of 14c per lb. was exacted. In 1882 that was reduced to 8c and in 1883 still further to 2c. It was increased in 1885 to 5c.

The duty on Canada twist in 1867 was 5c per lb.; in 1870 it was 7c.; increased to 10c in 1874; reduced to 4c in 1879; reduced to 2c in 1883 and raised to 5c in 1885.

The above changes were made prior to 1901 and no changes were made until 1908 when an amendment to the Inland Revenue Act was made.

This revision was not an increase in taxation, but simply a rearrangement in the manner of collecting the duties on tobacco.

This stated that a duty of 5 cents per pound, actual weight, shall be imposed on tobacco and cigars manufactured in Canada "on all chewing and smoking tobacco, fine cut, cavendish, plug or twist, cut or granulated, of every description,—on tobacco twisted by hand or reduced into condition to be consumed or, in any manner other than the ordinary mode of drying and curing, prepared for sale or consumption, even if prepared without the use of any machine or instrument and without being pressed or sweetened,—and on all fine-cut shorts and refuse scraps, cuttings and sweepings of tobacco made from raw leaf tobacco or the product in any form, other than in this Act otherwise provided, of raw leaf tobacco.

"On common Canada twist, when made solely from tobacco grown in Canada, and on the farm or premises where grown, by the cultivator duly licensed therefor, or in a licensed tobacco manufactory, the duty is five cents per pound, actual weight."

Apart from the increased duty, the increased cost of raw material and of labor has, no doubt, had a great deal to do with the advance in tobacco.

It might be mentioned here that in the case of Macdonald's tobacco, the surplus is going back to the country for the aid of practical education and therefore in a most profitable form.

Frosted Oranges Had Depressing Effect on Sales—All Kinds of Vegetables on the Market—Fish Market Firm With Some Advances and More Expected.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—There has been some activity and increased demand in some lines, but the market is not extra busy. Oranges are still maintaining their demand and grapes have advanced slightly. The demand for bananas is not so large as usual but Jamaicas No. 1 are holding their own at $1.50 to $2 per bunch. The truth is there is a dullness ruling at the moment which is likely to be stimulated during Lent.

Vegetables.—Bitter cold weather in the earlier part of the week had some tendency to restrict the shipments of vegetables and dull the market. However, things have livened up a little towards the end of the week and prospects are brighter for a more active demand. Prices are unchanged, but there is a decided weakness.

Fish.—With the advent of Lent fish prices all around have advanced. The market is naturally active and business is good in all departments. The local dealers all over have announced an increased consumption all through the Province of Quebec, due probably to the extra fast days which are factors in almost doubling the consumption at this period. There has been a noticeable increase in the demand for oysters since they have become more appreciated in this province as a food substitute for meats or fowl. There is no waste in them and their food value has become a feature in the market. Everywhere the demand has increased and no doubt will continue too for some weeks to come while Lent is in vogue. The prophecy made by this paper that prices would increase has been fulfilled.

Green Fruits.—Apples still continue plentiful and the dealers would like to see more buyers. Some of them are getting out of their time, are losing flavor, and sell as low as $1.25 a barrel. On account of the poor quality of oranges which were put on the market, consumption fell off, and now since the better qualities are offered it takes some time to revive. While there are still some frosted fruit, the bulk are free from it and in a short time the trouble will all disappear. Messina bitter oranges have arrived and are ready for marmalade at $2.50 a case.

Fish.—With rather a short supply of fish on hand and with the advent of Lent it is altogether likely that fish will be a little higher, although the prices as yet have not made any advance. Owing to the high prices of meat, the fish men had more than their usual share of the trade, and in consequence wear a broad smile.

GRAPEFRUIT A GOO DTONIC.

Grapefruit, like the orange and lemon, is possessed of marked medicinal qualities. It is of great value as a corrective of the stomach and digestive organs, and also as a tonic stimulant. A prominent physician gives his opinion of grapefruit as follows: "The sharp stimulus of the grapefruit is the best thing to set the digestion in order for the day." This fact is practically recognized by people who appreciate the better things in life, and it will pay the grocer to mention from this time on "grapefruit" when he takes an order for breakfast needs.

To The Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh and clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clear money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

Recipes for Fish Dishes Bring Increased Orders

Experience of a Grocer in This Connection — Methods of an Ottawa Dealer for Extending Fish Sales in Lent—Uses Window Cards to Advantage.

Lent has begun and with it has come the usual increased demand for fish. The question to the retailer who handles fish is how to get the best returns—or in other words how to sell more fish.

Generally during Lent, the grocer sees that the herring barrel is kept outside the door and kept well filled, but outside of that he allows the fish business to take care of itself. Many forget to take the advantage of Lent, the tastes of the customers and the fair profits in fish. They allow the exclusive fish dealer to take all the trade or they miss many sales which if the right precautions were taken would mean considerable gain.

Speaking of the Lenten trade an Ottawa grocer remarked the other day that he always took good care to have a good assortment at the beginning of the season.

"I get in a stock of herring, mackerel, salmon, codfish, always a few bottles of anchovies in oil for my best customers, and several other kinds and then I'm in a position to lay my selling plans.

"As I always use a liberal space in a daily newspaper, I am in a position to advertise fish during Lent in my regular ad. and I keep at it. I talk fish all the time.

"I heartily agree with The Grocer's idea to use display cards in the window. A neat card, attractively written with a nice catch-line such as 'Fish is good food,' 'Two pounds of this Codfish goes as far as two pounds of Steak' or 'Dainty Dishes can be made from Fish—drop in and get some Recipes.' Such cards, I find, are splendid and aid materially in my sales, not only in fish but in everything I display."

This Ottawa grocer also pays considerable attention to his window during Lent and has a fish display twice a week. These he tries to make as original and effective as possible. Besides the window cards he uses price tickets.

The latter he claims, "sell the goods before the customer comes into the store and saves my clerks and myself considerable time."

When customers come into the store in Lent, he always makes it a point to mention fish to them in some way or other. In this way he gets many orders that would never be secured by anybody if he had not suggested the matter of fish.

Gives Away Recipes.

A Montreal grocer has printed several hundred circulars containing some ten or a dozen recipes for preparing various dishes. With every new order he sends out a circular which bears his name. He finds that the women of the households read this carefully and he gets new orders on the strength of the recipes. These include cream codfish, creamed salmon, etc., which make dainty dishes for the supper table.

It is generally the merchant with the new and practical methods who gets the bulk of the trade and every grocer handling fish should make it a point to 'dig up' the new methods.

A RECORD-BREAKING JANUARY.

East Toronto Grocer Ahead by $190—Dependence Upon Railways—Early Closing in Effect.

East Toronto, Feb. 8.—It is now just five months since the G. T. R. trainmen were moved from the York terminals, and East Toronto is still alive despite the many prophesies to the contrary.

For a few months, to be exact, till the middle of November, things seemed to be going down hill fast, and especially the grocery trade suffered. However in November the Canadian Northern Railway construction camp located near the town and since then things have been booming. One grocer, in fact, told your correspondent that his receipts last month beat any other January by $190. This may be only a temporary boom but the probabilities are that it will last. There is some talk of the G. T. R. bringing their passenger engines out to York on account of lack of accommodation in the city and there is also a rumor that the C. N. R. will establish their round house and repair shops at East Toronto. Either one or both of these rumors proving correct, would mean great prosperity to the town.

When the grocers of East Toronto read about the difficulties encountered by the city grocers in getting their stores closed at seven o'clock sharp, they can afford to pat themselves on the back, for be it known to all city grocers that every store of consequence in East Toronto closes sharp at seven o'clock.

WHY THEY FAILED IN B. C.

I. H. Stephens, of Rossland, B.C., in giving a lecture at Nelson, B.C., on co-operative stores, declared the cause of non-success in British Columbia to be mismanagement, not in the business of the store, but in starting with insufficient capital and in an unsuitable locality. The Miners' Union there is going ahead with the movement to establish a co-operative store, $4,000 having been subscribed.

The Charles Ciceri Co., Toronto, have been granted a Dominion charter to import, export, and deal in fruits vegetables, fish, groceries, produce, wines, liquors and cigars.

Why the Salmon Industry is on the Decline in B.C.

Statistics Show That the Catch is Decreasing There to the Advantage of United States Fishermen — International Agreement Not Lived up to—How the Salmon May be Conserved.

By B. B. Bennett.

Is the salmon packing industry on the Pacific Coast declining? This question used to be a matter of argument, but now figures of a yearly decreasing pack are mutely pointed to as evidence that cannot be gainsaid. Those interested in the business have been credited with making the statement that the pack was yearly increasing with the ulterior motive of maintaining or increasing prices, but everyone is now convinced that the fish are coming in in less numbers. This being obvious, the government is taking all the precautions it can to conserve this principal and important industry, by the establishment of hatcheries and by regulations prohibiting the catching of salmon within certain weekly periods, as well as by preserving three weeks of a close season in the middle of the salmon run. But to what effect? Only to give to the fishermen on the United States side of the boundary line all the benefit which follows from large expenditures of money.

Old timers, that is those who were here twenty years ago, when the commercial age had its beginning in the western part of Canada, will tell of the great runs of salmon that took place in those days. It was these big runs that gave circulation to the stories of fish so thick in the rivers that one could walk across on their backs, and in small streams, where the salmon jammed, this was almost literally true. The same men, comparing such runs with those of the present day, remark on how small they have become.

When quoting figures on the salmon pack, the returns for the quadrennial pack are generally used, as it is in the big years, which occur once in every four, that the difference is principally noted. A story on the salmon is opportune, since 1909 was a "big year," and it was also the smallest of any of them, following the 1908 pack, the smallest pack ever recorded in British Columbia. In 1905, to go back to the last quadrennial run, the total pack in British Columbia was 1,167,460 cases, while in 1901 it amounted to 1,236,156. In 1909, it fell below the million-mark, being only 967,920 cases. In 1901, the pack on the Fraser river alone was 990,252 cases, more than in all British Columbia in 1909. In 1905, it dropped to 877,136 cases, yet, since hatcheries had been established and every care of conservation taken, the canners naturally concluded that 1909 would be good, and for that reason preparations were made on the Fraser river for a pack of a million cases. This was about the number put up in 1901, and only 123,000 cases more than in 1905. What was the actual pack? It was about half of what was anticipated, namely, 567,203 cases, or more than 300,000 less than in 1905. Of these, 542,000 cases were sockeyes, the best of the food salmon.

Fish Caught in Other Waters.

While the salmon fishing is declining, it is well to point out that it is only as far as Canada is concerned, which is in itself sufficient ground for the statement. On the other hand, at the time that the Fraser river canners expected such a large run, the fish came all right, but they were caught by Americans in United States waters, through which the salmon pass on their way to the Fraser river. The result was that the pack on Puget Sound was the largest in the history of the industry there, being 1,005,000 cases. This, too, in face of the fact that there are no hatcheries on Puget Sound, because there are no sockeye rivers—that is rivers into which these fish run. They do not frequent every outflowing stream, but have their particular favorites, these being the Fraser and the Skeena and Rivers Inlet.

It was internationally agreed that a weekly close season should be observed, both in Pudget Sound and Fraser river waters to allow salmon to get to the natural spawning beds in the Fraser river watershed. This agreement was reached after the Americans had offered to assist in establishing and maintaining hatcheries in Canada, since they had none in their own territory. The offer was declined by the Canadian Government, and properly so. The close season was to be 36 hours on the other side of the boundary and 42 hours on the Canadian, so regulated as to allow the fish a clear course from the Fuca straits up the river. If this regulation was observed, it is very likely that the salmon run could be maintained, but, as it is, all the money is being expended for the benefit of the packers who operate on Puget Sound. It is not libel to say that the regulations were openly and flagrantly violated, unless the truth is libel. No close season whatever was observed, and this, too, by men who operate traps, by means of which salmon are caught wholesale. When the time came for the close season, the apron of the trap, which closed the point of ingress, was let down only to the top of the water, and to a casual observer it would seem that the trap was closed. Hearing of this, government inspectors went from Vancouver on purpose to inspect and found the apron in this position. As corroborative evidence, the trap was seen full of fish, and the fact that thousands of fish were caught, as openly announced in the newspapers, was further proof that no close season was observed.

Armed Men on the Watch.

At that time, some salmon stealing was reported. This was only a minor affair, but it happened just about the time that the inspection by our own government officials was made, the result of this inspection being made public. To prevent any further inspection, which took place twice, armed men were stationed at the traps with instructions to shoot to kill, any one who attemped to get near them. This was ostensibly intended to prevent salmon-snatching, but in reality its object was to keep away men representing a people who were vitally interested, since the fish were hatched in Canadian waters and were bound there.

If regulations were mutually observed, it is probable, in fact an almost certainty, that the salmon may be so propagated and conserved that the pack will increase, instead of steadily frizzling away. This has been figured out by the authorities, who have given the matter a close study. But until mutual action is taken, Canada will spend the money and Puget Sound canners will benefit.

AN OLD LINDSAY STORE.

The above cut represents the place of business in which one of Lindsay's oldest grocers, C. L. Baker, did a flourishing trade in "ye olden days." It was erected when the town of Lindsay was in its infancy. At that time Mr. Baker did a big business in various grocery lines, also conducting a big flour and feed barn.

About 36 years ago he vacated the old frame building and moved into his up-to-date and large store on the main street, corner of Kent and Cambridge Streets. This store is to-day occupied by Adams Bros. Mr. Baker also built the large flour and feed store in the rear, which latterly was turned into a pork-packing business by Geo. Matthews, of the Geo. Matthews Co.

Mr. Baker retired from active business several years ago, but he is still a much respected citizen of this town. W. E. Baker, who conducts a grocery business in town at the present time, is a son of the above gentleman.

CUSTOM CATCHERS

Particularly in the case of Canned Goods, quality is the determining feature where the trade will go. If you stock you will be influencing a better class trade to your store.

Our herring are the finest obtainable—coming from Passamaquoddy Bay, where they are captured in weirs or traps—the packing is done by the very latest process in a modern sanitary factory.

BRUNSWICK BRAND

is synonymous for quality.

Prompt and Efficient Service

One day lately our warehouse staff was disorganized and we did not get all our orders off that day.

Mr. Bristol was in a Western Ontario city the following week. In conversation with three of our customers he asked if goods came promptly. The reply in each case was the same :

"You have been giving a splendid service; but, say, you were a day late last week."

It was so unusual for us to be late that everybody noticed it.

Customers of Geo. E. Bristol & Co. have become accustomed to prompt shipments.

We make a specialty of service. Try us—by our travelers, by letter, by phone. We can convince you.

Refuse to Make Affidavit that No Rebates were Given

A New Development in Connection With the Secret Commissions Act — The Lever That Some Retailers Use in Getting the Rebate—Advantages Allowed Mail-Order House Buyers—The Act, However, Has Stamped Out a Lot of Unfair Methods—Further Developments Expected.

That secret rebates are still being given in the grocery trade for the purpose of getting business is certain. This is contrary to the ruling of The Secret Commissions Act and in all probability something interesting will develop before long.

The Canadian Grocer has learned on the best of authority, in fact knows, that recently there have been some developments in the shape of traveling salesmen refusing to make affidavit when called upon that they have not given the secret rebate and others who have made the declaration under oath when confronted with the paper.

The fact that a traveling salesman refuses to swear that he has not committed a breach of the act is significant. Such a case has actually occurred—a traveler of a wholesale house refusing to swear that he did not give or promise a secret rebate in obtaining an order.

The root of the trouble in a large number of cases lies apparently with the retailer, but the traveler is also to blame for not having a strong enough will to overcome the temptation and some censure must be attached to the wholesaler who does not investigate every alleged breach of the act by one of his salesmen.

It happens like this. A traveler cites his price on a certain article. The retailer says he will not buy at that price claiming he can do better and has done better with a salesman from some other house.

In many cases the traveler will give way to get the order and offers the same rebate. The grocer buys from him then, only so long as he is willing to give the secret rebate.

There is no doubt that a great many retailers work on "bluff" when they state that they will not give an order unless this traveler meets the price of a competitor. In fact, this is known to have been the case in one instance at least and it is safe to assert that it often occurs.

Facts are Misrepresented.

A traveler called on the grocer and quoted him a price on a certain article upon which no rebate was allowed. The grocer claimed to have been offered a better price by another salesman; thereupon the traveler who tried to make the sale complained of the unfair advantage of his competitor. The latter was confronted with an affidavit to which he unhesitatingly swore, indicating that the retail grocer was merely bluffing in order to be able to buy the article a little cheaper. Since the traveler took the affidavit he must be judged "not guilty."

In other cases, however, the salesman has fallen to temptation and consented to give the grocer the same rebate as the grocer claimed he was getting from the representative of the rival house.

The Canadian Grocer knows that some of these travelers have been confronted with the affidavit and have refused to swear to it, indicating that they do not care to commit perjury and also indicating that they have given the secret rebate and committed a breach of The Secret Commissions Act.

"So long as the retailer continues to use the lever that 'the other fellow has given him the rebate,' so long as the traveler is so anxious to get the order that he too offers it, and so long as the wholesale house with which that traveler is employed neglects to stamp out the giving of the secret rebate, the trouble will last," stated a business man in referring to the matter.

He maintained that the act was a splendid one.

"Since it has come into force there is not nearly so much crooked work being done," he said. "The wide publicity that has been given the Act has done a world of good and a great deal of the objectionable rebating has been eliminated."

There is still a certain amount of it going on and other business men hint that developments are not far distant, and that when they do arrive some interesting trade conditions will be brought to light.

An Illegal Advantage.

There are, of course, hundreds in the retail trade who do not do business by the secret rebate plan and naturally they are desirous of having the entire trade educated to do the same. They claim that those competitors who do get the rebate have an unfair advantage—one that is obtained illegally.

In this connection mail-order houses are represented as being offenders. Travelers claim that mail-order house buyers often absolutely refuse to buy from them unless they are given the rebate. The buyers maintain that they get it from others and the traveler, if he does not wish to break the law, is forced to lose the sale. All the salesmanship in the world can scarcely change such a man, they say.

There is still another important side to the question of selling to the mail-order house. Travelers of some jobbers, it is claimed, give the rebate to the mail-order buyers, yet the same men refuse to give it to the retail grocer. The retailer, therefore, starts out with an unfair disadvantage, in competition with the mail-order house, simply because the law has been broken by two parties.

From the above it will be seen that there are many sides to the question of secret rebates. Although trade is on a much better basis since the publicity given the Act, there are still many infractions. But since these infractions are being watched and followed up with affidavits, the trade may expect to hear some time in the near future of the new developments referred to. As before mentioned, traveling salesmen are known to have refused to take the oath that they did not allow the illegal commission and this will be the channel through which developments will occur.

When a man allows the rebate yet swears that he did not, he lays himself open to a perjury charge.

The operation of the Act will therefore be watched with interest by all members of the trade and especially by those who are temporarily placed at a disadvantage by the infractions of it.

A GOOD OBJECT LESSON.

A man went into a retail store one afternoon last week, bearing under his arm a catalogue of a mail order house.

"Do you think," he said, "that you can sell me a certain article as cheap as this catalogue?"

"I'll see," said the merchant. Figuring up the cost of transportation, stationery, etc., they found the total to be $2.28.

"Sell it to me at that figure and I'll buy here," challenged the man.

"All right," said the merchant. "You can have it for $2.25."

The man bought and went away rejoicing, but in a few days he came back real mad.

"See here," he said. "You hornswoggled me on that deal the other day!"

"How is that?" smiled the merchant.

"You sold that identical thing to my neighbor for $2."

"Well, that is the regular price," admitted the merchant, "but you must remember you only asked me to meet the price of your catalogue."

Since it was on the man with the catalogue, they merely smoked up and let it go at that, but the catalogue order business has suffered a decided slump in that particular locality.

Little Uniformity in Profits of the Retailers

On Some Goods They are Large, While on Others They are not Sufficient to Cover Cost of Doing Business—Merchants Carrying on Business Without Sufficient Profits When Expenses are Considered—How Money is Lost on the Three-for-a-Quarter System.

In an efforts to give readers a clearer idea of the general trend of the retail trade, The Canadian Grocer has for several weeks, been comparing present prices of goods and present day methods with prices and customers in years gone by.

During the past week an endeavor was made to obtain from some representative Canadian grocers the cost price and selling price of certain articles with a view to determining whether they were making fair profits as well as uniform profits.

The articles taken into consideration were soap, tea, coffee, bread, sugar, butter, eggs, soda biscuits, flour, rice, tomatoes, peas, corn, salmon, bacon, lard, oranges, prunes, raisins, breakfast foods, potatoes, tapioca and fancy biscuits.

While the cost was practically the same in all cases, the difference in the average percentage of profits varied from 15¾ to 19 1-3 p.c., without taking into consideration the cost of doing business at all. The most remarkable feature is the fact that these merchants are trying to do business on so small a margin. These articles constitute a fair average of the staple goods which are sold every day in a grocery store, and therefore a fair basis upon which to make a calculation.

With this before us, let us now consider the cost of doing business, and it may be a surprise to know how little there is left for the grocer.

In talking with a grocer a few days ago about the small profits, he repeated almost at every turn : "But what can we do ?" and he did this with an emphasis which meant more than words. The only remedy is to either get a little more profit or conduct the business more economically. And this can only be done, either by buying cheaper or by selling for more, and as a retailer has little control over the cost of the goods. there seems to be only one way open and that is to sell at better prices.

In discussing the cost and selling prices of goods as well as expenses, it is claimed that the profits shown by the above percentages are not sufficient to carry on a successful business.

The Three-for-a-Quarter System.

In an article not long ago in The Grocer, it was pointed out that it was a mistake to sell 3 for a quarter and in this test it is found that this is the principal sinner. By this process, in many cases the profit is reduced from 25 p.c. to 4 1-6 p.c.

If an article costs 8c and is sold for 10c, it gives the grocer a profit of 25 p.c. on the cost, but if he sells 3 for a quarter he makes only 4 1-6 p.c. on the cost and actually he does not make as much as if he had only sold one. Why ask, "What can we do ?" when such a mistake can so easily be corrected. Why bother your head about the other fellow ; he is not half as bad as you think he is, for he is waiting for you to stop the practice so that he may follow suit.

In discussing the matter of profits recently with an aggressive Canadian grocer he said : "Grocers realize the fact that they are not making right profits, but are afraid and exclaim, "What can we do ?" I say be independent enough to run your own business, and cut out the practice of selling 3 for a quarter when you are entitled to 10c each.

"Is it any credit to the grocer himself," he asked, "if he sells cheaper than his competitor ? Does he stand higher in the estimation of his customers ? I emphatically say no.

"Low prices naturally lead to inferior goods and just the moment this is discovered, customers will leave. A grocer in such a case not only works for nothing but he drives his trade away."

Warming up to his subject, he asked : "Is a grocer ashamed to make a profit? Is it respectable for a grocer to complain that he can't make a living profit, when he has it all in his own hands to do it or not ? A wage earner is never ashamed to tell when he gets big wages. He may be ashamed to tell when he gets too little, but a grocer thinks he gains honor and glory if he works for almost nothing."

Profits Not Uniform.

Another interesting feature is brought out in this investigation and that is the fact that, while the percentage of profit is so small on the whole, there is a profit of 33 1-3 and 40 p.c. on several items.

Why these are expected to do more than their share should be a matter for grocers to consider. The retailer works for the wholesaler, and the manufacturer the same as the traveler does, only he is paid a 'commission' where a traveler is usually paid a salary. A traveler would soon leave the road if his salary did not pay his expenses, but a grocer keeps on and on trying to make a fair profit on the entire turnover by large profits on some articles and very small on others. All goods, one would think, should bear their fair share of the expense as well as pay the fair share of the profit which the grocer needs to carry on his business.

The general store and warehouse of H. C. Barnes & Son, Salisbury, N.B., was destroyed by fire. Some of the contents of the store were carried out, but a heavy storm in progress at the time, practically ruined them. Loss $11,000 ; insurance about $6,000.

Mammoth Ice Palace Represented by Loaf Sugar

A Window Display Which Performed Good Selling and Advertising Work—An Idea That Might be Used to Advantage in Any Retail Store for Increasing Sale of Loaf Sugar.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—The window of Huyler's confectionery store recently contained an idea which can be worked out to good advantage by any grocer who has a stock of loaf sugar on hand. It was a loaf sugar model of the Montreal ice-palace of 1908-09, and was made from a photograph.

Nothing could be more appropriate than loaf sugar to represent ice blocks. The accompanying reproduction of the window shows that in putting them together to construct the miniature ice-palace a work of art was performed.

The artist experienced considerable difficulty in arranging the arches, but by the aid of the whites of eggs 'mortar' was secured which served the purpose splendidly. The turrets were also difficult to construct, but by careful work and a great deal of patience they were made, the result being practically an exact model of the great ice-palace in the Canadian metropolis.

That the window was attractive goes without saying. At night when it was lit up with small colored electric lights the effect was quite out of the ordinary and thousands of passers-by stopped to pay more than a passing glance to it.

The people surrounding the palace were represented by small candy figures. The snowy surface of the ground was made by granulated and powdered sugar.

Model of Montreal Ice Palace Constructed Out of Sugar.

Brought Results.

In speaking of the effect of the display, the manager of the store stated that the firm was well repaid for the work of constructing the palace. During the day-time there was a continual crowd of spectators in front of the window. Mothers brought in their children to obtain the candy figures as souvenirs, offering to pay four or five times their value for them.

The idea of the display is one that ought to be made use of by other retailers wherever possible. Advantage might be taken of it to advertise by pretty window cards and in newspaper advertisements loaf sugar for afternoon teas, and other social functions. Apart from the selling value, such a window tends to get people talking about the store, all of which is bound to have a favorable result. It suggests neatness, cleanliness and industry and creates a good impression which will not soon be forgotten.

HIGH COST OF LIVING AGAIN.

Ottawa Grocers Claim Middleman is not Responsible—Past and Present Prices Compared.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—At the meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association last week considerable discussion was given to the subject which is now of general interest—namely, the increased cost of living. It was the unanimous opinion of the meeting that the middleman was not the cause of this increase, although the profits were not as large today as they were fifteen years ago.

H. C. Ellis pointed out that people's tastes were advancing disproportionately with their incomes. Here in February, greens could be purchased at a hundred different stores, whereas, ten years ago only one or two merchants carried such a line. The people to-day want everything bought from the grocer delivered; coffee and tea put up in air tight bags and in wrappings of parchment and lead foil. He maintained that groceries outside of farm products had decreased during the past 15 years. Mr. Ellis affirmed that wages, taxes, rents, etc., were higher to-day than they were ever before and then put the question, "How is it possible for the retail grocer to progress?"

Taking sugar as an example he showed that in 1910 it could be purchased for about half price it was twenty or thirty years ago, and this same state of affairs applied to many other staple articles.

Owing to the importance of this question of high living it was decided to have a committee draw up a comparative table showing the condition of affairs a couple of decades ago with that of to-day.

The matter of appointing a conspicuously attired collector was laid over for future consideration although it was decided that some method be formulated to overcome delinquents.

CAPITALIZED AT $10,000,000.

Dominion Canners, Limited, is Name of New Concern Resulting From Merger.

A Dominion charter has been granted "Dominion Canners, Limited," with head office in Toronto, to carrry on "business as manufacturers of, shippers and dealers in all kinds of canned goods, condiments, pickles, jams, jellies, preserves, table delicacies, grocers' sundries and supplies and prepared meats or foods," and " to manufacture and deal in cans, boxes, jars, containers, labels and canners' supplies, etc." The capital stock is named at $10,000,000 divided into 100,000 shares.

This is the incorporation of the company resulting from the recent merger of canning factories with which everyone in the trade is now familiar. Among the provisional directors is Garnet P. Grant, the promoter, but it will be some time yet before the directors of Dominion Canners will be announced.

There are as yet three important factories not in the merger and it is likely they will still operate as independent concerns.

TRADE NOTES.

Roy Cunliffe, of Medicine Hat, Alta., is opening a store at Suffield.

Griffin & Robb, general merchants, are opening a store at Seven Persons, Alta.

A new grocery store has been started at the corner of Church and Wellington streets, Hull, Que., by I. St. Pierre who has for many years been traveling salesman for the Geo. Matthews Co.

The Spice Mills of Herron, Leb'anc & Co., 573 St. Paul St., Montreal, suffered severe damage by fire and smoke last Saturday morning. The smoke from burning spices made it very difficult for the firemen to work. The building is five storeys in height and it was only the quick work of the brigade that confined the damage to the third floor. The damage will, however, not exceed $5,000.

Features of Mile Post Advertising and its Cost

Two Guelph Merchants in Different Lines Co-operate in Putting up a Series of Posts on all Roads Radiating From the City—Main Expense Lies in Initial Outlay — County Councils Quite Willing to Give Use of the Roads.

By H. Stanley Nicholson.

George A. Richardson, a Guelph hardwareman who enjoys a liberal share of the good country trade that comes into Guelph from the rich argricultural district that surrounds the place, has for the past fifteen years used as his principal means of advertising a system of mile posts, placed at mile intervals on all the main roads of Wellington County that lead into Guelph. From as far out as the first town or village on each of the main thoroughfares these posts, painted white with black letters, "1 (and from that up to 20) mile to G. A. Richardson's Hardware, Guelph," tell off the miles to people driving, motoring or walking into the city. After fifteen years of this kind of advertising Mr. Richardson is a strong believer in it. "I am sure I never spent money better in any form of advertising than when I invested in those mile posts," said he when giving a few particulars as to costs and maintenance of the mile posts and how to go about the work of establishing the scheme.

While enthusiastic about the idea Mr. Richardson was ready to admit that the initial cost was quite a consideration.

The mile posts he uses cost $3 each and he now has 72 of them, making a total cost of approximately $225.

They stand about four feet out of the ground and are made of good lumber, 12 inches wide and 2½ inches thick, being soaked in tar, then painted white and the advertising matter painted on in black letters. In order to preserve the posts they are embedded in foundations of small stones which are piled up around the base of the posts for a foot or so in order to keep them dry. The water in wet weather runs away from the little stone pile leaving the vicinity of the post comparatively dry.

Are Easily Maintained.

There is a good deal of actual work in getting the plan under way but once that work is done there is little left to do. The posts may need a little freshening up by the painter once every couple of years, but that is about all, if the lumber used is of the right sort and the posts have been properly treated and planted.

In this respect Mr. Richardson's experience is of interest. He has renewed his posts once in the fifteen years. That was five years ago when the old posts which had served well for ten years and were beginning to look delapidated were taken out and better ones put in their places. The second lot of posts were of better lumber and were soaked well in tar, and planted more carefully in stone bases. The result of the extra care taken is evidenced now, for after five years the new posts still look about as good as new.

The work of measuring off the distances one would imagine would be a rather tedious and expensive undertaking, as it would take a good deal of time. But a merchant can get this done cheaply by unskilled labor, or can let a couple of his clerks do it in slack times. All they will need is a chain to measure off the distances with. Mr. Richardson left the measuring for the contractor to do.

An Exclusive Ad.

It must be remembered that the roads on which the merchant may wish to place his mile posts belong to the county in which they are located. The county council, however, are easily dealt with. It can be explained to them by the interested merchant that the signs he wishes to erect will be of an attractive nature and will be subject to their approval. In making his appeal to the county fathers he should emphasize the benefits the posts will be to the traveling public who use the roads, dwelling upon the great convenience of the signs. Once the consent of the county council has been gained the merchant has insured for himself not only the right of way for the placing of his mile stone signs but the exclusive right for doing so.

The councillors who grant a merchant the right to erect mile stones along the main roads of the county do it in consideration of the fact that it is going to be a convenience to the public and consequently they will not make their county thoroughfares look ridiculous by having more than one series of stones erected or allowing them to be erected at more than mile intervals. A case of this occurred in Guelph some years ago when a merchant thinking that Mr. Richardson had a good thing in the mile stone scheme, thought, he would erect similar signs. He would have them every half mile he thought, and between every post that read, "so many miles to G. A. Richardson's Hardware, Guelph," he thought he would put a post with "so many and a half miles to Blank's store." Of course the county council would not think of allowing it. So in this line of advertising it's the early bird that gets the worm.

Two Merchants Can Co-Operate.

In the mile post idea two merchants in different lines of business can work very well together. They can use alternate sides of the signs to very good advantage, being in different lines of business the one man's ad. does not in any way compete with the other. They each have their ad. on every mile post but on the opposite side. This is done at Guelph, where G. A. Richardson shares his mile stone signs with C. L. Nelles, stationer. There is no particular advantage to either of them over the other for they use the coming and going sides of the posts alternately. This doe not lessen but rather adds to the interest of the ad. For instance a person driving along any leading Wellington County road, casually notices a mile post to see how much further he has to go and sees the name of Nelles' book store. "That's funny," he thinks to himself, "I thought it was Richardson who had those mile posts put up," and he watches for the next one when he finds sure enough Richardson's name is there. The edges of the posts when about 2½ inches thick, as they are here, allow space for more advertising. It is in Guelph where on the edges of the mile stones are painted "Lowest prices" which relates to both merchants using the sign and can be read in connection with either of the ads., depending of course upon the way the person reading is driving.

When the two merchants go in together in this way they materially cut down the expense and yet each gets his full share of the advertising.

LACK OF PRODUCTION AGAIN.

Even with the facilities in Canada for poultry raising and egg production, this country is importing eggs from far off Russia. The first consignment of Russian eggs arrived in Montreal last week having come a distance of more than 6,000 miles. They were brought here in view of a probable shortage of the supply of Canadian eggs.

Speaking of this condition of affairs, J. A. Gunn, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., said: "Unless the farmers of this country soon realize that they are letting slip through their fingers through indifference, the local market will be lost to them. It is a disgrace to the farming community of this country that dealers should be compelled to look abroad for a sufficient supply to provide for home requirements. Our exports in eggs have dropped to almost nothing and now we have to look to foreign countries for enough to feed our own people."

Questions from Retailers and their Answers

Grocer Declines to Replace Wilted Roses Which he Sold to a Customer Because He Claimed the Florist was to Blame—Result was He Lost a Customer—What Others Would Have Done—How to Figure Out Cost of Doing Business.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I handle flowers in connection with my grocery business and it has been a very profitable department. Sometimes I have trouble with a customer who says the flowers I send are not fresh enough. The other day I filled an order for two dozen roses. Next morning she telephoned that seven of them had wilted two or three hours after she received them, but that the remainder were excellent. She thought I should replace the poor ones. I said I was very sorry; it was not my fault; that I got them direct from the florist. If they were off, he was to blame, and I could not replace them. She said, very well, I shall not deal further with you." What would you do?

RETAILER.

Ottawa, Feb. 11, 1910.

Answer.—Probably the best method of answering this will be to give what other grocers would have done under similar circumstances.

The reply of one was: "The fact that this lady pronounced 17 roses from the 24 as excellent, suggests that what she said about the other seven was true, and as such, she had a perfect right to complain, and expect them either to be replaced or else their cost deducted from her bill. To put the blame on the florist from whom the grocer bought them is not fair nor in good taste to the customer. She bought the roses from the grocer and had nothing whatever to do with the party he purchased them from. When she telephoned to the grocer, instead of shirking the blame and putting it on the florist, he should at once have expressed his willingness to make it right.

"If he could not have replaced them, he should have cheerfully offered to deduct them from the bill, and then get square with the florist. If he had any doubt about the lady's representation, he should have sent for them with the excuse that he had to have them to show the florist in order to get his money from him.

"It was very unwise, I think, to say that he was not to blame and could not replace them. A customer is usually worth too much to drop her on so trifling a thing."

The reply of another grocer was similar. He said: "In that case I would certainly have either replaced the seven wilted roses or allowed the customer what she paid for them, according to her desire. It makes no difference to her the origin of the roses—it's the party from whom she purchases them in whom she is interested and that is quite natural.

"Supposing a grocer sold a customer two dozen 'fresh' eggs and seven happened to be stale, that grocer when confronted with the fact would scarcely say: 'I'm sorry, but it's not my fault—you will have to deal with the jobber who sold them to me.'

"Unless he wasn't particular about losing the customer he would explain that while it wasn't his fault he would be glad to replace them.

"I would have replaced the roses in any event and would have done so more readily if I myself had picked them out for her."

Wants Cost of Doing Business.

A Hamilton, Ont., grocer in renewing his subscription, asks: "I would be pleased if you could supply the following information, viz., what is the average net retail profit and the average net cost of doing a retail business in staple groceries."

In answer to the above it may be stated that the average net profit as well as the average net cost of doing business entirely depends on circumstances and varies in different towns and cities, and it also depends on the management. One grocer makes money under conditions where another one will lose. It may, however, be stated that the net profit over and above all expenses should be at least 8 per cent. and not less than 5 per cent. This, however, can only be ascertained by each grocer, by keeping account of his daily cash sales. Some find it too much trouble to keep proper accounts, from the fact that they are trying to keep track of the cash and credit sales. To save a great deal of trouble and have just as good results in the end, the daily cash sales should include all the money that was received from goods sold and also what was taken in that day on accounts for goods that had been sold before. If this is done, it is an easy matter to know the daily cash receipts. To find out the cost of doing business, find the weekly cost of rent, light, heat, telephone, help, horse feed, delivery, etc. Suppose cash sales for a week are $400 and expenses $52, then by multiplying $52 by 100 and dividing by $400, the cost of doing business in per cent. is ascertained. This is 13 per cent., the percentage on the turnover for doing business.

To get an approximate percentage of the profit made on any goods, the following is a simple method: Take a number of your bills as you sell the goods to your customers and determine what they have cost you. If this is done, say with 3 or 4 bills for several days, you will get a fair idea of the profit you are making by finding the difference between cost and selling price. When these parts of the grocery work are properly attended to, they offer inducements for greater effort to excel from week to week, besides providing the satisfaction of knowing what you are doing.

WANT RATES ADJUSTED.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 16.—At the conference of Canadian confectionery and biscuit manufacturers held here last week a committee of representatives of Upper Canadian firms, with C. Currie, of T. S. Perrin & Co., as secretary, was appointed to interview the Federal Government, with a view to having the tariff rates adjusted, by reducing the duty on raw materials, such as are used in the manufacture of candy. The matter of freight will also be brought to the attention of the Government. At present, Canadian firms are laboring under difficulties in this respect, as the freight rates from England to Vancouver, as well as other points in the west, is 25 cents less than from Montreal to Vancouver. The conference will be arranged with the Government as soon as possible.

WHO IS A RETAILER?

In connection with the query as to who is a retailer, a jobbing grocer in New York has some pertinent remarks to make on the subject.

"While they are making all this talk about who is a consumer," he said, "I would like to ask 'Who is a retailer?'

"According to my idea the retail grocer is the man who sells to his customers direct from his store without turning the orders over to a wholesale house to furnish at prices in quantity at much less than he charges his regular trade. When a retail grocer tries to do a business greater than he can carry on in his own store and becomes a middleman as between the jobber and the consumer he becomes a broker of rather uncertain standing and certainly not a retail grocer."

TRADE NOTES.

W. A. Lavash, Sydney, C.B., has sold to D. A. McLean.

John J. Keating, grocer, Montreal, died last week. He was a native of Halifax but has been in the Canadian metropolis for some 30 years.

Edward Aver, who has been head clerk for some time in McCasland's grocery, Paris, Ont., is going on the road for Geo. Foster & Co., wholesale grocers, Brantford, Ont.

Thos. McCready & Son, Ltd., pickle and vinegar manufacturers, St. John, have been altering their already large factory and making some necessary improvements which will facilitate the transaction of their growing business. A large new 100 h.p. boiler has been put in, replacing a 35 h.p. boiler. This will be used in connection with the firm's spice and pickle business. A new private siding from the main line of the railway has been completed, too. McCready's are now using exclusively for the making of their pepper, specially built corrugated steel rolls, possibly unique in Canadian spice factories.

Some Store Interior Arrangements in Montreal

Staple Lines in One Store Placed Where They Will be Handy for Serving — The Graduation of Shelves — Circular Display Stands of the Flower Stand Type—The Use Made of Bottle Racks.

Montreal, Feb. 17.—To have a grocery store that is arranged correctly inside may seem simple to the average man who has never tried his hand at it. Let him once set to work to put his ideas on paper and the store would not be built very rapidly, unless he has made a thorough study of all the needs a grocer has.

System is the basis of all good interiors. There must be a place for everything, and that place must be properly built for the articles it is to contain.

A new idea is in use in the store of Dionne & Dionne, St. Catherine St. West, Montreal. Articles are placed near the front of the store if they are in constant demand, such as sugar, tea, and other articles which almost every customer wants. Lines, for which demand is small are used for display purposes and stocked in the sections of the store where they are not quite so handy. The call is small and there will probably be five for sugar for one of some other line.

How Shelving May be Placed.

Good shelf room is an absolute essential to the up-to-date grocer. A good system is to have shelves graduated further apart below and perhaps only eight inches apart at the top. This enables a display to be made to better advantage, particularly on the lower shelves, which are those most observed by customers. Plenty of shelf room, and a neat use of them will do wonders toward selling goods.

By some grocers, a stand, somewhat after the plan of the old circular flower pot stand, is in use. For descriptive purposes one about six feet high will do, though an eight foot stand is perhaps better for its actual use. The six foot stand consists of six circular shelves, the lowest being about four feet in diameter and the top one only a foot. The intervening shelves are graduated between the two extremes. These shelves are fastened to a central rod, sometimes being arranged to revolve. In others they are stationary. For a canned goods display they are very useful. In the case of a store with pillars, such shelving can be built around them to any height desired.

Another form used for interior display is a table for displaying fruits and vegetables. This table has its top divided into compartments, in each of which is displayed a different kind of edible. One such table observed by the writer, was constructed cheaply, yet did the work of the more expensive, made-to-order article.

Some of the empty soap boxes about the store had been covered with stout burlap, after removing one end of the box. They were then placed on a cheap table, which had likewise been covered. Having the open ends placed outward, that is away from the centre of the table, it was convenient for both customer and salesman to inspect and demonstrate goods. The two soap boxes placed end to end were just the width of the table.

Bottle racks are also in use by some of the best grocers. These are not only for the display of liquors, which in Quebec are handled in large quantities by grocers, but catsup, pickles, olive oil, and other bottled goods, which are a part of every grocer's stock. They can be made attractive, and are not at all expensive.

Speaking generally on the subject of arrangement, it is a good idea to advertise the goods which are having a slow sale. Display them well in the store. At the same time staples should be kept where salesmen can serve them readily, as they are in perpetual demand, and time of service is one of the most important things the grocer has to consider.

As a last word to the progressive retailer, systematize your store from cellar to attic, and see that your system is preserved, or improved. Never let things return to the old state, before you decided that haphazard merchandizing was not good enough for you.

COST OF DOING BUSINESS.

Items That Should be Considered When It is Being Figured.

The following are some suggestions on figuring costs compiled by a business man and which should be of considerable value to the retail grocer.

1. Charge interest on the net amount of your total investment at the beginning of your business year, exclusive of real estate.

2. Charge rental on all real estate or buildings owned by you and used in your business at a rate equal to that which you would receive if renting or leasing it to others.

3. Charge in addition to what you pay for hired help an amount equal to what your services would be worth to others. Also treat in like manner the services of any member of your family employed in the business, but not on your regular pay-roll.

4. Charge depreciation on all goods carried over on which you may have to make a less price because of change in style, damage or any other cause.

5. Charge depreciation on buildings, tools, fixtures or anything else suffering from age or wear and tear.

6. Charge amounts donated for subscriptions paid.

7. Charge all fixed expenses, such as taxes, insurance, water, light, fuel, etc.

8. Charge all incidental expenses such as drayage, postage, office supplies, livery or expenses of horses and wagons, telegrams and phones, advertising, canvassing, etc.

9. Charge losses of every character, including goods stolen or sent out and not charged, allowances made customers, bad debts, etc.

10. Charge collection expense.

11. Charge any other expense not enumerated above.

12. When you have ascertained what the sum of all the foregoing items amounts to prove it by your books and you will have your total expenses for the year. Then divide this figure by the total of your sales and it will show the per cent. which it has cost you to do business.

13. Take this per cent. and deduct it from the price of any article you have sold. Then subtract from the remainder what it cost you (invoice price and freight) and the result will show your net profit or loss on the article.

14. Go over the selling prices of the various articles you handle and see where you stand as to profits. Then get busy in putting your selling figures on a profitable basis, and talk it over with your competitor as well.

Some Pointers in Regard to Store Architecture

How a New Brantford Grocery Has Been Laid Out—The Value Attached to Equipment and Shelf Room—An Extensive Confectionery Department — Floor Space Enlarged Show Increase in Business.

Brantford, February 16.—A little more than five years ago, Alf Patterson commenced a small grocery store at 149 William street, the floor space being 12 by 16 feet. Here, in spite of the many handicaps coincident with such a small area, the proprietor, by catering to the residents of the North Ward and to citizens in general, increased business has necessitated a large addition to the store accommodation. The store was recently opened to the public.

The grocery department has been moved from the north to the south side, in the new addition, which brings the floor space up to 42 x 27 feet.

Fine shelving and up-to-date silent salesmen have been placed here, everything in bulk being placed in air, mouse, and dust-proof bins.

In addition to the grocery department, Alf. Patterson also conducts a retail confectionery business. In addition a soda fountain has been installed, and ice cream and sodas will be served in the summer, the verandah at the side of the store, comfortably shaded, being used as an ice cream parlor.

In addition, the proprietor has also installed a refrigerator and cold storage room and will carry a stock of fresh meats.

Some Interior Features.

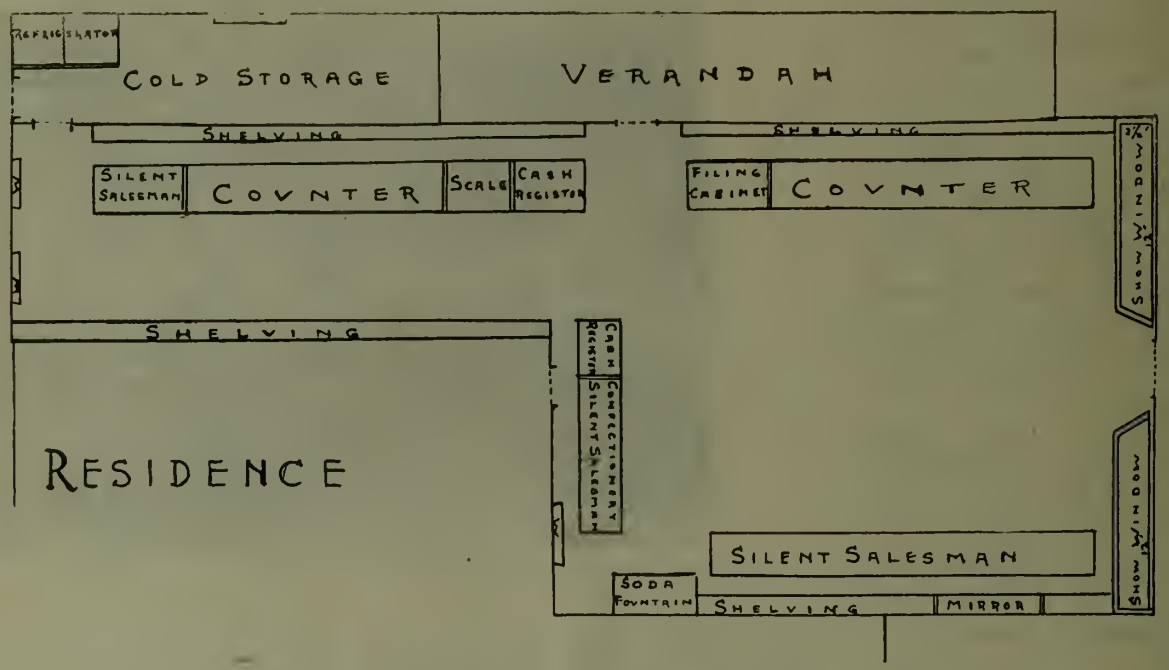
The plan of the ground floor here reproduced conveys a good idea as to how the interior is arranged. It shows that considerable attention has been paid to equipment.

Mr. Patterson has a filing cabinet, cash registers, computing scale, several silent salesmen, cold storage and a refrigerator.

The grocery section is on the right hand side and the confectionery department on the left. The store may be entered from the residence to the left, the entrance being into the confectionery section.

The verandah to the right, mentioned above is expected to be of considerable value when summer comes as a place for serving ice cream and soft drinks.

Another feature of the interior is the extensive shelving provided. This allows the display of samples of all goods to the best advantage.



Ground Floor Plan of Alf. Patterson's New Grocery Store in Brantford, Ont.

If a business man is not gaining he is losing ground, and if he is losing ground he should at once make it his business to find out why he is losing ground and to remedy the difficulty.

KNOWING HOW THE BUSINESS STANDS.

The necessity of looking sharp after profits has often been urged upon dealers. They should know exactly where they stand in their business, of the desirability of frequently taking account of stock, of knowing whether they are making or losing money, of knowing exactly whether they are making or losing on any particular article, and of the necessity, in order to carry on a successful business, of obtaining a fair, legitimate profit on everything sold.

There are dealers who know little about these things, who do not know from one year's end to another whether they are making money or losing money, and so they drag along from year to year, possibly getting a living, such as it may be, and a little more. They are, at any rate, receiving nothing, or little interest on the capital invested, and their own labor goes for nothing. There is no such thing as standing still. Either an individual or business house is going ahead or falling behind. There is no such thing as neither gaining nor losing ground. Either one or the other is being done. No man is in business for his health or for no purpose. It is not worth while to engage in business for a simple living in return. There is no incentive to ambition and no incentive to enterprise unless the outlook is for better things and improvement in financial conditions, and for, perhaps, ultimate independence and financial ease.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

Treatment of Clerks in the General Country Store—Application to Duties and Qualities They Require — Writer Believes Employer Should Know How Evenings are Spent.

By F. C. Williams.

The writer has studied the question of selecting clerks for several years with much interest and profit—perhaps because he himself commenced mercantile life in a general country store, on a salary of seventy-five dollars per year and board, and also because he feels that every clerk should have in mind from the first of his commercial career, the time when he himself will be owner of a like business.

A clerk engaging himself in the most important line of merchandising — the distributing of everyday supplies to the nation—enters upon a profession of no mean importance requiring as it does executive ability, breadth of view, and stern business sagacity.

A young man entering upon his profession, usually imitates those about him. He notes the neatness, methodical and precision of his employer with emulation.

Ruskin says: "When men are rightly employed their amusement grows out of their work." A clerk in his right place will not watch the clock, his duties will be pleasant rather than irksome.

The first thing for a clerk to realize is that every moment of the time between regular opening and closing hours belongs to the business, and should be used to the best interests of that business. No proprietor will object to a clerk's relaxing for a few minutes occasionally but a clerk is unfortunate indeed, if his employed permits or encourages his fooling away time.

Always Work to be Done.

I call to mind a very good saying of a traveler, a friend of mine in the days of apprenticeship, which I have never forgotten—"A person can find work to do every moment of his time in a general store if he is looking for it." And I have found this a truism. Habits of carelessness are costly, incurable, and contagious. Wasted time is the bane of many a life. It is this more than anything else, that cuts short preparatory education. Time trifled away, idled away, fooled away is what deprives many a life of success. This is a point of vast importance.

The love of fun and frolic, a craving for society, passion for good times overcomes many a young man of good abilities and intentions.

Havelock joined the army at 28, and for thirty-four years worked and waited for his opportunity, conscious of his power and fretting as a subaltern. But during all these years he was fitting himself to lead that marvellous march to Lucknow.

"I have been watching the careers of young men by the thousand in the busy city of New York for over thirty years," says Dr. Cuyler, "and I find that the chief difference between the successful and the failures lies in the single element of magnanimous powers." Permanent success is more oftener won by holding on than by a sudden dash, however brilliant it may be.

The easily discouraged who are pushed back by a straw are all the time dropping to the rear. They who understand and practice Abraham Lincoln's homely maxim of "pegging away," have achieved the best success.

Courtesy is Necessary.

A clerk should remember that courtesy must be accorded customers. That method, neatness punctuality, and politeness are requisites that must be given prominence, to warrant success. He should pursue his duties from a sense of pleasure, rather than from a purely sense of duty.

It pays to be patient, if it is tempered with prudence. The slowest plodder will sometimes develop into the brightest career.

Faults overlooked, I consider, is a serious mistake, for carelessness soon becomes a habit, and consequently a serious loss to any business.

I believe in treating clerks as I would wish myself treated—accorded as it were a "square deal."

Mercantile life to-day requires a constant intellectual growth. It is that which deepens and broadens, and makes a fellow greater than his calling.

As long as an employee performs his duties in the store satisfactorily, some one has said that it need be of no concern of his employer how the evenings and nights are spent. I believe the employer has a right to know how and where the evenings are spent. Personally, I would not engage or keep any help whose actions out of business hours were in any way questionable. I believe if the high standard of citizenship is always maintained in the store, that employes, as well as employer will catch the spirit of true success.

CERTIFIED GROCERS.

"Many of our readers who have the best interest of the individual grocer at heart will endorse the hope which was expressed by the President of the Liverpool Grocers' Association at its meeting on Tuesday, that the day is not far distant when the men who have charge of the food of the people will be 'duly certified grocers with a technical knowledge of the article they supply.' The object of the Institute of Certified Grocers is in that direction, and any movement which aims at raising the standard of efficiency among food distributors, especially among grocers and provision dealers, is worthy of sympathetic consideration and support. Modern trading conditions call for a high level of efficiency if the single-shop grocer is to hold his own against his gigantic many-branch competitors; the incompetent man is doomed to failure sooner or later."—London Grocer.

GETTING NEW BUSINESS.

Have you ever made an attempt to get someone else's customers?

It is well worth the attempt if you do it honorably, but the first rule of the game is to so hold your own customers that someone else won't get them from you. This is a practical art and can be accomplished in the right way. This way is to give satisfactory goods at satisfactory prices and to keep in touch with them at all times. To get the other fellow's customers the following rules must be lived up to:

Don't misrepresent him and his lines to the visitor who enters your own store, for the boomerang often hits him who sends it forth.

Don't let him get ahead of you with service, so that the customer desired goes where the greater attraction pulls him.

The customers of someone else are not hide-bound to him if you give them better values and better treatment.

Don't let your customers run to your competitor's sales for lack of something to buy at your own store.

NEW KIND OF SHOP-LIFTER.

A grocer in Portland, Me., U.S.A., was systematically robbed by a woman customer, and it took him only a short time to find out how she did it. This woman had a habit, not of taking small eatables as samples, but taking mere slips of paper. When her charge ticket was made out and the duplicate slip given her with her goods she waited until the clerk's back was turned and stole the copy—the grocer's only record of the sale.

Her monthly accounts looked small to the grocer. He kept his eye on this particular patron and his eyes were opened. The spindle whereon these slips were kept was rightly transferred to behind a screen and the customer's account was suddenly transferred several blocks down the street.

Fifty winterport steamers, which made returns at the customs house, St, John, N.B., up to Saturday, took away cargoes valued at $11,335,832. Included in the cargoes was 3,860,495 bushels of grain, 442,755 bags of flour, 43,729 boxes of cheese, and 3,436 head of cattle.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

A Merchant Doing Business on a Two Week Payment Plan — Experience of a Halifax Grocer in Selling Cough Medicine—Poetry Used in the Advertising—An Opinion on the Assesscent Act—Regina Grocer's Experience With a Lawyer.

On a Two Week Payment Plan.

Magog, Que., Feb. 16.—Starting six years ago with a small capital, Henry Chamberlain of this town has worked up a successful grocery business with the best class of town trade. He gives The Canadian Grocer credit for many useful hints in developing and carrying on his business; the evening it comes in, the daily papers are laid aside until it is thoroughly gone over. He conducts his business on a 2-week payment plan, which he finds more satisfactory than it would be to collect on delivering the many orders that come in by phone. Last year his store was moved from a corner on the main street to a short distance up across the side street. He arranged with the telephone company for a long wire and continued business in the store while it was being moved.

Customers Buy the Best.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 16.—There is a grocer here who carries cough syrup at three prices, 35, 25 and 18 cents, respectively. When a customer comes in and asks for cough syrup, the grocer pulls down a bottle of each kind and places them side by side before the customer, saying as he places his hand on the top of each bottle:

"This one is 18, this one 25, and this one 35."

Almost invariably the customer says: "I will take the 35-cent kind."

This is a pointer for grocers who sell cough medicines. The same idea may work with some other goods. The very fact that the price of the 35-cent kind is higher, creates a demand in the eyes of the customer. Of course, the profit is in the higher-priced kinds.

Poetry and Advertising.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 16.—Poetry as an aid to advertising is rarely employed, and when it is, it frequently degenerates into limping doggerel. J. H. Kadwell, who since coming out from England a year or more ago has conducted a successful grocery on Grand Ave., the other day used his two inch space in the local papers to lure the cigar trade with the following verse of a better type:

A cigar is good to aid digestion,
A cigar is good to chase dejection.
It brightens wit and adds a joke
And makes your troubles fly like smoke.

The advertiser appropriately adds: "Get your cigars at J. H. Kadwell, Grand Ave., opposite Thames. Phone 602K."

Assessment Act a Stumbling Block.

Orillia, Ont., Feb. 16.—In reference to the Assessment Act on which a number of views were recently given in The Grocer, Thos. Mulcahy, merchant, says: "It occurs to me that to tax the building and not the land is to place a stumbling block in the way of improvement and advancement, and that the present business tax discriminates in favor of the owner of a large and valuable stock of goods in a mediocre or poor premises as against the owner of equally valuable stock in premises of much greater value."

How Grocer Lost Three Dollars.

Regina, Alta., Feb. 16.—A local merchant has a good story to tell of how he considered he was 'taken in' a short time ago by a lawyer. One of his customers came to him and wanted to obtain a number of live geese. He pointed out that they would have to be brought in from the country and the extra freight and trouble would make them expensive. Expense, however, was of no consideration to him so the geese were secured at his special request. When they arrived they were taken to his residence. He was not at home but called into the store that evening to pay for them.

The geese cost the merchant exactly $9.50 and he asked the customer $10 in order to have a small sum for his trouble. The mention of that sum, however, seemed to startle the purchaser of the geese. He wouldn't pay it—it was outrageous, he said, and finally wound up by offering eight dollars and 'not a cent more,' and walked out of the store in a rage.

A few minutes after a lawyer came in and noticing the merchant in none too good a humor made some enquiries and discovered the cause of the trouble.

"Will you give me that account?" he asked, "I'll make him pay it if he is worth it."

He got the account. In a few days he called at the store again with a broad smile on his face. He notified the merchant that he had been successful in bringing the man to terms and laid down a five dollar bill on the counter.

"Five dollars only," exclaimed the merchant in surprise. "Why the account was $10—where's the rest?"

"Oh, that's for my trouble," he said.

The merchant was offered $8 by the customer; he got $5 and lost the customer into the bargain.

Have Adopted Cash Systems.

Granby, Que., Feb. 16.—Monty Bros., after due consideration and being convinced that it was the proper way to conduct business, especially a grocery business in connection with which there are so many small sales, decided some time ago to establish the cash system. They prepared a circular and had it delivered personally to every woman in charge of a home in the town and surrounding country, advising that from Monday —— they would sell only for cash. The circulars, they consider, were very effective. They launched the cash system in a manner which brought no disagreement with customers about credit.

On Sept. 1st, 1909, J. R. Horner also adopted the cash system. In speaking about it he said: "Years ago the way farmers realized from their farms made credit necessary, but now they receive cash for their maple sugar, syrup, eggs, etc., and monthly for their milk that goes to the factories; there is now no necessity for credit." The adoption of the cash business relieved him, he says, of much work and worry in connection with bookkeeping and collections.

WHY QUALITY WAS POOR.

Another Communication on the Question of Importation of Currants.

The Canadian Grocer has received the following letter from London, Eng., on the question of the importation of currants of good and poor quality:

Editor Canadian Grocer,—"We have read with considerable interest the letter of 'Subscriber' in your issue of the 21st Jan., and can fully endorse the remarks of their correspondent that if Canadian dealers get poor quality of currants they should blame themselves. During the early part of last year our senior conversed with many Canadian dealers in the large cities on the subject of dried fruits, and it was made abundantly clear that business was in many cases done direct with shippers quite unknown in the trade. Later in the year we made offers of currants to Canada, and in every instance we were informed that competitors were much cheaper. After many offers had been turned down, we made a special offer of a parcel of Filiatra currants at cost price, which, if the business had gone through, would have left us with a loss after paying certain charges—but it was turned down with the remark that competitors were offering cheaper.

"After this we came to the conclusion that it was useless wasting money on cables offering dried fruit.

"While in Canada, our senior was shown fruit purchased as 'Filiatra,' 'Amalias' and 'Vestizza' fruit—but the less said about it the better. In one instance he was shown a purchase that was absolutely worthless—such a purchase is dear at any price—even if made 1s. below ruling prices. Surely for the sake of 3d. or 6d. per cwt. it would pay the Canadian dealers to purchase from well known firms, who at least have a reputation to keep up, and then if by any chance there should be a slight difference in delivery, they would be able to recover. It would pay the dealers to regard that extra threepence as an insurance."

HOW TO MAKE MORE MONEY.

In these days of keen competition, smaller profits on individual sales and increased cost of doing business and of living, merchants and manufacturers must increase their sales. This is absolutely necessary if they want to grow and keep up with the times, to build up and extend their business, to dress, to live and to raise and educate their families in accordance with the station in which they are living.

There is only one way in which their sales can be increased—to increase the buying power of their customers. The great majority of the customers of the merchants and manufacturers of Canada get their money directly or indirectly from farming and manufacturing. Therefore it is necessary for us to combine to increase the buying power of the farmers and factory hands—to provide more money for them to spend. The farmers, however, are the most important class because on them also depend the manufacturers. The farmers of Canada are steadily increasing their revenues owing to the higher prices for most products, but they are not increasing the production of their farms to anything like the extent they should.

At the annual meeting of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association recently it was stated that "what was hampering the dairy farmer was lack of good cows, lack of information and lack of incentive and inspiration."

If the farmer were supplied with better cows, better information and the necessary inspiration, within five years every retailer in Ontario could double his sales and therefore his profits. In fact, his profits ought to more than double. His rent, heat, light, clerks, need not cost any more than now. The farmer is careful in his buying and is often more economical than we think he should be, but we are all the better for the moral influence he thus wields. As his income increases he is a generous spender — the most prolific spender of money with the retail merchants of any class in the community. Therefore it is very much to our interest as business men to help the farmer to make more money. It is very easy. The assistance the farmer needs must come from the Government. In nearly all the provinces of Canada now the governments have in their employ most valuable farming experts, but everywhere they are hampered by indifference of governments and by lack of funds.

Merchants should get after their members of Parliament and tell them they must insist on more money being spent to assist farmers to make more money. What is hampering the development in Ontario to-day is, as the speaker at St. Thomas pointed out, the neglect of the Ontario Government. It is for the business men as well as the farmers to ask the government what they are going to do about it.

TREATMENT OF CUSTOMERS.

A great deal is heard from time to time about the ingratitude or lack of gratitude on the part of customers. The question arises why shouldn't customers feel ungrateful if they do not get the goods and service paid for?

The customer goes to a store, purchases goods, pays for them. He pays the price asked and he has a right to expect good, straight goods, the full value of his money, and courteous, prompt and careful attention. This he is entitled to and he owes no gratitude therefor. There is no reason why a customer should feel grateful because he is waited upon and because he is treated courteously instead of with discourtesy, because the clerk is polite instead of insolent, and because the grocer is affable instead of crabbed.

On the other hand, the grocer, has a little more reason for being grateful. He is absolutely dependent upon the public for the support of his business and of himself, while the public is not dependent upon any one dealer; so that the grocer is rather under a compliment to one who patronizes him for their selection of his store as a place to purchase family supplies.

There is an inclination in some retail stores to treat customers with more or less condescension, with an air of having done them a great favor by selling them goods. The safest, the most logical and the most agreeable attitude to assume is the perfectly natural one that all are dependent and equally so, and it is not best to go too far into an analysis as to the extent of such dependence. In a broad sense, all classes and all businesses are interdependent and their existence is necessary to one another.

WHY WAS REQUEST DECLINED?

Towards the end of January a letter was sent out to various publications offering free of charge copies in the form of a supplement of the inaugural address of the Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Commission of Conservation, on the conservation of our natural resources and more especially that of our forests.

But the secretary, upon application to the Post Office Department for free transmission through the mails, was informed that the regulations forbade its distribution. He was therefore compelled to withdraw the offer.

This appears to be a matter deserving of an investigation by the government. The Commission of Conservation has a national object in view, the development of which will be in the interests of the Canadian people as a whole. Its great object is to prevent waste of our resources and as such, one would think, deserves especial consideration.

A government exists primarily for the benefit of the people and the rejection of a request for the free use of the mails for the distribution of such important free literature is entirely out of place.

An investigation as to the cause of the rejection ought certainly to throw considerable light on the matter.

RECOMMENDED THE BUTTER.

The merchant who gives such a service that his customers will recommend his store to others is following along proper lines. A retailer reports that not long ago he overheard a conversation between two women on a street car which made him feel quite happy.

He was sitting in such a position that neither saw him and neither knew he was there. The car finally passed his store when one of the women asked: "Do you deal at —— ?" pointing to his store through the car window. The other replied that she didn't.

"I do," said the first speaker, "and that's where you get the best butter in the town."

This shows that the scientific grocer should always consider his own store and methods of doing business from the standpoint of his customers. Because that retailer had a reputation for good butter his store was given considerable free advertising. He knew positively of one instance and had every reason to believe that it was recommended frequently in like manner.

His butter service had undoubtedly gained for him new business.

AGRICULTURAL NEGLECT.

It is clear from the comparisons of prices which have been shown in The Canadian Grocer that the present high cost of living has been almost entirely due to lack of production on the farm.

C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and a man closely in touch with the conditions of the farmer stated as much in a recent address when he told of the great influx of people from the country districts to the towns and cities. At the present time there are 62,000 persons less on the farm than there were 10 years ago, while the populations of the towns and cities have increased by more than 350,000.

A natural result of this is a decrease in production and therefore higher prices not only to the consumer but to the wholesaler and retailer as well—so far as the farm products are concerned.

That the farm is being neglected is shown by the figures quoted by Mr. James and until production is greatly increased prices will continue to be high.

MONEY IN A RETAIL BUSINESS.

One frequently hears it remarked by retail grocers that there is no money to be made these days in the grocery business — that is, anything which will amount to a competency.

The exceptions to this, however, prove that it is possible to make money. The case of a certain wholesaler who made his money in the retail grocery business with which to embark in the wholesale trade, is a case in point.

It means there is money to be made in the retail grocery business, and it means that the chances of success in the business are as good now if not better than ever before. The whole truth of the matter is that if industry, thrift, good business judgment and management are used, if the same ability is employed with the same good judgment as in other lines of business, the grocery business offers as good opportunities, as good chances in every way to build up a successful business as anything.

To-day the chief requisite is to get all the profit possible, all the rebates and discounts that are allowed, and to rigidly keep down expenses. The trouble with the average retail grocer to-day who complains that there is no money in the business is that he does not do business on business principles, conducts it in a haphazard way and stumbles along in the dark. He has no system, and he does not know at any time of the year whether he is making or losing money.

When a retail grocer makes the statement that there is no money in the grocery business he should ask himself what is the reason, and then proceed to analyze his own methods and affairs and apply the remedy. If he is a business man he can and will do this.

GATHERING KNOWLEDGE.

The salesman who is entering a store has an opportunity to learn the business before he assumes the responsibilities. It is a chance that many a merchant may well envy him. Many merchants had no opportunity to learn, save in the hard and crippling classes of experience.

And yet the case is not hopeless for the merchant himself. He has a chance to learn a great deal every day. In spite of the fact that his time is pretty well absorbed in the details of his work day by day, he can gather knowledge each twenty-four hours, acquire information and become a better merchant all the time.

A good many do not do it, however. They look upon business much as the high school graduate does. The season of study is over, and now the harvest is to be reaped. It may be a good harvest or it may be a pretty poor one, but the time for learning is past.

The graduate may learn that the time of learning never passes away, and so may the merchant. That time is always present. There are merchants to-day who plug along, doing pretty well, who are woefully ignorant of some of the rudiments of store economy. It is not too late for them to acquire these, and shame should never hold them back. It is not a matter of shame to be ignorant, but it is to remain ignorant, and the critical moment will arrive some time when it will be uncovered.

CLEANING THE COUNTERS.

When an apprentice is employed, one of the first things a grocer should do, is to teach him to keep the counter clean. He should not merely be taught to dust and polish it early in the morning, but to constantly keep an eye on every speck of dirt and dust that may arise during the day.

It should be clean and clear of obstructions ; parcels should not accumulate, and goods laid out for display ought to be removed quickly. Almost at the moment a customer leaves the counter, it should be clean and bright, ready for the next buyer.

One of the rules prevailing in some grocery establishments is that the assistant should clear away goods shown before the customer leaves, oftentimes keeping a client waiting while he attempts the double duty of packing a parcel and clearing the counter. This method may be carried to an extreme, for it is obvious that any delay in completing the work of serving a customer causes annoyance.

Counters, however, should be cleared as quickly as possible. Further, the modern practice of using too much of the counter space for the display of goods, curtailing the space for serving, is to be deprecated. It is quite possible to have a number of sundry articles ready to hand to show customers, to tempt them to buy if possible, without obstructing the counter by superfluous litter. This tendency to crowd too many articles on the counter requires checking.

NOTES OF A PHILOSOPHER.

Don't waste valuable moments on details that a subordinate can handle.

Don't shake hands with a man as if it hurt you.

Don't wait for fortune to smile on you. Fortune doesn't smile all the time. When she does, she usually favors those who hustle, not those who wait.

Don't show yourself too anxious to get an order. The customer will see it in your manner, and he will make the bargain, not you.

Don't allow your clerks to smoke while on duty.

Don't work all the time. Remember, even machinery needs rest.

Don't show many different kinds of goods at once.

Don't be satisfied with customers you have without attempting to get more. The successful man uses follow-up letters and other means to accomplish this purpose.

Don't be satisfied until you bring everything to a complete finish.

Great is suggestion! Instead of suggesting laziness to a clerk by accusing him of it, suggest energy and you will in time develop the quality you suggest.

What is successful salesmanship? Why, that which makes the customer want to come back to the store again.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Scarcity of Japan tea.
Advance in French walnuts of 3c.
Peanuts still advancing.

Montreal, February 17, 1910.

Trade generally is good notwithstanding Lent, and wholesale jobbers report that plenty of orders are coming in by mail, even shortly after travelers have visited certain territories. This shows that people have money and are living well, even if they do not eat meat except on the days on which it is allowed.

Sugar—The market is slightly weaker and the demand keeps steady for small lots. No changes in quotations have occurred.

Tea—The market continues firm with a steady demand for low-grade China greens. The stocks are running low in these China greens and buyers will be governed accordingly. There seems to be a scarcity of cheap Japan tea on the market, with a fair demand well distributed in all lines. No change in prices.

Nuts—Peanuts are still the feature, there being a firm market and a good demand. Prices are excellent and on the advance. The French treaty has occasioned a small change in the price of Bordeaux walnuts. The original cost has increased 1 1-3 cents, and the price quoted is from 28 to 30 cents. CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Lent has stimulated the demand for various lines. This includes canned vegetables of all descriptions for which there is an excellent demand with an upward tendency in prices. The market is very firm. Canned fruits have improved in demand to some extent and there is much room for betterment. Canned fish naturally are affected by Lent and the demand is increased being almost evenly distributed. The observation of Lent in Quebec province is very rigid and it is a natural sequence that better trade all around in canned goods outside of meat should take place.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Strong market.

Dried Fruits—Good demand.

Beans—Prices still firm.

Evaporated Apples—A quiet market.

Toronto, February 17, 1910.

The wholesale trade is experiencing more than the usual February dullness. The complaint is pretty general that trade is not what was expected. Perhaps the expectations, in consequence of the great crop were placed too high, which causes some disappointment. One jobber says that nothing was rushing but the expenses. He did not look as if he meant it, but he did say very emphatically that business was dull.

Sugar—The sugar market is strong. Raw sugar is especially active with large sales in New York. The demand for refined in Canada is also increasing, with prospects for a large turn over. Prices of refined sugars, however, are not changed.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Corrected by Wire.)

Weaker—Evaporated apples, Japan rice.

Stronger—Syrups, lard, beans.

Winnipeg, Feb. 17, 1910.

Wholesale houses have been doing splendid business with out of town customers who have come to the city during the Bonspiel. There are more visitors in town for the big winter sporting event than for several years back and of these a large proportion are retailers. All report good business conditions. freer money and less tendency to speculation than there was in the equally good business year prior to 1907.

The synopsis above gives the main features of the market this week. Speaking generally, values are being well maintained and, with the exception of two items on the list, there is a tendency towards still higher prices.

Sugar—The sugar market is strong. There is no actual advance to record but higher prices would not surprise those who are in close touch with the market. Quotations continue as follows:

Profit at Every Turn

You double your profit and make absolutely sure of her good-will every time you sell 40c. Red Rose Tea to a customer who comes for 30c. tea. When you recommend the 40c. tea you pay your customer a compliment she will appreciate. The pleasure she derives from the finer flavor and richer strength of the higher grade will be worth more to her than the slight increase in the price, and she will thank you. Less of this tea will make a brewing, but because it is so good the Family will use a great deal more. You profit at every turn of the transaction.

Canned Fruits and Vegetables—This market is still in a somewhat chaotic condition, but it is expected that definite quotations will be available in another week.

Rice—Japan rice is selling at $3.50, the lowest price in many years. Wholesalers are stocking heavily in the expectation of a reaction. The market is still weak.

Lard—Little Canadian lard is offering, the market being supplied almost entirely with United States goods.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Feb. 17, 1910.

The only special feature in the local grocery market this week is a decline in the price of eggs. The receipts of fresh laid stock increased considerably and as a result the market is much easier The wholesalers are now selling eggs at 30 cents per dozen, and they can be bought at retail for five cents more. This is a drop of about ten cents a dozen in the prices quoted a few weeks ago. It is expected that from now on the prices will gradually decline as the receipts increase.

Butter is in good supply. Large tubs continue to come in and the quality is good for the season of the year.

Produce is in good demand. Potatoes are only in fair supply and all stock marketed finds ready sale. This week a carload of choice Nova Scotia potatoes arrived here and they were quickly bought up. The price has been advanced ten cents. They are now quoted at $1.60 per bag. Canned goods are in good demand, and dried fruits are selling quite freely. Prices are pretty steady. Business is reported to be quite satisfactory for the season of the year, and collections fully up to the average.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Feb. 17, 1910.

Prices of general staple articles, such as sugar, hams, bacon, eggs and butter, remain about the same. The quality of butter, though it jobs at 40 cents does not remain the same. It is getting steadily worse. The retailer is having many kicks just now, and worry as he will, he cannot do any better. The standards, which never are supposed to have a strong taste, are as bad as the worst, and even eastern butter made over is not half bad just now.

The demand for potatoes has resulted in the importation of tubers grown in the Yakima valley in eastern Washington. That is an irrigated country and the potatoes are accordingly of the finest. More are on the way, as well as a car of Oregon onions. Local men are going in more for growing vegetables under glass.

Halibut reached a record price locally when it climbed to seven cents, consequent on the effect of the boycott causing greater demand for fish. Across the line, it was 10½ and 11 cents. It is stated that the Canadian market is much steader which is the reason of the big difference in price. Storms, too, on the coast, were the cause of a smaller catch.

ALBERTA MARKETS.

Calgary, Feb. 17, 1910.

The markets here have been steady of late with few price changes. Sugars are up 10 cents, and hams and bacon are firmer, and the same is true about beans. Fresh eggs are more plentiful, the retail price being down to 35 to 40 cents for strictly new laids.

A THREE MONTHS' LIMIT.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislature of the state of Massachusetts, U.S.A., to prevent the retention of food in cold storage for more than three months, and no articles may be brought into the State from cold storage warehouses in other States unless the date when the articles went into the warehouse be stamped upon them. This is more rigorous than even the testimony of Dr. Wiley would require, says the Philadelphia Record, and three months would not allow the cold storage system to render its perfectly legitimate service of equalizing throughout the year supplies of articles which are produced more abundantly at certain seasons than at others.

NEW COMPANIES.

The Metal-Bound Box Co. of Canada, Ltd., has been formed with head office in Montreal, to carry on the business of manufacturers of all kinds of boxes, baskets, etc.

The La-lo Manufacturing Co., of Newton, Mass., have been granted permission by the Dominion government, to carry on business in Canada in connection with their product "La-lo Spray," a dust layer.

The Mackey Specialty Co., has been granted letters patent by the Ontario government, to take over the business carried on by Diamond Cleanser. The head office of the company will be at Ottawa.

Desertion of Farms Causes High Cost of Living

People Flocking to Towns and Cities Lessens the Production Says a Deputy Minister of Agriculture—Where Supply and Demand Comes In—A Situation That Causes Alarm.

Toronto, February 17.—The general public is at last finding out the causes of the high cost of living in Canada. When such authorities as C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, says that supply and demand is responsible, there must be something to it. In an address which he made at the meeting of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions, this was practically his theme.

Mr. James was emphasizing the fact that the cost of living was due to the neglect of agriculture in Ontario, making known some startling figures not previously issued, which showed that there were now 62,000 people less on the land in Ontario to-day than there were ten years ago. On the other hand the towns and cities had an increased population of between 350,000 and 400,000. In 1908 there were 1,108,874 people on the land. In 1899 there were 1,447,016.

"Is there any wonder that the cost of living is leaping?" he asked.

"If the producers of this province," he went on, "supplying us with food are decreasing, not literally but actually, and the consumers of the towns and cities are growing enormously, it is natural that the cost of living increases. Isn't it about time we woke up and realized that upon our agricultural welfare depends our welfare.

"It is estimated that the City of Toronto has a population of a little over 400,000. That is away in advance of the assessed population. The difference between the decrease of rural population and the increase of city population in the province is over 350,000. That is the change during the last ten years in Ontario between producers and consumers.

Agricultural Neglect.

"You can understand why the prices of food have been going up. It won't do to tell us it is the fault of the cold storages which were up for the express purposes of preserving food in cheap seasons so that it could be used in dear seasons. It won't do to tell us that it is the middleman. He doesn't get it all. The middlemn is in the business to make money.

"It seems to me that the whole key to the situation is this neglect of agriculture in Ontario. You as farmers, say, 'It is all the better for us. We get bigger prices.'

"But there are some of us in the cities who are feeling the pinch. It seems good to me that we have felt the pinch. It has done the whole country good. For the first time the people of this country are wideawake to the importance of the agricultural interests. Get down and touch the pockets of the people in the cities, and they will think over these things. The agricultural problem before this country is so important that it needs the co-operation, not only of the agricultural societies, the live stock societies, and fruit-growers' associations, but of the people in the towns and cities. Otherwise I don't know what we are going to do. Even the present position of high prices do not benefit the many farmers who were not wideawake.

"I am not sure that the prices did not get a little too high just recently, and an instance of what bad effects such a state of affairs have, was given. People said 'We will quit eating beef,' and straightway began to consume some other product. The result is that the prices of this will jump and at that rate of reasoning the people will jump to something else. Such action disorganizes the whole world of commercial industry.

"Keep things at a fair, steady average price, and it will be more to our interests than this see-saw of high and low prices. The bacon business in Ontario had been an instance. Packers and feeders of hogs are now wondering what is going to happen."

PERSONAL NOTES.

Practically the entire staff of every department of the wholesale grocery house of Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, Ont.—the only exceptions being the travelers who were too far away to get there—joined in having a jolly good time at the Tudor Inn recently. Fred T. Smye occupied the chair, and during the evening a presentation of an address and a fountain pen was made to Maurice Festing, who recently left the employ of the firm to open a retail store. A presentation was also made to Jno. Mathieson of a gold watch. He has been appointed western representative of the firm. Speeches were made by Harry Taylor and Alex. Fraser, and a general good time was the result.

R. C. Blackburn, for more than five years one of Davidson & Hay's Toronto traveling salesmen, has severed his connection with that firm to become the the western Canadian representative of W. G. Patrick & Co., manufacturers' agents and importers. He will have his headquarters in Winnipeg and will make two trips annually to the Pacific coast. Mr. Blackburn spent 4½ years with H. P. Eckardt & Co. in the office and sample room prior to going on the road for Davidson & Hay. Last Saturday the latter firm made him a presentation of a beautiful case of pipes, with cigar and cigarette holders, etc., Col. Davidson making the presentation.

TO MANUFACTURERS AND SHIPPERS:

Dear Sirs,

We beg to advise having opened up a Branch Office and Warehouse in Regina, Saskatchewan, to take care of the Jobbing at Regina, Moosejaw and Saskatoon.

We are satisfied a Commission House located in Regina can serve manufacturers and shippers in a more satisfactory manner than Commission Houses located in Winnipeg. The following are comparative distances:—

REGINA	357	miles from WINNIPEG
MOOSEJAW	398	" " "
SASKATOON	337	" " "
MOOSEJAW	41	miles from REGINA
SASKATOON	160	" " "

You will therefore readily see the great advantage a Commission House located in Regina will have over those located in Winnipeg—"THE MAN ON THE SPOT," all things being equal, will command the business. We are very pleased to state our Regina Branch will be in charge of a competent and energetic manager, who has had a long and thorough training in our Home Office in Winnipeg, and understands every branch of the Commission and Brokerage business.

If you are open to appoint us your exclusive agents for Saskatchewan please communicate with NICHOLSON & BAIN, Regina, or NICHOLSON & BAIN. Winnipeg.

WAREHOUSE—We have ample Storage facilities at Regina and can handle on consignment carloads of all kinds of merchandise for sale to the Wholesale Trade.

To the old and valued firms who have for years been doing business with us at WINNIPEG, CALGARY and EDMONTON, would ask that you pass all business for REGINA, MOOSEJAW and SASKATOON through our new branch, NICHOLSON & BAIN, Regina, and all letter or wire communications will have their prompt and careful attention.

We are open for some first-class Agencies for SASKATCHEWAN, and solicit your enquiries.

Yours truly,

NICHOLSON & BAIN,

Hogs were Higher in 1882 than they are To-day

Present High Prices Will Stimulate Demand — Ontario Butter Going to Pacific Coast—Poor Quality Reported in Connection With Current Arrivals—Egg Situation Considered on the Whole to be Healthy.

In spite of all that has been said and written about the causes of the cost of living, the natural law of supply and demand will work on undisturbed and eventually solve the problem, not merely in theory but in reality. While some are trying to attach the blame on changed methods of handling the goods, we find that hogs reached even a higher point in 1882, when these conditions did not exist. The good prices for hogs will naturally stimulate their production and the splendid facilities of our packing and cold storage plants to handle it to better advantage should be a guarantee to the farmers that they can depend on fair prices for their hogs.

The butter market has much improved during the last several weeks. While large quantities of our creamery butter have been held without any visible outlet, a good demand came almost unexpectedly from Vancouver, which had a very brightening effect on the situation.

The cheese men also have no reason to complain. Things look much better than they did some time ago, and the year will end up before the new make will be available, with nothing more than a needed surplus in our hands.

The egg situation also has nothing of a serious character connected with it. While the stocks are not heavy, they are considered with the constantly increasing receipts of new laid eggs, to be quite sufficient to carry us comfortably to the end of the season. It is quite true that a quantity of eggs have been imported from Russia, as an experiment, but this was done more from a speculative standpoint than from a matter of absolute necessity.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Business is good, decline in lard having been maintained. There is a general weakening of the market, which is, no doubt, due to Lent; in fact, Lent seems to be a factor on which to blame either a rise or fall of the market in any branch of trade involving meat. There is no change in prices, with the exception of dressed hogs, which are now quoted at $12 a hundred.

Provisions—The provision market is less active than a week ago. The supply of hogs is even growing smaller. This is, however, owing to the time of the season, and is nothing more than was expected. The winter-fed hogs generally reach the market during December and January, and for several months following, hogs become scarcer. Butter—Last week we had the good news to report that the quality of fresh-made butter was much superior to what it was last year, but it is regrettable that such a condition of affairs has not continued, for the complaints about bad butter are galore. There is never enough difference made in the price of good and bad butter and this has much to do with the poor quality. Good butter is in demand, but the poor quality is rapidly accumulating and must be sold at a loss.

ruary 8th amounted to upwards of 80,000 barrels. The warehouses established at St. John and Havana by the New Brunswick Government have been a great assistance to the shippers in opening up this market. New Brunswick potatoes are now practically the only ones in the Havana market, and the dealers in New Brunswick are assured that they have captured the market and future business. The daily consumption of tubers in Cuba is about 2,000 barrels, and a fine market for New Brunswick potatoes is now available.

Are Farmers Advised to Hold for Higher Prices?

Some Light Thrown on the Bean Industry, Which May Explain High Prices—Half of Bean Production Said to be Still in Hands of Growers Because Institutes Advise Them to Wait.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 16.—At the recent convention of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association at Detroit, N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Company, of this city, and one of the leading authorities upon the Canadian bean industry, read a paper which discussed the present bean situation in Canada in considerable detail and cast a great deal of light upon the present position of the industry.

Mr. Stevens' address was in part as follows:

"The large quantities of beans our people are consuming now, compared with what they did a few years ago—and our crop apparently not much larger—practically means that the Canadian people this year will consume our whole crop.

"We are in about the same position as we were in 1908, as we didn't carry any old beans over in stock from the crop of 1907, neither did we carry over any beans of the crop of 1908, therefore, we have only the crop of 1909 to deal with.

"The forepart of the season was more favorable for producing beans, only about the time when the beans were in blossom we had a pretty long dry spell, and some of the early beans didn't pod as well as they might have done.

Advise Holding Back.

"Canadian farmers have a good many Farmers' Institutes, and discuss important questions that apply to the product of the farm, in producing crops, harvesting, and last, but not least, in marketing the crop. We believe the advice generally to farmers from their Institutes has been to hold back their grain, also their beans, and although to-day over half of the season for consuming beans or getting the beans to the place of consumption—namely, distributed among fishermen, lumbermen and mining districts—has passed by, yet from the best information that I could get hold of, it appears fully one-half of the quantity of beans raised in 1909 are still in the farmers' hands, holding for higher prices. Whether they will be able to force the price up or not it will take time to tell. As soon as spring comes and the gardens produce the vegetables, and the hens get off of their strike and all start laying again, so that we will have plenty of eggs and vegetables, people can live without beans at an extortionate price and the farmer may be glad to sell his beans at the present prices or less.

"Many a venturesome business man who has been honored with the title of being called a 'bull,' has held his grain too long and markets have broken and he has suffered a heavy financial loss; and if the farmers play at the same game it is possible they may experience the same results.

"The quality of our beans grown in 1909 is very good. The average quality would scarcely pick over two pounds to the bushel. The beans are hard and should save well, so that the farmer is not likely to have much loss by beans being damaged while in his granary.

"We probably had about 50,000 acres of beans in Canada in 1909, and produced about 850,000 bushels.

"The first beans to market, bought on a hand-picked basis, brought the farmer about $1.70, but they dropped in price until about $1.50 on a hand-picked basis was paid. To-day the farmer is getting about $1.80, basis hand-picked, delivered at the warehouse."

English Flour Market Showing a Price Decline

No Changes Occur on the Canadian Market — Millers Claim Flour is too Low for Present Price of Wheat—Cereal Demand Fair.

The flour situation has no new features this week. The usual and uncontrol'able fluctuation in wheat continues without getting far away from a certain point. Flour has practically been at a standstill so far as prices are concerned for some time, although the English market is easier, with a decline of one shilling per sack.

The stocks of wheat in the hands of farmers in the Northwest are variously estimated, but the general opinion prevails that they hold more than was previously supposed.

MONTREAL.

Flour—The fluctuations in wheat have not affected the flour markets and steadiness rules, with a strong demand. Millers seem well satisfied with the market and as these lines are the necessities of life, it indicates that buyers have money.

TORONTO.

Flour—There is practically no change in the flour market this week. The market is just fair, according to the millers, with the price of wheat too high for the price of flour. Export demand for flour is easier, which makes it impossible for them to raise the price.

Casgrain, J. W. Weldon, E. M. McDougall, J. J. Creelman, and S. J. LeHuray, all of Montreal. The capital stock is placed at $4,500,000 divided in 45,000 shares of $100 each.

SYSTEM OF PAYING COLLECTOR.

Change Made in Method of Financing Debt Collection Deparement of Chatham R. M. A.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 16.—Following the retirement of W. M. Murdock, as official collector for the Chatham Retail Merchants' Association, Ernest Askunas, of Wallaceburg, has been appointed to the post, the action of the executive in naming him being ratified a few days ago by the association. Mr. Askunas also succeeds J. W. Powers as secretary, the latter being compelled by pressure of other duties to relinquish his position with the Retail Merchants.

Simultaneously, the collection system is placed upon a somewhat different basis. In return for all his services, Mr. Askunas is to receive the $10 membership fee of each merchant in the collection department, his salary being payable at the rate of $50 a month, any excess over that amount going to Mr. Askunas every six months. This fee covers all collections within a radius of three miles of Chatham. The collector is required to call upon each debtor once a week, or following the debtor's pay day, unless the debtor volunteers to make regular payments at the office. Moneys received by the collector are to be banked at least weekly, a separate bank account being provided for this purpose; the receipts being distributed to the merchants once a month. Upon collections made outside the three-mile limit the collector is allowed a commission of 5 per cent. where the collection is made by letter; 10 per cent, where a call is found necessary, and 10 per cent, and court costs in the event of collection being made by suit.

The collector also looks after the delinquent list. A completely new list is to be issued once every three months; while monthly lists, showing the names of debtors added, as well as those entitled to be "scratched," is also to be furnished each member.

It is proposed to supplement the slow pay list with a list of "hopeless deadbeats"—those with whom it is found impossible to accomplish anything.

Though his headquarters will be at Chatham, Mr. Askunas will, for the present, at least, continue to look after collections for the Wallaceburg association, where since his appointment he has done notable work in realizing upon bad debts.

LYMANS Ltd., Montreal, Canadian Agents.

I MUST have seen that same picture every day for the last five years.

And yet, Brother Grocer, 'tis only yesterday that the lesson was brought home.

It represents the Landing of Julius Caesar in Britain many centuries age.

A seacoast scene with a handful of Roman galleys in the shallows surrounded by the stalwart splashing Britons, seeming numberless as the sands they fell on.

And yet the handful won.

Because, you see, they had efficient arms and armor, and the Britons nothing but rude handwrought weapons to back up their real courage.

So Caesar landed, and, as he says in his own Commentaries: "I came—I saw—I conquered."

THUS, Brother Grocer, is it obvious—

That, other things being equal, he conquers who is best equipped.

You ask yourself why is Jones more prosperous.

More popular with the housewives.

Always encroaching on your trade, poaching on your preserves.

Since he is not a better salesman, since his location is no better, perhaps it is a question of service.

And service, Brother Grocer, means better goods, better staples, better flour.

IF YOU don't handle FIVE ROSES flour, it doesn't really matter what brand you do keep.

For Jones can (and may) sell a better brand than yours any day.

But if you sell FIVE ROSES, then it's no longer a question of price.

It is Service, quality, value received.

You feel that you have a success brand—your customers tell you so.

You are not worried by complaints nor nagged by praise of the other man's goods.

For FIVE ROSES guards your interests from invasion—your cash drawer from attack.

It supplies the armor of quality, the power of efficiency.

'Twill help YOU land on the crest of the wave, Brother Grocer.

So do the thing—and do it NOW.

The Grocer's Encyclopaedia From Week to Week

The Food Value of Currants—More Nutriment Than in Beef, Says Eminent Physician—Usedat Almost Every Meal by Grecians—What the Germans and Hollanders Think of Currants.

From recent analyses of samples of dried currants the fact has been verified that the fruit contains no less than 73 per cent of sugar in its most valuable form, writes Francis Henry Laking, M.D., physician to King Edward. This great saccharine proportion is already in the form of grape sugar, and thus is potential to take up its work of producing and maintaining energy and vitality. It is what is known as "invert sugar—a composite of dextrose and levulose. It assists digestion, it allays nervous excitement and provides against nervous exhaustion. No fruit can show this large proportion except those of and kindred with the currant.

It should be more generally realized that in selecting articles of food to supply the constituents of normal diet regard should be had to the amount of potential energy in the material. It should be an easy matter to convince people that this or that food is good or bad. That certain things are abundant or deficient in essential food elements. For instance, let us make an interesting comparison, and one that should be quite clear to the average intelligence. I mean the comparison between the components of currants and lean beef. The currants show 73 per cent. of grape sugar, the whole of which contributes to manufacture energy; the beef contains no sugar at all. Currants contain 1.77 per cent. of proteid; the beef 19.3 per cent. In currants there is but 20 per cent. water; in beef 72 per cent., the bulk of which is waste.

More Nutriment Than in Beef.

The important fact here disclosed is that there is 54.87 per cent. more total nutriment in the currants than in the beef. Indeed, I am not wide of the mark when I say, even eaten alone, the the currant contains nutriment in all sufficiency.

In the dietary of the peasant classes of Greece, a people remarkable for their hardihood and health, the currant appears at almost every meal—while in Germany and Holland currant bread is a common article of food. Indeed, amongst the many shapes in which the currant may be brought to table, bread made of, say, 30 parts of currants to 70 parts of dough is one of the best.

Currants contain in the right proportion certain valuable acids, such as tartaric, citric and malic. These acids, while having wholesome individual properties, besides being refrigerant, antiseptic and antifebrite, serve to modify or adjust the flavor of the sugar and help the other nutriment components of the fruit to readily deliver themselves up.

It will thus be seen that the masses have at their command a delicious article of food, which costs the merest trifle, and of which they would surely and readily avail themselves did they but know its value. The middle and upper classes, those who are, in a sense, indifferent to food regarded in its dietetic aspect, but who select it mainly for flavor, have an important adjunct to the table, which gratifies the palate and operates as a liberal auxiliary to health and well being.

Useful as a Diet Food.

For children and those who must of necessity adopt a "diet," currants, properly treated and prepared, will prove a digestive aid and act as a gentle and natural laxative.

Almost the whole of the sugar in the currant consists of invert sugar—that is to say, of a mixture of dextrose and levulose; there is not any cane sugar present, but in some cases there is a very slight predominance of dextrose or crystalizable fruit sugar.

A second and not less striking fact, was the smallness of the proportion of woody fibre, or cellulose, the essential and chief constituent of wood, husks and skins. From the appearance of currants one might imagine that a very large proportion of the article was made up of skins. As a matter of fact, the insoluble proportion of the skins, that which would not be capable of digestion, is remarkably minute, amounting to only 1 per cent. or less. In other words, there is no more fibrous matter in currants, in spite of their appearance, than there is, for instance, in brown bread. This fact is further confirmed by the enormous proportion of total matter soluble in water which, added to the moisture naturally present in the currants, makes up from 96 to 97 per per cent. of the total weight. Currants, when their skins are broken, are almost wholly soluble in water, only 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. remaining undissolved, and of this small proportion three-quarters go into solution during digestion.

While it is clear that by far the chief value of currants as an article of food depends upon their contents in saccharine material, in regard to which they are equalled, yet not surpassed, by a single natural food product, namely, honey—their contents in organic acid (mainly consisting of tartaric acid) is of considerable importance. The acidity amounts to about 1½ per cent. It covers, modifies and to some extent hides the enormous proportion of sugar. Furthermore, there can be no doubt that dietetic value must be ascribed to the potash which, in the form of cream of tartar, always accompanies the tartaric acid of the grape.

Fish — This has been a fish week. Three Ember-days occurred during this week and the demand has been heavy. Prices are advancing and a change will be noticed in most of the current quotations. There is a scarcity in pike and haddock and prices are likely to advance. Frozen herring have come in in good supply and Tommy Cods are more plentiful than usual. As a consequence prices have sagged. The market is active and business is exceptionally good in all departments. Consumption all through the province of Quebec has increased since Lent set in and higher prices may be expected for nearly all popular fish.

Green Fruits—Apples are getting to be almost an eyesore on the market. The sales are altogether too slow to suit the dealers. Many varieties are getting past their time, and are depreciating in value. one dealer said that he was tired looking at them, and nothing but loss stares most of them in the fact. Not only here, but the English market is a heavy loser to exporters. Apples are waiting for buyers at from $1.50 to $3 a barrel, according to quality and variety. A good many of the navel oranges are still frosted and risky to buy. A shipment of strawberries called the "Pride of Florida" arrived during the week and are selling at 60 to 70c a quart box. Pineapples are in good demand and regardless of all the noise of high prices are selling at $4.50 a case, while our own apples are rotting at one quarter that value.

of fresh vegetables are available and the prices do not seem to stand in the way.

BETTER BASIS FOR FISH TRADE.

Object of the Recent Merger of Eastern Fish Companies.

Montreal, February 16.—In reference to the merger of fish concerns recently reported, A. H. Brittain, Montreal, with the Atlantic Fish Co., confirmed it stating to The Canadian Grocer that the Canadian fisheries, which were the finest in the world, had not been properly developed owing to lack of capital and organization on the part of those interested. "There is no intention to increase prices but it is hoped by the present merger," he said, "to put the business

To The Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh and clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clear money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

The firms in the merger are: The Charles Robin Collas Company, Limited, of Jersey, with head office at Halifax and some thirty branches, many of them on the Gaspe coast; A. G. Jones & Co., Halifax; Zwicker & Co., Lunenburg; The Atlantic Fish Companies, Limited, of Lunenburg, with branches at other points.

The capitalization of the new corporation and other details of the merger have not yet been announced, and the name of the new concern has not yet been finally decided upon. The settlement of these and other details will be a matter of a short time.

In the meantime the parties mentioned have agreed to become participants in the merger. The deal was accomplished through the Bank of Montreal.

Increase Fish Profits by Means of Telephone

Good Opportunities on Fast and Abstinence Days During Lent —The Use Made of the Phone by a Montreal Retailer—Calls up Prospective Purchasers Regularly and Adds Greatly to His Annual Sales.

There are many grocers who make it a practice to call up by phone their regular customers on special occasions, suggesting a particular line of goods which is appropriate to the day or season.

For instanee, during Lent, there are certain days upon which a great many eat no meat whatever and then is the time for the grocer to make good capital out of his fish department.

Some retailers make it a point in Lent to keep so close to their customers by the use of the telephone that they secure their entire fish trade. During the morning of every fast and abstinence day of every week they make enquiries about the fish order for that day, suggesting the lines of fish they have on hand and advising their customers what to purchase.

In order to do this, retailers must know what these special days are. Every day in Lent is a fast day. With the exceptions which are stated below, meat may be eaten but onee every day.

Wednesdays and Fridays of every week during Lent are known as fast and abstinence days and no meat is eaten during them. The Ember-days this year fall during the present week and are Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. They are fast and abstinenee days, and Saturday before Easter Sunday is also a fast day.

With this knowledge the retailer has something definite to work on, because he knows exactly when fish will be in demand by certain of his customers and when it will be in the greatest demand.

That this information is valuable is exemplified by a Montreal grocer, who claims he has greatly increased his fish sales this season in this way. Every Wednesday and Friday morning he or his salesmen enquire by phone as to whether his customers desire this or that kind of fish, which they have just received, and in a good many cases orders are secured which otherwise would never have been filled or which would have been filled by some one else.

This is attended to not only in Lent, but throughout the year, so far as Friday is concerned, and his fish sales are thereby greatly augmented.

The Montreal retailer does not stop at fish, but uses other seasons of the year to advantage—particularly the fruit season. He calls up customers who, he thinks, will be interested, mentioning new fruits he has just secured and advises them to purchase, always being careful that it is a favorable time for them to do their buying. Also, when he has some particular article in which he wishes to interest his customers he uses the phone to good advantage, so that during the whole year, by exercising a little judgment and forethought, he manages without much trouble to make a good many extra sales and therefore increases his profits.

DEATH OF FISH MERCHANT.

Daniel Hatton, head of the wholesale fish company bearing his name under the style D. Hatton & Co., died Saturday, Feb. 12, at the Western Hospital, Montreal. He was born in Montreal 65 years ago. After spending a few years of his life in the United States he returned to his native city. In 1874 he established the fish business which developed to its present proportions, chiefly through his own ingenuity and enterprise.

Mr. Hatton achieved many real estate interests and was considered wealthy outside of his business. He was a member of the Board of Trade, a life governor of the General Hospital, and was identified with several other institutions. He was the organizer of the boating club at Ste. Rose where he spent the summer for many years.

Government Standards Necessary for Canners

So Claim a Number of Speakers at Annual Session of National Canners' Association—Propose Name of Packer on the Labels—Canners Brought into Disrepute by "Slack" Packing.

Atlantic City, N.Y., Feb. 15—That a scramble for business among the canned goods manufacturers of the United States has resulted in making the merits of the product proportionate with the price, is the belief that is held by many of the packers who opened their big convention here last week. The keynote of the addresses was the necessity of establishing a Government standard for canned goods and a publicity fund of not less than $100.000 to bring the canning business to its proper standing. "Slack" packing and not inferior quality, the speakers said, had resulted in having the product of the canneries brought into disrepute from many sources.

Stories of ptomaine poisoning not founded on fact and printed in sensational newspapers and magazines was another reason given why the demand was not what it should be according to the ideas of the canners. In the matter of private labels, most of the canners apparently favor a Government standard which wil compel them to put their names on the labels and many of the potters and brokers taking the other side.

"Despite what may be said, it is a fact that our product is more free from germs than any other line of foodstuffs," W. O. Hoffecker of Smyrna, Delaware, said: "Many will recall that at the last meeting of this association, held in Atlantic City, we recorded ourselves as distinctly in favor of a national pure food law, and it was only a short time thereafter that the new law was passed, and we have been the ones who have always favored upholding its provisions.

"There is one shortcoming in the law, however, which should be remedied, and that is to have Government standards for all our goods.

"As it is now it is possible for unscrupulous canners to put up slack cans in any manner they please so long as there is nothing dangerous to the public health. Standards set by any State or National Association of Canners will never supply the proper remedy, as there are no means of enforcing the provisions. A Federal system of standards is the only method to reach the desired end.

Price-Cutting the Cause.

"It is hard to locate the blame for slack filled cans, but price cutting is largely responsible for the evils. It is absolutely unfair to have a differently decorated label, the only distinguishing feature between a standard and second grade of any canned goods. The label on seconds should bear the word 'seconds' in letters plainly visible to the consumer. Government inspection will either compel packing better goods or put the bad canner out of business; either would be preferable than present conditions."

"Canners look on the stories of foodstuffs being too high as a ghastly joke, from their standpoint," Pres. Craig said. "Entirely too many are now selling their product below cost in order to keep their plants going.

Mr. Craig also favored Government inspections and stated that the proposed dating law would work an unnecessary hardship on all who sell the goods. After a certain time, which is before they reach the consumer, it is easy to tell whether they are good or bad, and after that time the good product keeps indefinitely.

Mr. Craig also called attention to newspaper articles in connection with the use of sulphate of copper as a coloring for peas, and held that the ruling of the food officials on the permitting the use in imported goods was unfair to the domestic packers.

In the United States, he said, the canners of peas do not nor are they allowed to use artificial color, and that the present ruling admitting colored foreign products is wholly for the benefit of the importer.

Frank L. Deming of the Canned Goods and Dry Fruit Brokers' Association, made an interesting address on his branch of the trade, calling attention to the fact that brokers were a recognized factor in the trade ever since Joseph induced the King of Egypt to run a corner in corn.

WILL IT PAY?

This is the first question that is asked by any merchant when considering the purchase of modern store fixtures. The fundamental question is one of

ECONOMY.

A device is economical if

It adds cleanliness,
It is a convenience,
It makes labor lighter,
It makes labor more efficient,
It reduces the labor item,
It saves time,
It adds safety,
It adds neatness,
It helps the appearance.

IT SAVES MONEY.

Considered from these standpoints the

BOWSER

Self-Measuring Oil System is the greatest economy.

The question is not "Can I afford it?" because it will pay for itself with money that was before wasted. It's simply up to you to investigate. The merchant who tries to see how much he can really get by adopting modern methods is the one who pulls the largest trade.

Try the Better Way

That credit customer should not give you trouble at all. His business is as good as the cash customer's, and he will pay just as well if you use the right tactics on him. Don't jump all over him—don't be too loose with him. Just use the good, old, safe, sensible plan that has been tried and proved successful by thousands of grocers all over America.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate argumcnts. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10 — No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For Sale by the Jobbing Trade Everywhere.
Manufactured by

ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Ind

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

"Shell" Soap

Bramwell's Epsom Salts show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package. They are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

Reasons Why You Should Encourage the Sale of Better Grade Tea

It has greater fragrance and flavor, which are the chief qualities in tea, and found only in the higher grades.

It will make more tea.

There are about sixty cups more to the pound in the better grade.

It is always a matter of personal satisfaction to deal in the better grades of merchandise.

The Dealer gets larger profit from higher priced brands, 40% or more, against 25% to 30% on the low priced teas.

Borden's Brands are standard—

IT takes goods of known quality—standard goods like Borden's---to build strength into a retail business---the sort of strength that endures throughout the years, and by means of which a large volume of profitable trade is attracted---and held.

Always give prominent display to Borden's Brands. They'll repay you handsomely for your attention.

MR. GROCER,
Try the Better Way

That credit customer should not give you trouble at all. His business is as good as the cash customer's, and he will pay just as well if you use the right tactics on him. Don't jump all over him—don't be too loose with him. Just use the good, old, safe, sensible plan that has been tried and proved successful by thousands of grocers all over America.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

COPY P.C., 13.

Certified copy of a Report of a Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor-General on the 17th February, 1910.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,—

On a memorandum dated 23rd Dec., 1909, from the Minister of Agriculture, stating that the Eastern Canning Company had made application for the exemption of their establishment, situated in St. George, N.B., from the operations of the provisions of Section 3 and 4, and of Sections 6 to 10, both inclusive, of "The Meat and Canned Foods Act."

That the only meat product packed in said establishment is pork and beans, and the pork used therein is procured from establishments in which inspection is maintained under the provisions of said Act.

The Minister recommends, that so long as pork and beans is the only meat product packed in such establishment, and the pork used therein is procured from establishments in which inspection is maintained under the provisions of the said Act, the said establishment be exempted from the operations of the provisions of Sections 3 and 4, and of Sections 6 to 10, both inclusive, of the said Act. The Committee submit the same for approval.

THE HONOURABLE (Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Clerk of the Privy Council.

Four years ago Wagstaffe's Jams were unknown in Canada.

To-day Wagstaffe's Jams are sold from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

WHY IS THIS ?

Because they have that bright appearance and contain a rich, fruity flavor that is as sound as a bell. It is that, Mr. Grocer, that brings your customers back, like Oliver Twist, for a second helping.

"Will a McCRAY REFRIGERATOR make money for me"?

ASK yourself this question, Mr. Grocer, and let us answer it by sending you our Catalogue No. 66 which describes our special grocers' refrigerators. McCray Refrigerators not only preserve butter, delicatessen cheese, etc., perfectly and do it with less ice than any other kind, but they actually increase the sale of such goods. A McCray Refrigerator will protect your profits by keeping them from melting away in ice bills. We not only tell you this but we'll gladly prove it by hundreds of letters from grocers many of whom have doubled sales of certain goods at about half the former cost for ice. Remember Catalogue No. 66 contains information that means dollars to you, and a postal with your name and address brings it.

Plain Facts About Pure Maple Syrup--Something About "Pride of Canada"

¶ Pure maple syrup is made from the sap of the maple only. Sap runs during the early spring. In the Eastern Townships (Canada's premier maple producing district) this is generally the last of March or beginning of April, when it freezes at night and thaws during the day.

¶ You get a gallon of pure maple syrup from every 32 gallons of maple sap. Ever know that? It's hard to get all you want of pure sap.

¶ We get ALL WE WANT THROUGH OUR ASSOCIATION, and from pure sap only, make the famous "Pride of Canada" Brand.

It's the Brand to Sell if you want to Sell Pure Maple Syrup—and now is the Time to Order New Goods.

Power of the Secret Commissions Act Discussed

Retailer Expresses the Opinion That it Does Not Apply to an Agent and Principal, But Only to Two Agents—Thinks Traveler Should be Ashamed to Take Affidavit—A Business Man's Opinion of the Whole Question—Would Minister of Justice Express His Views?

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I have been reading your last issue of The Grocer in which you wish your readers to believe that because a traveler declines to take an affidavit that no rebates have been given he is crooked. In my opinion he would be an idiot to do anything of the kind; no storekeeper would have anything more to do with him and every traveler would point their fingers at him.

Now about this Secret Commissions Act—if it were intended to cover all you claim for it, it certainly falls short of it.

A certain Member of Parliament who helped to frame this very law and keeps a general store in this town will not back up your views. He says it would be an offence covered by this law to come to his store and behind his back give his buyer, while he is absent attending the House, a commission or rebate to buy goods at certain fixed prices from a certain house, but on the other hand if he were home and attending to his own business there is nothing to prevent him buying, making the best bargain he can by way of rebate or any other way, "he being a principal." This view is that two agents cannot come together and do certain things, but an agent and a principal can.

The party I refer to would tell you if you went to him with regulation prices for sugars that he could not buy at those prices and to sell him you would have to give him some concession and he gets it right along.

You cannot get a statement in writing from Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, the father of the Secret Commissions Act, to contradict this storekeeper's views either.

Where is the judgment in the Grocers' Guild case. Why don't you turn your paper loose on the length of time it takes Justice Falconbridge to deliver judgment?

WILLIAM WALKER.

The above letter from a reader refers to the article in last week's issue under the heading: "Refuse to Make Affidavit that no Rebates Were Given," dealing with the fact that some travelers had been called upon to take affidavit that they had not given illegal rebates. It was pointed out there that some travelers had refused to make the declaration while others did so.

The more systematic method of dealing with the points he questions will be to consider them in the order in which they occur.

In Mr. Walker's opinion the traveler would be an idiot to make the declaration even if he were not guilty.

Of course this point is merely a matter of opinion. A traveler is not obliged to take the affidavit even if he were not guilty of an illegal offence. But if he did not commit a breach of the Act, one would think he would be more than pleased to have the opportunity to clear himself in the eyes of his firm, his fellow travelers, and the honest retailers who feel it their duty to do the right thing.

An Actual Case.

The Grocer knows of at least one case in which a traveler to clear himself, made the declaration and he does not consider himself any the worse in the estimation of the retail trade, nor do any other travelers point their fingers at him so far as he is aware.

"I have not done what I'm charged with," he said, "and I am glad to be able to convince those who made the charges that they are not true."

"A refusal does not necessarily imply guilt," remarked a manufacturer in discussing the question, "but when you consider that the traveler is in the service of a firm who has declared by means of the Manufacturers' Contract Selling Plan that a refusal will be an admission of guilt then there is nothing left for him to do but make the declaration if he is not guilty."

The sections of the Manufacturers' Contract Selling Plan covering this point are as follows:

> 3. I (or we) further agree that when called on I (or we) shall give said manufacturer a declaration sworn to by any member of the firm or by any one in my (or our) employ designated by the manufacturer, covering the details of any sale of goods, in such terms as may be required by them where an actual or supposed violation has occurred.
> 4. Failure to comply with this condition will be considered a breach of this agreement.

A refusal therefore evidently goes far in establishing guilt.

"Then there is the further consideration that if the traveler does refuse, his firm will not be able, according to the Contract Selling Plan, to procure the goods from the manufacturer of them, to sell in future, until restitution has been made to that manufacturer," added the manufacturer.

The next view taken by Mr. Walker is that a principal or proprietor of a store can make any bargain he wishes with the agent of a wholesale house, but that agents of the two principals cannot.

In order that the reader may follow closely the opinion of a business man given on this point, the whole Secret Commissions Act is here reproduced:

Everyone is guilty of an offence and liable upon conviction on indictment, to two years' imprisonment, or to a fine not exceeding two thousand five hundred dollars, or to both, and, upon summary conviction, to imprisonment for six months, with or without hard labor, or to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or to both, who,—

> (a) being an agent, corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act relating to his principal's affairs or business or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person with relation to his principal's affairs or business; or
> (b) corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward or consideration to such agent for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act relating to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person with relation to his principal's affairs or business; or
> (c) knowingly gives to any agent, or, being an agent, knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal, any receipt, account, or other document in respect of which the principal is interested and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which, to his knowledge, is intended to mislead the principal.
> (d) Every person who is a party or knowingly privy to any offence under this Act shall be guilty of such offence and shall be liable upon conviction to punishment hereinbefore provided for by this section.

The most interesting feature of this Act so far as the retailer is concerned, is clause (d). This was an amendment added to the Act while it was in the Senate for the first time. The Senate sent it back to the House of Commons with this amendment attached. It was returned to the Senate with amendments agreed to on 21st April, and assented to on May 19th, 1909.

Thinks Principal Liable.

"If two principals met, the retailer in my opinion could make the best possible bargain," remarked the business man, "and the principal who is the wholesaler, if he sells under the fixed selling price of the manufacturer, must then deal with the manufacturer directly who says, 'Here you promised to sell at a stipulated price; you have broken your agreement and I shall therefore have to cut you off.'

"But if a traveler in order to make a sale to a retailer who is a principal gives that principal a secret rebate with the intention of misleading his house, that traveler, so far as I can see, has committed a breach of the Act and according to clause (d) the retailer who is a party to it is just as liable.

"A rebate becomes a secret one when it is given without the knowledge of the house who sells the goods which should be sold at a stipulated price. When a traveler therefore gives a secret rebate to get business in the case of fixed prices without the knowledge of the house and gets it back in expenses it's just as bad as stealing.

"If therefore the traveler paid the commission out of his principal's money I think it would be a breach of the Act and the retailer would be liable for accepting it."

With regard to getting an opinion from the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth to contradict or sustain the merchant's views, that would scarcely be possible for the Minister of Justice doesn't give opinions after bills have been passed. It is for the courts to give decisions on an Act as they find it and until a test case arises and a decision is given, every man, including Mr. Walker, is entitled to his own opinion.

Trade Prospects Between Canada and Bermuda

Possibilities are Great, But More Attention Should be Paid to Shipments Leaving Canada—Substitution Sometimes Indulged in—Disadvantage of a Slow Steamship Service—Officials Figures Quoted.

By D. Williams, Written for The Canadian Grocer.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 23.—The little city of Hamilton in Bermuda is perhaps for its size one of the busiest to be found anywhere. It contains a large number of shops and stores in proportion to its inhabitants nearly all of which appear to be busy. Just at this season of the year a large number of tourists from New York and other cities, with a fair sprinkling of Canadians are finding their way there for a few days rest or recreation, or perhaps to escape the rigors of a Canadian or United States winter. These with the ordinary trade of the town, combine to make business move pretty freely during the winter months. One thing that strikes the Canadian is the very friendly spirit manifested by the business people towards those of his nationality and the willingness on their part to encourage closer business relations.

In past years Canada has not supplied this enterprising little city and island with as much of the product of her industry as she might, but of late business men are waking to the realization of what might be done with ordinary business energy.

Only a few years ago Bermuda bought nearly all of her supplies from England and other European countries, and the United States. Of late, however, there has been a great change in this direction and during the past ten years Canadian trade with the island has increased more than three hundred per cent., while United States trade during the same period, although still large, has only increased about ten per cent.

These figures, from a Canadian point of view, are encouraging, but they are still far below what they might be or ought to be if Canadian merchants and manufacturers were alive to the possibilities of the trade. Most of the causes why Canadians are not sending more of their products of their industry to Bermuda are with themselves. One of these is the want of a faster and more frequent steamship communication. The once-in-twelve-days' service that now exists is altogether inadequate and out of date for present requirements and should be supplemented by one making it at least weekly.

Requirements Not Known.

Another cause is the apathy of Canadian exporters in not looking as actively for this trade as they should. While still another, and perhaps a greater cause than any other, is their ignorance of the requirements of the trade, and coupled with this, the unbusiness-like methods displayed in filling orders promptly when they are obtained. This latter trouble is no doubt due partly to the inadequate service, but not altogether. It should be borne in mind by Canadian shippers that Bermudian merchants are more British than Canadians in their ways, and when they order a thing, they want it and not something like it. They detest the practice, too common among some shippers, of substituting something nearly the same when the exact article ordered is not in stock.

Many merchants in Bermuda expressed their surprise that eastern shippers did not advertise their goods more in the trade papers than they do. It must be remembered that travelers are not every-day callers in Bermuda as they are in Canada, and as a consequence advertising in such trade papers as The Canadian Grocer, which is read extensively here, would be more productive of direct returns than ordinary.

There are many articles and products manufactured and grown in Canada that might be sent to Bermuda with profit to Canadian producers.

The following figures copied from the official returns of 1909, the last available, of what is being imported from Canada and the United States respectively should give Canadian exporters some idea of what might yet be accomplished. The figures given are value in pounds, shillings and pence.

	From Canada.	From U.S.
Butter	£11,471	none.
Beef	none.	£13,590
Bran	2,755	3,323
Cheese	2,934	1,242
Confectionery	21	821
Fish	4,643	745
Fruit, dried	1,044	1,587
Flour	10,749	8,237
Fruits and Meats, (canned)	543	4,745
Groceries	550	5,259
Hay	3,508	1,482
Lard	10	2,474
Meal	95	2,375
Oats	8,646	3,084
Provisions	847	16,376
Peas and Beans	255	1,323
Potatoes	3,718	884
Sheep	396	2,626
Soap and Starch..	170	2,702
Sugar	52	5,820
Tea	1,246	994
Vegetables	777	387
Eggs	1,147	928
Fruit, fresh	688	1,661

It will readily be seen from the above that the United States supplies Bermuda with large quantities of goods, many of which should be sent from Canada and could be if Canadian shippers were alive to the situation.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED.

Winnipeg, Feb. 23.—The regular annual meeting of the Western Retail association was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 17. After the report of the former meeting had been adopted, the president addressed the meeting, giving a review of the work that had been done during 1909 and spoke with no uncertain sound as to the great good that would result from the united efforts that are being put forth toward betterment in business as provided for in the constitution and by-laws of the association. When the regular order of business had been completed the election of officers for the ensuing year came up, resulting as follows:

President, W. T. Devlin; vice-president, Horace Chevrier; second vice-president, Andrew White, of Moosomin; secretary, G. J. Hyndman; treasurer, John Dyke.

Executive committee: A. T. Connell, W. R. Milton, Norman Lindsay, C. L. Charrest, J. H. Beliveau. Auditors: James McNeil and R. T. Jamieson. Mr. W. T. Devlin, the newly-appointed president, delivered an enthusiastic and optimistic address on the prospects of the association. He referred to many of the points which are of great importance to the retail trade. This was followed by a discussion in which most of those present took part.

The staff of F. R. Stewart & Co., commission merchants, Vancouver, B.C., held their annual dinner on Saturday, Feb. 12.

THE IDEAS ARE ACTED UPON.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Enclosed please find our cheque paying for The Canadian Grocer to August 21st, 1910. We certainly value this paper, and the suggestions and ideas enclosed in its pages are always useful and often acted upon. We wish you a successful year. Faithfully yours,

BLAIR & ADAM.

An Easter Window Suggestive of Festive Season

Eggs and Ham Artistically Displayed—Easter Lilies and Other Floral Decorations—A Mouth-watering Scene With Cleanliness Predominant—Handsome Window Cards Used.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 23.—Since the Easter season is now drawing near, the time has come round to consider window displays for the holiday season.

Easter is a time when all merchants should make some extra attempt to interest customers and get new trade. It denotes the end of Lent and therefore the breaking of the forty-day fast. Every grocer should therefore aim to attract the eye and palate of the public at this festive season and a good window display is one of the best mediums especially when followed up by well-written advertisements in the local paper.

There are certain articles of food associated with the Easter season which should be used in the display window.

How it Was Constructed.

The floor was made of cotton, pink paper and green paper which is used in packing by wholesalers and manufacturers. This was laid in rows producing a color effect attractive to the eye and which the photograph of course does not show.

Three hams were placed towards the front of the window and two more further to the rear, thus getting the same effect as if the window were full of hams so far as selling power is concerned and producing a more attractive and simple display. A basket of eggs and small groups of eggs placed among the floor trimmings also make an attractive setting. Another feature is the appearance of rabbits carrying slices of ham and 'Rastus above all cutting ham which would actually make one's mouth water to watch.

Flower decorations of Easter lilies are very appropriate and lend considerable effect to the whole window. The two show cards, which are neat and well written add to the selling effect. The talks on the cards are splendid and if one or two price-tickets had been added, the window might have been a better seller.

The suggestion of cleanliness is also valuable as the scientific grocer now-a-days is more and more convinced that the customers will value his goods and his store according to the attention given to cleanliness.

An Easter Window Dressed by Harry Young, in Victoria, B.C.

The minds of everybody usually turn to thoughts of eggs at this time and in any special holiday window eggs ought to play a prominent part, particularly in a town or city where so many of them are sold.

Ham is another article associated with the Easter time, particularly since Easter marks the close of the fast and abstinence days.

In the accompanying window display which was constructed by Harry Young for Carne's grocery of this city a year ago, both eggs and ham are given prominence in a neat and attractive window.

ELECTRIC FAN TO PROTECT FROSTED WINDOWS.

Probably the best and simplest method yet found to keep frost from show windows has been discovered by a Denver man, a clerk for a shoe concern. He had tried all known remedies, but some flaw of one kind and another was found until he tried using an electric fan. This is what he says:—

"I had become wearied with using glycerine, alcohol and other things, and one day discovered, by accident, that a current of air circulating through the windows would keep the frost down. You see the constant opening and shutting of the door to the street always chilled the warm air in the show window, and as we did not have double windows, frost always hid our goods from the passerby.

"I start the fan when I come down in the morning and inside of an hour the window is as clear as in the summer-time. The circulating air keeps the chill air from striking the pane, and in order to always keep the air moving I keep one door to the window partly open all the time, which also aids in preventing all the hot air from being pushed against the cold window. I tried my fan treatment when the mercury was five below zero and its works beautifully.

"Besides there is an advantage to it, for the pedestrian, seeing the fan at this time of the year, wonders what is up and stops to examine the freak idea, seeking the reason for the stunt."—Boot and Shoe Recorder.

PRACTICAL METHODS.

Store Kinks That are Being Tried Out by Retail Grocers.

A Breakfast Food Window.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 23.—A neat arrangement in the way of displaying various kinds of cereals and breakfast foods has been adopted by one of the local grocers. In one of his windows last week he had some two dozen glass preserve jars (quart size) each filled with a different kind of meal, flour, beans, peas, etc., and with small cards bearing the name and price. The jars were arranged on steps running full length of the window and about four or five inches apart. There were three steps about six inches in height and for a background packages of breakfast food were attractively displayed. The cleanliness and simplicity of the arrangement made it a striking display.

Close Watch on Creditors.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 24.—The annual meeting of the Victoria Retail Grocers' Exchange was held last week, when a large attendance of members showed the active interest taken in matters affecting the trade.

After the regular monthly business was disposed of, the reports of the treasurer, secretary, and audit committee on the finances and business of the past year were read and adopted. After paying all accounts a handsome balance remains on hand to start the current year.

The officers elected were: E. J. Wall, of the Windsor Grocery Co., re-elected president; A. Pool, vice-president; T. Redding re-elected treasurer, and W. Acton, F. Burridge and A. Thornton, the three directors. These six constitute the executive committee, with Thos. S. Futcher, secretary. The information department as to the commercial standing of those desiring credit is much more used by the members than formerly.

Drew Custom in Wake of Competitor's Negligence

Retailer's Scientific Methods Proved Successful Bait to the Disgust of His Opposition Farther Down the Street—The Wonderful Power of the Window Exemplified—Use Made of Display Cards.

By E. M. Woodley in System.

When the "Enterprise" shoe store opened for business on Third Avenue, its show window was a curious spectacle. Simultaneous with the opening, passers-by began to stop in front of the window. They gathered in groups, sometimes of ten or twenty, and half blocked the sidewalk.

There were half a dozen shoe stores within a few blocks north and south; not one of them ever had a crowd. What strange hypnotism was this new rival practising on unsuspecting Third avenue?

It was simple enough, although none of the older dealers had thought of it. The "Enterprise" window was filled from top to bottom with a surprising assortment of goods that had nothing whatever to do with shoes. And yet shoes stood out conspicuously everywhere in contrast to the medley of other articles, and a black-lettered placard made it clear:

WE SELL NOTHING SHOWN IN THIS WINDOW BUT FOOTWEAR

The other articles are what you can get elsewhere with the money you save here.

It was almost staggering, this collection of dishes, kitchen utensils, table-linen, hardware, towels, cutlery, bric-a-brac. A frame had been set up in the window, with a hundred shelves. It was painted snow-white—a pleasing background for shoes. There was small need of a background, however, for the shelves were swamped with the display. Even the shoes themselves were filled. Boys' jack-knives peeped temptingly; dolls were half concealed; dollar watches gave tantalizing hints of their presence. It was quite as much a question of what might be there, as what really was there.

Scattered about in this jungle of shoes and every-day things were cards, six by eight inches, with such inscriptions as this:

DO YOU BUY SHOES ON BROADWAY?

If so, try Third Avenue, and See What it Means to You.

These were revolutionary methods on Third Avenue. All the shoe stores up and down the street had show windows. Most of them were eminently proper show windows. The shoes were arranged in mathematical rows, properly curved, properly dusted, properly spaced. This new store was not orthodox. One retailer, across the street from the "Enterprise," had been there twelve years.

"I've never had cheap contraptions like that in my window," he remarked, ruefully, as he watched the people going in and out of the new establishment. "I don't believe in it."

Yet this same dealer had often wondered why so few customers came into his store. Third Avenue was a restless highway, and all the people wore shoes. He could not understand why an hour should elapse, at times, without a single person being deflected his way.

The "grand opening" was over. The miscellaneous goods, rented for the first display, had gone back to their owners. But the "Enterprise" was quite as restless as Third Avenue itself. All night the sounds of hammer and saw were heard by late pedestrians; when morning came the crowd before the show window was so big that it actually shocked the old-time Third Avenue dealer across the street.

There were shoes in the window, in plenty, but it was not the shoes alone that attracted. Intermingled with the footgear was money—everywhere money. It filled the shoes and ran over; it covered the floor; it was piled in heaps and windrows. There were paper dollars, and silver dollars, and halves and quarters and pennies. Apparently, the "Enterprise" had dug up a fortune to put in its show window. Only the initiated knew that the clever arrangement of filling and hidden framework and concealed shelving, multiplied the actual money a thousand fold. And only those in the secret knew that a bank had supplied the money as a special loan, on condition that two private policemen from the bank be detailed to guard it.

The most conspicuous placard in the window was this:

HERE IS SOME OF THE MONEY WE ARE GOING TO SAVE OUR CUSTOMERS

Do You Want Some of it? Then Step Inside and Get It.

Other cards presented terse selling points. Qualities were emphasized, and a strong play was made on the difference in rents between Third Avenue and Broadway. "Size up our building," one inscription ran. "It isn't a palace, is it? If it were, the landlord would get all this money."

Thus capital was made of the poor old structure itself. This sort of argument would not do on Broadway or Fifth Avenue, but the "Enterprise" knew the trade it wanted and went after it with ambitious methods.

One day a pedestal appeared in window of the "Enterprise," It was four feet high, and on its flat top rested a single, feminine, genteel-looking shoe. There was not another shoe in the window. The pedestal with its solitary piece of footwear reigned supreme. The barrenness of the window was relieved by hangings of fluffy white stuff; the floor, too, was covered with it, in billowy waves; the pedestal itself was draped with it. The whole window-space was a cave of dazzling white, in which nestled the solitary shoe, And then this placard which no onlooker or passerby could possibly fail to see:

IF THIS SHOE FITS, YOU MAY HAVE IT FREE

We Will Sell You the Mate For $2. We Guarantee These to be $3 Shoes.

The old-timer across the way denounced this as "Cheap John" advertising. Some one carried the denunciation to the proprietor of the "Enterprise." At the moment he had eleven women in line as candidates for the particular size and pattern represented on the pedestal, and he only had time to remark: "If one's customers like 'Cheap John' advertising, why not give it to them?"

Then he sold a pair to two-dollar shoes to a disappointed candidate for the pedestal shoe.

Meanwhile the old-timer was having a peaceful day in his shoe shop, all by himself, and the thousands of people went up and down Third Avenue, all wearing shoes.

The "Enterprise" appeared to prosper amazingly. Indignation ran high among the adjacent Third Avenue shoe men. This interloper was an impudent fellow, they told each other. Whoever heard of a shoe store thus lowering its dignity? The shoe business was a high-minded, serious calling. A shoe store, the old-timer said, must perforce have a quiet, restful atmosphere. The same atmosphere must include its window. This new-comer, so perniciously busy, was overthrowing traditions.

And then, on a rainy day, a pig appeared in the "Enterprise" window, along with a copious supply of mud in which to wallow. A pig in New York is as rare as a silk hat in Goldfield. Third Avenue was blocked with excited children, and a liberal percentage of grown-ups.

And once more the placard:

PIGS DON'T WEAR RUBBERS

But How About You?

Then the window space above the porker was dotted with smaller placards bearing the single word "Rubbers." There were at least a hundred of these cards at all angles, some upside down, purposely. The object of the display had a very definite meaning.

Along in the afternoon the pig had grown so popular on Third Avenue that the police requested the "Enterprise" to remove him. But in a thousand homes that night this store was a topic of conversation. And everyone knew it had rubbers to sell.

Again the busybodies carried the complaints of the old-time shoe dealers. Pigs had nothing to do with shoes. It was scandalous!

"If a fellow's in business for trade," remarked the "Enterprise" man, "why not go after it? Is there anything dishonorable in pigs?"

When a particular shade of tan came into use, the "Enterprise" seized the idea for a window display that drew customers for a week. On exhibition along with the footwear were placed other articles of wearing apparel of the exact coloring. There was a serge skirt as a background for a pair of neat oxfords. There was hosiery, and millinery, and gloves, and men's ties and shirts, and men's hats. Each of these articles of apparel was matched by a pair of shoes, and the effect was completed by tan hangings of the same shade.

The announcement told the prospect:

WE CAN SELL YOU THE SHOES AND TELL YOU WHERE YOU CAN MATCH THEM IN ANYTHING ELSE YOU MAY WANT.
Be In Style. It Costs no More.

All of these goods were loaned readily by concerns that might profit by the display in the shoe store window.

This was a conspiracy, the old-timer said, on the part of the "Enterprise" man and some of the furnishing stores and millinery shops of Third Avenue. It was a lamentable thing that such a state of affairs could exist in the shoe trade.

But the "Enterprise" man only laughed and said that such conspiracies made business a game that was really fascinating. He found it absorbing to think up schemes to get people into his store. Business, he ventured, was business, and a show window was a show window. He did not attempt to control any of his competitors' windows. But he did have a lot of fun with his own.

This color scheme had such good results that presently the "Enterprise" adapted it to black. A dead-black window was created, with black shoes matched against black garments, hats, gloves, and the like. The window-space was draped absolutely in black and the effect was almost startling. Yet it was wonderfdlly attractive and scarcely a person passed the store without stopping at the window. The display had an air of refinement, too, that caught even Third Avenue.

Then a summer display was made up all of white. Children's shoes, women's kid slippers, and canvas outing shoes furnished most of the footwear exhibit, set off against white dresses, hats, ties, and other apparel. Conspicuous posters explained that these goods were not on sale, and clever invention was employed in getting up cards to make the shoe display the important thing in the window. One card ran thus:

WE ARE INTERESTING YOU IN SHOES, REMEMBER. EVEN IF YOU HAD ALL THE PRETTY THINGS IN THIS WINDOW, AND HAD NO SHOES TO MATCH THEM, YOU WOULD NOT BE EQUIPPED. WE CAN GIVE YOU THE APPROPRIATE THING IN SHOES, NO MATTER WHAT CLOTHING YOU WEAR.

By this time the "Enterprise" had become the leading shoe shop in that section. Almost any flat-dweller on the side streets adjacent knew where it was. On the other hand, not a quarter of them could have told just where the old-timer's store was located. Many had a vague notion that it was somewhere around, but it never had impressed them in a positive manner. It was colorless, without personality.

Another striking display was made by taking one shoe from each variety in the "Enterprise" stock. These were arranged on a sloping platform, in the form of the letter S. The larger shoes were at the top, and the twisting line tapered gradually down to the tiniest of infant's shoes.

The variety of shoes carried by the store was thus graphically illustrated. Selling-cards were scattered about the window profusely, filling the bare spaces. The back of the window was attractively draped, and hung with placards. The big letter S nestled on a bed of velvety cloth, in loose folds.

Like all of the "Enterprise" exhibits, this one compelled attention. It was absolutely distinct from the routine display of the average shoe store window. People stopped to wonder at the number of shoe varieties and sizes. And the instant they stopped they were reminded by the cards that this was the "Enterprise" shoe store. At the bottom of every card was the address.

It was a theory of this proprietor that the value of a show-card is heightened when it impresses on the prospective customer the location. He may want to come back later on; if he has a photograph of the street and number in his brain, he will not drift into some other store because he cannot find the one he wants.

A display that drew well was built along the illusion idea. Apparently, the entire window-pane, to a height of six feet from the floor, was filled with a heterogeneous mass of footwear in a hopeless tangle. In reality, a concealed framework took most of the space. The outer layer was made up of boots, shoes, slippers, rubbers, children's sandals, and the like. The effect was a mountain of footgear, tossed together in careless confusion. On many of the shoes were price-cards. The impression conveyed was one of immensity of stock and variety.

The old-timer had been across the street for twelve years, and had scarcely made a living. The "Enterprise" came in and found a thriving trade at once. It was merely a difference in methods. The trade was there all the time.

"How many shoe stores do you suppose there are in New York?" the old-timer had asked once.

He answered the question himself.

"More than a thousand, by the city directory. A few of 'em make money. Most of 'em starve. I've been doing the best I could. I've been square and worked hard. I flatter myself I'm pretty well known in the neighborhood—you know that doesn't mean much in New York. Yet how many Third Avenue people, in this block, say, ever got into my store? Not one in a dozen. Why didn't they? Because they'd rather go over to Broadway to help pay the big rents. It's human nature. They think my store's no good because it's little, and a bit dingy, and hasn't got fancy rugs for them to put their feet on when they take off their shoes. I can't get 'em coming."

But the old-timer opened his eyes when he saw how the "Enterprise" got them coming.

The "Enterprise" has no monoply upon its methods and the man behind it has not cornered ingenuity. What applied to shoes, applies to hats and Turkish rugs and toilet soaps and breakfast foods, for people use them all.

There are plenty of fish in the sea; whether you catch your share depends largely upon the bait you use and how you use it. There is no better place to start than where the "Enterprise" man did, on that most woefully neglected opportunity—the show window.

Keep always in mind the desirability of increasing your business right up to the limit of your present facilities. That is what reduces the ratio of expense.

On the Chicago market last week live hogs touched a price unequalled since 1870, selling at 9.40 per cent. It is prophesied that they will reach the $10 mark before long.

An experienced grocer advises that flour should always be stacked on the top shelves, says the American Miller, as the warm, even temperature keeps it in the best of condition. While grocers often make a mistake in this matter and stack their flour wherever there is room without regard to conditions, we think it may be questioned whether the ceiling of a warm grocery store is the best place for stored flour. The temperature is probably all right; but flour is susceptible to odors, and odors rise as well as the heat.

OBJECTS OF CLERKS' ASSOCIATION.

Chilliwack, B. C., Feb. 23.—The clerks of Chilliwack have formed an association, one of the chief aims of which will be to work harmoniously with the Merchants' Association of that district. S. A. Cawley, M.P.P., is the honorary president, the working officers being: President, John Robinson; vice-president, Miss L. M. Hall; secretary-treasurer, Miss G. K. Brown, with a strong executive committee under the chairmanship of W. C. Barber.

The objects of the association are: To foster and maintain a permanent social feeling among the clerks of the retail, wholesale and general offices of Chilliwack; to obliterate distrust and inspire confidence among the members of the trade; to remove by concerted action such evils and customs as are against good policy and sound business principles, whether it be cutting of wages, improper using of clerks, or whatsoever the evil may be; to disseminate useful information; to watch and influence legislation toward the better protection of the city and association; to assist our members in getting positions; to encourage the observance of Sunday and all legal holidays; and to attain the results which experience has proved are not attainable by individual or divided efforts. It is the intention of the association to celebrate their inauguration by attending one of the churches for divine service, and to continue this practice at least once annually.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

TWO SUGAR ADVANCES.

The strong tendency in the sugar market referred to in last week's issue resulted in an advance of 10 cents on all grades including the Winnipeg list and the following day of 5 cents on the Montreal and Toronto lists. The basis is now $5 per barrel in Montreal or $4.95 per bag.

The principal cause given is the weak statistical position of the world's supply, the estimated decrease in comparison with last year being 354,904 tons. The speculative demand in Europe too, remains a big factor. Also, the consumption of refined in Canada has been advancing steadily and the report of a strike of sugar cane cutters in Guadeloupe adds additional firmness to the market.

The representatives of one sugar refining firm stated to The Grocer that in his estimation we would not see lower values in sugar for the next two or three months.

DEMAND AHEAD OF SUPPLY.

Teas are exceedingly firm. It is estimated that, generally speaking, they are 2 cents per pound higher than at this time last year and it is possible according to men closely in touch with the tea market that they will go still higher.

It simply looks as if it were a case of consumption overtaking the production. Figures regarding the importation of teas into the United Kingdom in 1909 indicate this. For instance last year duty was paid on 283½ millions of pounds, while in 1908 it was on 275½ millions, making a difference of 8,000,000 pounds in Great Britain and Ireland alone.

The consumption in other countries has also increased, and while the same may be said of the production yet apparently it has not been sufficient to overtake the demand.

Cables last week from Colombo tell of the strong market. Common teas, they say, are soaring, being about 2 cents higher than they were at the end of January.

SHORT RAISIN STOCKS.

The attention of retailers is here again called to the market in Valencia and Sultana raisins. Advices from the primary market show that Valencias are getting into short compass on spot, and importations have been restricted by an advance in price there equal to ¾c over the price ruling before the first of the year.

Sultanas have had a much larger sale this year than usual in consequence of the extremely low prices ruling. This fruit also advanced several shillings in Europe as stocks there, owing to increased demand induced by low prices, are getting into short compass.

STRONG PEANUT SITUATION.

The peanut market at present presents considerable strength. It is being the subject of considerable comment and that the limit of the advance has not been reached is the opinion of well-posted dealers.

In regard to Virginia peanut prices compared with a year ago appear high, but when a look is taken upon the year of 1907, in the midst of a panic, and see by actual comparison with that crop that it was marketed from ½c to ¾c per pound above present prices, it is felt that higher prices must be expected befor the new crop.

Japanese peanuts are up from a cent to a cent and a quarter and Spanish peanuts are nearly 3 shillings higher than this time last year. The shelled variety have advanced about a cent per pound since the first of the year and on the French market there are no sellers for fall shipment.

One dealer states that, after an investigation regarding the foreign market from thoroughly reliable sources, the Spanish and Japanese crops of peanuts are short, while the African, Chinese and East India crops are perhaps less than normal.

Recent cable inquiries come from Europe on quantities from 50 to 100 cars of United States peanuts, which indicates that the foreign crops of peanuts are short, and efforts are being made to market them at higher prices.

BREACH OF TRADE ETIQUETTE.

There is considerable complaint always coming from the retailers, that the wholesale dealers are selling direct to the consumers. This is generally denied and kept away from the knowledge of the retailers, but sometimes the truth becomes uncovered through peculiar circumstances.

Not long ago a little girl was sent to a grocery store to get a pound of bacon. While the grocer was slicing it for her, a wholesale meat wagon stopped at the door, and, as soon as the driver entered the store, the little girl said to him, "Mother has been waiting for you."

The driver, however, scarcely paying any attention to her, hurried through with his business, and after he was gone a short time, the little girl came back with the bacon, "mother does not need this bacon now; the man that was in here brings us our bacon, but he was late this morning."

When that driver came round again the grocer was ready for him, and desired an explanation of his conduct as a wholesaler. On being charged with the violation of business rules, he admitted his guilt, and in trying to prove his personal innocence he uncovered, like the little girl, another truth which is fully as interesting as the fact of selling to a consumer.

He stated that he only delivers the goods to that family, but is not allowed to collect the money. This, not being satisfactory to the grocer, he brought out his next best talking point: "Well, I'll tell you, this man is an official in the assessment department and they have some kind of an understanding, so that the boss gets a reduction in his assessment and I think he saves about $100 a year."

The Canadian Grocer, however, is not concerned about the deal which the driver thought would justify him in delivering the goods as long as he did not collect for them, but The Grocer takes a firm stand against the principle of the wholesaler who expects the retailer to handle his goods and often at a small profit, and then steals some of his customers from him.

This matter is carried on by some houses in Canada to an extent that makes it almost intolerable to the retailers.

The older grocers well remember the time when wholesale houses would not break packages, not even to small stores, but would turn them over to the larger retail stores to get their supplies. Some of these retail stores had a good income from this source, but now some wholesalers break packages and sell the smallest quantity not only to stores, but are actually canvassing boarding houses and even private families.

THE GERMAN SURTAX.

The additional tax of one-third more than the general tariff on imports of German origin becomes obsolete on March 1 by the provisional trade agreement signed last week at Ottawa.

Unpleasantness between Canada and Germany has existed for some twelve years following the granting of the British preferential in 1907. Canada in 1898 persuaded the British Government to abrogate her favored nation treaty with Germany, which prevented this country giving a preference to the Mother Land, as against Germany.

Germany commenced commercial hostilities, having levied against the Dominion the provisions of her maximum tariff. This drastic action dealt a severe blow to our export trade with Germany in agricultural products, and it was not long before our shipments of grain to that country practically stopped. The tariff killed a trade which in grain alone was worth over $1,000,000, and while our export trade with all other countries has grown enormously of late years, that with Germany in 1909 was about $400,000 less than it was in 1898.

Canada endeavored to persuade Germany to restore her products to the conventional tariff and when this proved unsuccessful, put the surtax into operation in November, 1903.

The Canadian Grocer has known for some time that the Canadian Government has been anxious for commercial hostilities to cease, and at least two members of the Government are known to have unofficially suggested to influential German citizens who had visited this country that they endeavor to bring about a better state of affairs. There is no doubt, however, that the strongest efforts have been put forth by the German people themselves, and particularly business men in that country. A year or two ago an association was formed there which had for its specific object the removal of the present obstacles to the development of trade with Canada.

While Canada's export trade with Germany lessened during the decade, the surtax on the other hand, of course stimulated certain Canadian industries. These may naturally be expected to suffer to some extent by the restoration of the tariff conditions which prevailed prior to 1903. The particular industries are knitted goods, especially those into the manufacture of which cotton enters, hosiery, underwear, gloves and outer garments. On the other hand while everything that Canada exports is not provided for in the new convention, the principal products such as grain, timber, animals, leather, and fruits are included.

Before the surtax there was a considerable quantity of gelatine imported from Germany, but since the surtax a great deal of this trade went to Austria-Hungary. For instance in 1909 we imported 17,147 pounds of German and 49,815 pounds of Austria-Hungary gelatine.

As the convention is only a temporary one and is designed as a stepping stone to further negotiations, the chief fear on the part of Canadian manufacturers is that there may be a disposition on the part of the Dominion Government ultimately to allow Germany the provisions of the intermediate tariff. It is future rather than present concessions that perhaps most disturb.

The indications are that the trade of Great Britain with Canada will suffer to some extent by the removal of the surtax. It is, however, the general opinion among business men in Canada that British manufacturers have not taken all the advantage of the preferential tariff which they should. With few exceptions they have been slow to employ aggressive means of extending their trade in this country. On the whole any strong opposition to the new order is unlikely.

THE PROFIT AND LOSS PROBLEM.

Grocers are becoming more and more interested in the question of expense of carrying on business and in determining the relation of this to the gross profits.

Recent articles in this paper have proven that some grocers are actually selling goods at a loss when they come to figure cost. In last week's issue it was demonstrated that some were making gross profits of from 15¾ per cent to 19 1-3 per cent. These same grocers admit that it costs them from 13 to 15 per cent. to do business.

In this week's issue on another page will be found a table showing actual gross profits that are being made. The figures were obtained from grocers who gave both their cost and selling price. At 15 per cent. cost of doing business these men are actually losing money. Even if they did business on a 10 per cent. basis their net profits would not be equal to those of an average laborer.

These figures bring to light some interesting conditions about the uniformity or rather non-uniformity of profits. They also show that on articles on which fair profits are made that grocers have a big competitor in the peddler, while on the other hand the articles on which the profits are small the worst trouble comes from a section of merchants themselves, who are continually cutting prices.

These are ills that the trade is heir to and business men are needed to overcome them.

PURE JAMS ON THE MARKET.

It will be interesting to grocers to know and they will also find pleasure in telling their customers, that according to a recent Government analysis of 116 samples of jams collected from 15 inspectoral districts in Canada, 108 were found pure, 7 were doubtful, and only one was adulterated.

This is remarkable when it is taken into consideration that only a few years ago, pure jam was almost the exception. This again shows what can be done by a few enterprising men, who have started this pure food movement. But it must be remembered that it is not always the one who reaches the highest point on the ladder of fame that deserves the credit for ambition, but, rather the one who is first in getting his foot on the bottom rung.

ADVANCE IN WALNUT MARKET.

Shelled walnuts to-day for importation are about 30 per cent. higher than they were at this date a year ago. Prices to the retailer have also advanced about the same amount.

The cause of this is the scarcity of walnuts on the French market where practically our entire supply comes from. Stocks in France are almost exhausted in both the shelled and unshelled lines and the remaining stocks are being marketed at continually advancing prices.

From reports from France, there are no sellers for forward shipment as present demand will absorb all available stock for near shipment and the trade will have to rely for fall supplies entirely on any reserve stock that remains after the summer trade is over.

It is evident therefore that the walnut situation is exceedingly strong and retailers interested in this market should make their plans accordingly.

Profits and Losses on Various Grocery Articles

With Expense of Doing Business Figured at 15 per Cent. Grocers are Making a Net Loss in Many Cases, — Articles on Which Best Profits are Made—Plea for an Equalization of the Profits—An Interesting Table.

From figures received from different grocers, it was shown in last week's issue their average percentage of profits and now to demonstrate more clearly the grocer's situation and the necessity of adopting different methods, the profit or loss on each article over and above 15 p.c. of the turnover which is allowed for the cost of doing business is given. Of course 15 p.c. representing the cost of doing business may be somewhat high, especially if businesses in towns, small cities, villages and country places are under consideration, but in cities like Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, etc., it is not a great deal too high, if it is high at all.

It will be noticed that some articles are netting a good profit while others are being handled at a loss. This is the point to be considered in this article. The following table includes the cost of the goods, the selling price, the gross profit, 15 p.c. on the selling price for doing business, net profit over the expenses, or the net loss on the goods which are sold under cost of doing business :

Totals	12.74½	14.88½	2.14½	2.23¼	41¼	50 1-5

The first thing that must strike a retailer in this statement is the small gross profit on the whole bill. To handle $12.74 of staple goods for a gross profit of $2.14 seems peculiar yet it is true. The next thing is the fact that some goods carry a profit of 50 to 66 2-3 p.c. and yet the average percentage of profit is only 16½ p.c. on the cost of the goods. While this statement shows a loss of 9c after expenses are met, yet some goods were sold at a profit of 66 2-3 p.c., which demonstrates that the system of arranging profits is wrong and has much to do with the unsatisfactory condition of the retail trade.

Talk with the retailer, and while he sees the trouble, he again repeats the old phrase : "What can we do ?"

All admit that things are not right, but if some do take a broad view of the situation and venture out from behind their counters, they are not supported by the grocers in general.

"If the retail grocery business is not paying, the grocers themselves are to blame," said one ; "but when we talk to each other it is always the other fellow who is the sinner. What business sense is there in us when we sell 3 for a quarter on one line, making a little more than 4 p.c., and then trying to sell another article which is peddled before our very doors every day at a profit of 66 2-3 per cent. ?

"There is no sense in it, neither is it right. We have it all in our own hands to remedy, but we don't know how."

Conditions Not Satisfactory.

A business man in discussing the retail situation the other day exclaimed : "The merchants of our country who ought to be the most wide awake, ready to solve the most difficult problems, are standing powerless when they know that the conditions of the trade are neither fair, nor satisfactory.

"Where would the laboring people be if they had not acted the way they did ? Would they have accomplished anything if they had stood at their working benches and brooded over their conditions ?

"Why can a laboring man bring you up before the magistrate without costing him one cent and make you pay for work he has done for you, but if that same laboring man owes you for goods and does not want to pay you, you have to go to the Division Court, plank down $3 or $4, and then take chances as to whether you will ever see your deposit again, to say nothing of the account you tried to collect ? They looked after their interests and succeeded, while the grocer stands behind his counter and wonders, 'What can we do ?' "

There is some good sound logic in what the business man says. For instance because it is customary to handle some goods at an actual loss, grocers still continue to do so and because it is customery to handle tea, coffee, fruit, etc., at a good profit they still do so but they also allow the peddler to do the same—which cuts down sales. On the other hand grocers will rival their neighbor and competitor across the street by underselling them on articles on which little or no profit is made.

Work on a Business Basis.

Concluding the business man asked : "Is it not time that the grocers grow out of their jealousy and united to put the grocery trade on a business basis ? There are comparatively few grocers who are broad-minded enough to look far enough over the counters to see that the trade in general must be kept in a healthy condition in order to give them a fair chance to succeed. Favorable conditions do not come by chance, but are the outcome of the grocers themselves.

"A few years ago when the recommendation was made to the government by the Royal Commission to assess all properties alike on their rental value, immediate action was taken, and the retailer was saved from the heavy burden which would have fallen on him. If things like this can be done, will any still remain in business and sell some lines of goods for less than cost, and wonder 'what can we do ?' "

"We should stop fighting with our fellow grocer and we should never try to build up a trade by underselling others. This has been tried over and over, and has never succeeded. If we give good service, treat our customers right and charge a decent profit on all lines, the grocery business will naturally and surely improve."

ANOTHER FISH MERGER.

Considerable interest is being taken amongst the fresh fish dealers in Montreal, in connection with a proposed merger of these interests. The details of organization have not been perfected but the fact of the merger existing was verified by a prominent fish merchant in Montreal.

NOT IN THE MERGER.

At Least One of the Independents Remaining Independent.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—On page 44 of your issue of the 21st January, I read an article headed "Canners' Merger Completed." In this article you say that about fifty-six factories are now in the consolidation and at the time of writing only three Independents were not closed up. I would like to know where you get your authority for this statement. I am interested in two independent factories and have not been consulted in regard to the consolidation by either. I have also made inquiries from others interested in different factories and from all the information I can gather your statement is nor correct. Instead of the majority of the independent factories having agreed to an amalgamation the fact would appear to be that only a few have, as you put it, been "closed with."

If the above article is one of your paid advertisements it would appear as if those putting it in had some object in doing so.

RECRUITS FOR FIXED PRICES.

Grocer Says it is the Salvation of the Retail Trade.

F. B. Connolly, of San Francisco, director of the National Association of Retail Grocers, of the United States, reports that he has just induced the Californig Fruit Canners' Association to launch the protected price plan on one of their brands of fruits and vegetables in some sections of northern Ohio.

"Many of these manufacturers are giving this plan a fair trial on the Pacific Coast and will put it into operation in other sections of the United States as soon as conditions make it worth while.

"In the meantime we retailers should educate our people in our local and State meetings by constantly pointing out to them the value of having the manufacturer set and maintain a minimum retail selling price, allowing a fair margin of profit, instead of us being at the mercy of the illegitimate price cutter, who forces a number of well meaning merchants, by competition, to conform to the prices he has made, irrespective of whether or not there is a legitimate profit in the same.

"This is a great movement and naturally has some opponents even among our own people, but it is a movement which means the salvation of the retail grocer and the placing of our business on a high level."

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Advance in sugar all around of 15c
Decline in rice and tapioca.
Scarcity of Japan tea, low grades.

Montreal, Feb. 24, 1910.

Business is generally good and considerable activity is noted all over the jobbing houses. Country orders are coming in freely and travelers find merchants watching the markets closely. There have been several notable changes, including the advance in sugar and decline in rice and tapioca. Canned goods have a feature in salmon inasmuch as there is a scarcity of certain brands.

Sugar.—The sugar market is in a good condition. The advance of 15c seems to have stimulated the demand and noted activity has taken place. One reason for the advance is that the crop was reported short and not any too good. There has been also a shortage of supplies in Europe and it is likely that the advance will stay.

Syrups and Molasses.—There has been a drop in prices in molasses. The early crop has evidently given an appearance of strength and the influence has already been felt. Demand will likely be stimulated by the decline in prices as changes will be noted in our quotations. The demand for syrup is good and very satisfactory.

Tea.—Tea market is improving. Owing to new arrival of low grade China greens they meet with a ready sale. There is no immediate danger of an advance. Business is good but not in large quantities. Buyers seem to be dealing in small quantities only. Japan low grade is still scarce, hardly any to be found in the market. The high grades are selling normally owing to the fact that only wealthy consumers can buy these lines. Volume sold is satisfactory. Low grade green teas are the best sellers, hence the anxiety to get hold of these grades. No change in prices.

Nuts.—Peanuts are still the feature with a tendency to advance. Aside from the advance of Bordeaux walnuts, which was reported last week on account of the treaty with France, it has been reported that the markets in France also advanced, thus showing that it was a natural increase, the prices being in some cases ahead of our quotations from 28 to 30c.

Evaporated Apples.—Prices have been put down and lowering the price has stimulated the demand. It appears that buyers of these lines wish to pay a certain price and do not care to buy until that is reached. That is the situation just now. The market is fair.

Beans and Peas.—Normal demand still rules in these lines and prices are especially held firm for beans.

Rice and Tapioca.—Prices have declined noticeably. The big importers and mills prophesied that they would lower the prices at a certain day and this naturally killed the intervening demand. Seeing that there was no sale for rice the decision has been put into effect of lowering the price at once. It is evident that stocks were very low and a general increase in sales has taken place. Decline of about 20c all around will be noticed in rice.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Demand for canned vegetables and canned fruits has increased notably over previous weeks, no doubt occasioned by Lent. The demand for canned fish is quite apparent with the exception of the brands Clover Leaf and Horseshoe in salmon and it seems there is a scarcity of these brands. Stocks all over of salmon are said to be pretty well exhausted and this situation is sure to be felt before long.

TORONTO -- Canned goods are in good demand and from all appearances the stocks on hand will be required before the next crop will be available. Some lines are diminishing rapidly. While canned goods are supposed to keep for years, it is, however, true that they deteriorate and if the stocks can be cleared out every year, it is all the better for the consumer and certainly for the canner.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugars—Up 15 cents.

Teas—Market very strong.

Beans—Firm situation.

Toronto, Feb. 24, 1910.

The wholesale trade this week has picked up and shows more activity. The February dullness has run its course and all look for a lively trade from now on. Payments are also more satisfactory and on the whole the outlook is encouraging.

The feature of the week was two advances in sugar amounting to 15 cents.

Sugar—The anticipated advance in sugar came last week a few hours after we had gone to press and sugars are now 15c higher. The market continues firm and another jump would not be a surprise to many. Owing to a short crop of beet sugar in Europe, New York prices can still advance considerably to reach the same level. Another feature which may develop to effect the price of sugar, is a strike among the cane cutters. The advance last week came a little sooner than was expected by some and the wholesale houses were not all prepared for it.

Dried Fruits—Some of the wholesale houses report that these goods are moving slowly. This they think is owing largely to the large quantity of green fruits that were put up by the people last summer, and also to the cheap apples which are on the market. European reports tell of stocks of both Valencia and Sultana raisins being in small compass.

Rice and Tapioca—There should be no kick about the cost of living when rice, one of the best foods, can be obtained by the retailer as low as $2.85 per 100 lbs. This is below the average price and much below its food value compared with other goods and might be largely sold as a substitute for some of the more expensive lines.

Beans—Beans are firm at the advance price. There is a difference of opinion as to the bean situation. Some claim that farmers are holding them back. If this is the case they may hold them too long. As soon as the winter is over, people will use more vegetables and the beans may be in less demand at lower prices. Others, however, claim that the crop was over-estimated and that there are none in the country. In the mean time the market is strong and prices are well maintained. It seems, however, that the first reason is the more probable.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Corrected by Wire.)

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advance of 10 cents.

Dried Fruits—Firm.

Syrup—Excellent demand.

Canadian Sardines—Stock getting low.

Winnipeg, February 24, 1910.

Peculiar conditions are making for an excellent trade in all lines. The demand is particularly heavy in the staples as is natural at this period of the year. But the railway facilities are so good this season that little difficulty is experienced in transportation and grocers are encouraged to handle goods for immediate shipment. Travelers all report conditions favorable everywhere. The great farming communities are living well and keeping their dealers busy.

Just now also the great bonspiel is in progress in Winnipeg and many merchants are in the city visiting the wholesale houses and everyone is having a jolly time. Collections are good and visitors are clearing off old accounts much to the surprise of the wholesalers. They are ordering spring stocks freely at the same time. If there is not too much exuberance on display in the city at present the trade is in excellent condition and the future looks bright.

Sugar—Another advance of 10 cents has taken place and the market is held firm. Merchants have already stocked heavily and only special consignments are moving.

Absolutely Sure

There is a whole lot of satisfaction about Red Rose Tea. You are absolutely sure of its quality. Never any doubt about that.

It is the quality of RED ROSE TEA that has put it in such a foremost place in Canada.

It is its quality that will keep it in the forefront; more now than ever, because tea prices have advanced so that there is not now much tea fit to retail under 30c.; certainly nothing that will please your customers or draw trade.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, Feb. 24, 1910.

The Halifax grocery markets are firm at the present time, and prices have a strong tendency to advance. Pork products continue to move upwards, and also sugar. There is no explanation given for the last advance in the price of sugar. The refiners this week sent the price up ten cents per hundred pounds on all grades. This brings extra standard granulated past the five dollar mark. Dealers report a good demand for beans, and there is a probability that the price will go higher.

The marked scarcity of hogs is given as the reason for the continued advance in the price of pork products. Barreled pork has been increased $2 per cwt. this week, and lard is half a cent higher.

An advance is also looked for in the price of tea. Some of the dealers claim that they have been losing money for some time, and that there will be a general advance of five cents per pound. To the wholesalers the advance will probably be about two cents per pound. Some small shipments of New Brunswick potatoes arrived here this week, and they sold for $1.75 per three bushel bag.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 24, 1910.

There are few changes in general prices, those of butter, eggs, sugar, etc., remaining the same. One brand of bacon is being offered in special 100-lb. lots at 25c, which is a vast difference from the regular 29 cents. It was pointed out by a retailer to-day to The Canadian Grocer that the retailer, the man who makes the least on turnover, is the one who suffers most because of the high prices. He has to shave pretty close to enable the consumer to keep on buying and gets the brunt of it when the consumer falls off.

Asheroft potatoes are hardly to be found. The price of potatoes is now $35 a ton, and at this figure lower mainland tubers are offered. These are not supposed to be as good as the kind grown in the dry belt. Commission men are blamed in some instances of selling green stuff to Chinese peddlers, who hawk it about the city, thus interfering with the trade of the regular merchant. It used to be that the Chinese peddler grew his own green stuff, but the city is big now and the demand is much greater; moreover, the population is spreading out over the land where the Chinaman used to have his gardens, so the commission men are resorted to. And here again the retailer gets hit.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Charlottetown, Feb. 24, 1910.

The mild weather and scarcity of snow has had a strong tendency to weaken trade this season, but in most cases business has been up to the average and prices on all farm products have been ruling pretty high. Pork has been exceptionally high this season. Prices have been creeping upward almost weekly, 10½c being paid now for light weights and 10c for heavy. Only limited quantities are offering at present.

There has been an unusually heavy supply of butter this winter, due largely to the mild weather and prices have not ruled as high as usual, although farmers are realizing even larger sums of money for this product on account of the increase in production. Eggs have been scarce and high but larger receipts are reported now with a falling market.

In the line of groceries the following lines are firm: beans, canned peas, raisins, flour and bran.

THE MONEY IN POULTRY.

In referring to the lack of care in handling eggs for the market on the part of the farmer, Jno. A. Gunn, Montreal, pointed out in a recent speech that the loss in this regard amounted to 17 per cent. of the entire production of Canada. This amounted in Canada to $1,850,000, a deplorable state of affairs which was to be easily remedied if the industry was intelligently studied. To demonstrate the possibilities of egg and poultry producing, the speaker presented the following table showing the estimated profits in several departments of farm life:

Poultry	239 p.c.
Milch cows	95 p.c.
Fruits	88 p.c.
Wheat	31 p.c.

A wonderfully extensive market throughout the world is open to Canada as soon as poultry raising is taken up by farmers in an intelligent manner. Great Britain alone imports over $5,000,000 worth yearly. Canada's inability to furnish a liberal and continuous supply has cut Canada off completely from serious competition with other countries.

RETAILERS ARE INVITED.

Toronto, February 24.—The Wholesale Grocers' Exchange have extended an invitation to the retail grocers of Ontario to have representatives attend their annual convention which is to be held in Toronto about May. They also intend to invite the manufacturers and producers of food stuffs. They have the idea that arrangements could be arrived at which would be in the interests of all parties, the manufacturer or producer, the wholesaler, the retailer and the consumer.

This is certainly a move in the right direction, and should meet with hearty approval of all grocers. It is felt by all organizations that the time has come when the efforts of association work must extend beyond their own limits, and find the true relations between the different industrial interests. The manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer are so intimately connected, and constitute such a complete system that their relation to each other must be clearly defined and worked out, in order to give the best service to the consuming public. The exchange intends setting apart a whole day for the discussion of subjects directly affecting the retail trade.

TO GET ADVERTISING READ.

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 23.—The local Bradley grocery is conducting a novel prize contest, the object of which is to stimulate by indirect means the interest of the public in the firm's newspaper advertising. The contest was inaugurated last week, and is explained by the following extracts from the announcement:

"Beginning with this advertisement which appears in both daily papers and continuing until March 5th, 1910, both dates inclusive, every Bradley advertisement you can secure will be valuable and worth saving.

"Clip them as they appear each day—ask your neighbors for the copies from their papers—then send or bring them to Bradleys with your name and address plainly attached to each bundle—each bundle to contain not more than five advertisements.

"To the person securing the largest number of Bradley advertisements dated from Feb. 17th to March 5, 1910, inclusive, we will give a cash prize of $5 in gold. To the person securing the second largest number of Bradley advertisements as above, $2.50 in cash. To the next five persons securing from the third to the eighth largest number of Bradley advertisements as above we will give to each a pound of our special Ceylon Tea at 28c per pound."

Inferior Eggs Being Mixed with the New Laids

Some People Doing This Wilfully — English Bacon Market Weak, But Canadian Hog Prices Advance — Butter Market Considered in Good Condition—Steady Market in Cheese.

Hogs this week have recovered again from last week's drop, and are at the highest point. The receipts are light and packers would like to handle more, even at a small margin, which would help to reduce the cost of manufacturing. The market in England is weak, with a liberal supply from Denmark. Canadian bacon runs from 64 to 67 shillings.

The Eastern Canadian butter market has been considerably relieved from its anxiety, caused through several large sales of stored creamery butter going to Vancouver. The butter situation may be considered in a normal condition, with fair receipts from the creameries and dairies. The English market is at present at a standstill. The buyers feel that the limit had been reached and are looking for cheaper butter. The sellers, however, are making a stiff fight and will not yield to the buyer's ideas. The large receipts from Australia and New Zealand, however are regarded by the buyers as strong forces to move it their way.

The cheese market is buoyant and Canadian cheese finds ready sale in England, netting from 12½ to 12¾c a lb. The stocks of Canadian cheese are variously estimated, but at any rate the cheese situation is considered in good condition.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—There is a good steady business, but the market is not strong in any particular line. Lent is again blamed for it and no doubt there will not be any distinct revival until after this period is over. No change in prices.

TORONTO.

Provisions.—One packer this week, on being asked about the hog situation, said that he did not care to express himself as he felt about it, and the question was at once withdrawn. Hogs are up 50c a hundred again this week and then it is hard to get them. One packer made the remark that where they used to export 12 to 14 cars of cured meat, they now export only one. The local demand, however, is satisfactory, and it is claimed little affected by Lent. Prices are all unchanged this week, and while those quoted below are practically correct there are a few special brands of bacon which bring as much as 23c a lb.

Butter.—There is still altogether too much butter which is of an inferior quality. In making a close inspection we are led to believe that the farmers are not alone to blame. Some boxes arrive from merchants in the country, which contain different makes and yet have all the same undesirable taint. This is evidently owing to careless handling in the store. Stores that carelessly stock all sorts of goods from smoked herring to coal oil are not fit places to keep so delicate an article as butter. Surrounded by such odors which are readily absorbed by the butter, has much to do with the quality of the butter which reaches the market. There is, however, some which is badly made and to do justice to themselves and the customers who make good butter, merchants should, one would think, make a greater difference in the prices. The demand for better goods in all lines is growing, and this is especially so in butter.

Eggs.—New laid eggs are coming in more freely, but dealers find a great deal of trouble with old stock being mixed with them. It is not a mistake, but is done wilfully. CALENDARS FOR 1910.

A new idea in calendars is to be found in the calendar of The Snap Co. It is for a desk or mantle being in the shape of a small picture frame with a prop behind the frame. The scene on the front is that of two blacksmiths beside the anvil who have stopped their labors temporarily to look out of the window on a pretty country landscape including an automobile passing along the road. The front is not of cardboard but of embossed metal in a dull finish imitating sterling silver. The calendar is on the lower right hand corner, the months being on separate pieces of card which slip in and out of a small frame.

No Grocery Store Odors to Injure Confectionery

Reasons Why the Grocery is Superior to the Drug Store for Such a Department—More People Enter the Former and Antiseptics in Latter Deteriorate Flavor — A Hint on Buying Candy.

The grocer who does not handle confectionery now-a-days is missing a splendid opportunity to make a good profit with little labor.

The are many reasons why this is so but the following cited by a confectionery manufacturer should appeal to those who do not, as well as assist others who do in confectionery sales?

1. Practically everybody who goes out shopping calls at the grocery store because that is where the necessaries of life are obtained.

2. If the confectionery in the store is displayed properly the attention of everyone who enters the store is attracted by that department.

3. The grocery store is free from any odors such as antiseptics which are necessarily to be found in the drug store and therefore the confectionery retains its flavor in the former to a much greater extent than in the latter.

4. By always having a uniform flavor a particular brand creates a continuous demand, the same as a particular brand of tea and coffee would.

5. The cost of doing business in the confectionery department is so little that the percentage of profit on the net cost is practically the same as on the net cost plus cost of doing business.

6. The addition of an attractive show-case for confectionery adds considerably to the general appearance of the store.

7. The percentage of profit is probably greater than on any other article that can be handled in the grocery store.

With these facts in view the manufacturer's contention that grocers should handle confectionery is a quite plausible one.

The fact that the grocery store is to be found first of all in a new district is proof of its necessity. The drug-store is one of the last to enter. Everybody needs the grocery but not the drug store, therefore the greatest demand will necessarily emanate from the former because more people enter it.

The argument against the depreciation of the flavor of candy in the drug store is well taken. It stands to reason that the various odors in the drug store are going to injure the flavor of any article susceptible to odors—and confectionery is one. In a neat, clean sanitary grocery the candy department cannot fail to appeal to the lover of good candy. No person cares to spend money on an expensive chocolate which is tainted with the odor of antiseptics. Uniformity of flavor is therefore more difficult to obtain in the drug store than in the grocery.

The cost apart from the net cost of handling confectionery is reduced to a minimum once the department has been established. A cleanly-kept silent salesman does the work with an occasional window display. There are no particular seasons for it—it sells the year 'round—and consequently needs no particular attention at any one time.

Buying in Small Quantities.

Care in buying is, of course, necessary. Stocks should not be too large at any one time so that it will cause difficulty, due to staleness, in making sales. A merchant who buys his requirements in small quantities and who buys frequently will not likely lose custom from offering old goods.

Then the general appearance of a store that has a handsome show case containing attractive boxes of confectionery is worth something in creating a good will, and last, but not least, the profits on candy are more than "worth the struggle."

The Flour Market Liable to Move Higher Soon

Although English Market is Weaker Canadian Millers Claim Prices Here are too Low Compared With Wheat—Demand for Cereals Good with Prices Holding Firm.

Millers have been looking for higher prices of flour for the last two months, but are still selling it at about the same. On the whole the markets of the world with all the little fluctuations have moved very little from a given point.

In England the markets this week are weaker, and sales are made at a slight reduction, but the grain men here pay little attention to it and are looking for an advance.

The regular orders for flour from customers are repeated at the same prices and the trade is moving along, although at a margin not quite satisfactory to the miller.

RUMOR AND CONTRADICTION.

Talk About a Flour Merger Still in the Air.

During the week there have been additional rumors in connection with the reported flour merger mentioned a couple of weeks ago. Enquiry was made at Montreal from Robt. Meighen, Lake of the Woods Milling Co., but he had no additional information apart from the fact that Western Ontario millers were interested. Reports in Toronto connected the name of C. B. Watts, Board of Trade Building, with the merger, but he informed The Grocer that there was nothing to it so far as he was concerned. He referred to a bill in the House of Commons at the present time respecting the Dominion Millers' Association requesting some extra privileges and scorned the idea that members of parliament should consider it an attempt to form a merger.

"If millers wanted to form a merger," he said, "they would not have to go to parliament: they could do it in the regular way by applying for a charter."

So far, therefore, as Mr. Watts is concerned there is no flour merger.

A Grocer subscriber has sent in the following pun on the rumored flour amalgamation: A good flour merger with plenty of water would make "dough" (for the promoters.)

FROM COUNTY OF ORIGIN.

In gauging the volume of trade between the West Indies and Canada, says the West India Committee Circular, much difficulty has hitherto been experienced through Canadian goods being shipped via the United States when the ports of Canada are icebound. To obviate this, new Customs entry forms have been introduced in British Guiana, containing space for the insertion of the names of the country of origin or manufacture of goods from abroad. This has been helpful, but unless the production of certificates of origin is made compulsory, or until an alteration is made in the form of declaration now used on import entries, the system must necessarily still be imperfect. The Controller of Customs in his report for 1908-9 shows that the proportion of the colony's trade with the Dominion receded to 6.85 from 7.73 in the preceding year. The aggregate trade with Canada fell to 22.60 p.c. from 28.82 p.c. in the preceding year, owing to the quantity of sugar exported being less by 15,103, or 17.2 p.c. than in 1907-8. On the other hand, the United Kingdom and the United States both increased their aggregate trade with the colony during the year.

I WAS reading this morning a business paper, Brother Grocer.

And came across an article claiming that "Straight Thinking" is the basis of Success.

Said that the Average Man attains only Average Success because he thinks like his competitor.

Same knowledge, same ambitions, doing the same thing in the same way, offering same inducements.

Went further and said to resign from the Society of Average Men you must differentiate yourself from your competitors.

If they think poorly and YOU think expertly, the market is YOURS!

Sounded mighty good to me, Brother Grocer.

TWENTY-ONE years agone we began making FIVE ROSES Flour.

Then we got hungry for more business, developing quite a healthy appetite and the digestion of a cannibal.

Feeling exactly as you do, Brother Grocer.

But competitors were a shrewd bunch and made good stuff.

So we scratched our dome of thought earnestly and vigorously —adopted the best machinery, annexed the best millers, corralled the cream of wheat-buying experts.

And behold FIVE ROSES at the top of the heap.

All through "Straight Thinking."

Opposition copied the brand, the selling plan, even the style of advertising, you know.

"They copied all they could follow, but they couldn't copy our mind;

"And we left them sweating and stealing a year and a half behind."

THINK OF the selling advantages of FIVE ROSES Flour.

Read the FIVE ROSES ads. for the selling points, in city dailies and your own local weeklies.

You don't have to think out the selling talk—we have done it for you.

Stock FIVE ROSES soon, Brother Grocer.

You get YOUR profit before we do, you know.

Think expertly—beat the average.

Resolution Passed Endorsing Present Bread Act

Members of Toronto R.G.A. do not Want the Standard Weight Loaf—Address on Co-operative Bill and Criminal Code—Trade Relationship and Cost of Doing Business Discussed—Necessity of Buying Carefully.

Toronto, February 24.—"Resolved that this association unanimously endorses the present law in reference to the Bread Act and that copies of this resolution be forwarded to all the Toronto members of the Ontario Legislature."

The above is a copy of a resolution passed by the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association at their regular meeting on Monday night, with president D. McLean in the chair.

The members present considered it a fair act, suitable to them and to their customers and therefore did not desire any change.
